Textile Union Orders End of Strike

CALLS WORKERS BACK TO LOOMS BY TOMORROW

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The giant strike which has taken a toll of 14 lives and thrown 400,000 persons out of work for three weeks flickered out today.

The United Textile Workers of America today ordered the strike called off immediately. Union leaders instructed all workers to return to their looms Monday morning.

Basis for the strike settlement was the four point plan suggested by President Roosevelt's special board under Gov. John G. Winant of New Hampshire. Strike chieftains today voted unanimously to call off the walkout while the Winant plan is put into effect.

Sends Wire to Unions.

As soon as the executive council of the United Textile Workers, after a four hour session, had voted to accept the President's proposals and end the strike, Francis J. Gorman, head of the strike committee, dispatched the following telegram to all local union chapters:

"By unanimous vote of the executive council your heroic strike ends in complete victory as of tonight. Full reports will be mailed at once to all local unions. Our triumph is one of the greatest in all labor history and your officers salute you and congratulate you.

"Return to work Monday morning as orderly as you walked out, conscious of having won your rights, and determined to maintain the same fine discipline displayed in battle. Now bend all efforts everywhere to complete organization of every worker in the industry."

Employers Are Reticent.

George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile institute, withheld comment tonight on Gorman's announcement.

Asked whether operators would take back the strikers "without discrimination," as requested by President Roosevelt, he said he would speak for the industrialists when he knew their views.

He cited his Friday night statement, however, in which he said "the President is fully justified in his belief that this industry will give most sincere consideration to any program which he proposes."

Cotton mill executives in the south, he said he was informed, have read only newspaper summaries of the Winant report. Upon learning this, he added, he sent them its full text, but with the industry operating on a five day week nearly all the mills were closed.

Consequently it will be Monday, Sloan said, before two-thirds of the mills see the text. He called this unfortunate.

Hopes for Permanent Setup.

Peter Van Horn, chairman of the silk code authority, who announced Friday he was recommending to silk manufacturers that they take back workers without discrimination, commented:

"I am hopeful that out of it may come an end of the strikes that have torn the industry for many years. I hope we will be able to form a permanent structure for an amicable future in the textile industry."

With the exception of the control of the stretchout, none of the peace proposals is regarded here as victories for the union, which has embroiled industry for almost a month in a bloody, costly strike. The union's action amounted to abandoning the walkout without having forced the industry to "recognize" it as the spokesman for all mill employés and without any assurance it will get the wage increases it was seeking.

Unionists Exult.

In the meantime unionists were exultant over what they claimed was a victory for their strike in the President's plan. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, and Frank Morrison, secretary of the A. F. of L., both attended the ceremony staged when Gorman dispatched his telegram to all local unions ending the strike.

Gorman, in his report to the executive committee of the United Textile Workers, boasted particularly that "our strike has torn apart the whole unjust structure of the NRA, lifting

Columbus, O., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Blazing guns of the law today ended the life of one more John Dillinger gangster and wounded another. The two convicts were thus foiled in an attempt to duplicate their late chieftain's "wooden gun" escape from the Crown Point, Ind., jail.

Facing electrocution, Charles Makley and Harry Pierpont, charter members of the Indiana outlaw's gang, led a break from the Ohio penitentiary's death row. They got out of their cells, released seven other condemned convicts, and cowed two guards by brandishing deadly looking "pistols" ingeniously fashioned with soap and pieces of jig saw puzzle.

Makley Fatally Shot.

But a prison riot squad refused to be bluffed and promptly mowed down the Dillinger lieutenants with high powered rifles. Makley was fatally wounded, dying within an hour. Pierpont was wounded in the head and near the spine, but was returned to his cell five hours later.

The elaborate precautions taken by Warden Preston E. Thomas ever since Makley and Pierpont were brought here were credited with dooming the gangsters' bid to uphold the Dillinger boast that no jail was strong enough to hold them.

The two desperadoes had been condemned to die in the electric chair for the slaying of Sherif Jess L. Sarber last Oct. 12, when they freed Dillinger from the Lima, O., jail. Dillinger had helped deliver them shortly before from the Michigan City penitentiary.

Pair Releases Clark.

Russell Clark, who accompanied his pals when the sherif was killed, drew a life sentence for his part in the slaying. He was one of the seven released from his cell by Makley and Pierpont, having been confined in "death row" because of his reputation as a dangerous man.

The prison alarm bell sounded its ominous warning of trouble shortly after 10:30 a. m. At the time Warden Thomas was conferring with newspaper men about a letter sent to Prisoner George Paullin more than two years ago by Bruno Hauptmann, German alien held in the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

A riot squad, always in readiness as part of the emergency system, rushed to the "death house" as the bell signified that was the scene of the trouble. Carrying high powered rifles, the eight squadmen flung open a steel door, which Makley and Pierpont had been trying to batter down.

Flourish Soap "Pistols."

"Stand back! Stick 'em up!" Makley and Pierpont shouted almost simultaneously, flourishing their realistic appearing "pistols."

The guards' answer was a blast from their guns. Both Dillinger men spun to the floor. The other liberated convicts dropped back in a panicky attempt to get out of range.

The break had been smashed within a few minutes after its beginning. When order had been restored and additional guards deployed through the institution penitentiary officials learned how it started.

Pierpont, one of the toughest outlaws in the Dillinger gang, had launched the attempt when Guard O. E. Slagle brought some food to his cell. Another guard, C. W. Pfarr, was seated on a table within the "death house" confines, while a third guard, J. T. Jones, was in a small room separating "death row" from the main cell block.

Pierpont Slugs Guard.

"Pierpont told Slagle he didn't feel well and asked the guard to get him some salts," Deputy Warden J. C. Woodard related. "As the guard turned away from the cell door, Pierpont hit him with his fist and said, 'Give me that key.'

"When Slagle refused, Pierpont struck him again and took the key away from him. He then produced his 'soap gun,' marched down the cage, and unlocked Clark's door. They then opened all the cells and turned loose the other seven men in the death house.

"Makley came out with a small soap 'automatic.' Pierpont had a soap 'revolver.' Aiming their 'guns,' they backed Slagle and Pfarr toward the steel door behind which Jones was fortified.

"They broke a big table into pieces

FRIENDS OF JOHNSON SAY HE'S THROUGH AS NRA ADMINISTRATOR

New York, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The New York Herald Tribune, in a special dispatch from Washington tonight, asserted that friends of Gen. Hugh S. Johnson said he was "through" as national recovery administrator.

Gen. Johnson, the dispatch says, returned to Washington Friday night after an absence of several weeks, but did not go near the NRA then or today.

"The White House records showed that since the general left the capital, President Roosevelt for the first time has been dealing directly with his subordinates in the NRA," the article continues.

"President Roosevelt, in a conference with Gen. Johnson at Hyde Park on Sept. 10, left him in no doubt that his reorganization plans for the NRA did not contemplate the general's continuance as administrator.

"Whatever the technical situation at the close of that conference, Gen. Johnson's colleagues in the NRA were given to understand that he was, to all intents and purposes, 'out.'

"Whether he actually resigned or was asked to resign they declined to say.

"Thereupon, to use the words of Gen. Johnson's colleagues, Gen. Johnson 'disappeared' for three days. Upon his reappearance, he made his attack on organized labor in a speech at Carnegie hall, New York, to a gathering of 3,000 representatives of New York code authorities."

2 WOMEN BALK 3 GUNMEN, SAVE HOSPITAL'S $500

Two young women employés of the John B. Murphy hospital, 620 Belmont avenue, misled three young gunmen attempting to rob the institution yesterday, saving $500 in a safe in an adjoining office.

Miss Virginia Kodie, 20 years old, 2541 North Hamlin avenue, a cashier, and Miss Mae Liska, 25 years old, 2720 Clifton Park avenue, a pharmacist, were confronted by the robbers.

"Where is the money?" one of the bandits demanded, after searching the empty cash drawer.

"It was taken to the bank," Miss Kodie said.

Without examining the place further the bandits left.

Fraud Charges Hit 20 Bankers in Minnesota

Moorhead, Minn., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Warants for the arrest of E. W. N. Decker of Minneapolis and 19 other persons who were directors of the Northwest Bancorporation were issued in Clay county District court tonight. The warants charge grand larceny in the second degree and swindling.

Attorney General Harry Peterson, representing the state in federal court when the Northwest Bancorporation vainly sought an injunction to stop the state's investigation of its stock sales, has charged that the concern sold 1,600,000 shares of stock, of which more than 900,000 shares were sold to approximately 11,000 investors in Minnesota.

The warrants were issued by Judge Anton Thompson on the complaint of Herman Bosshard of Moorhead.

Bancorporation Itself Named.

The Northwest Bancorporation itself is named in the two complaints in addition to the 20 other defendants, all of whom are either officers or members of the executive committee of the concern.

The 19 individuals, in addition to Decker, are:

Theodore Wold, F. T. Heffelfinger, John Crosby, W. A. Durst, Alex Highland, R. E. MacGregor, W. C. Sharp, Oscar Mitchell, George P. Tweed, Isaac S. Moore, Albert C. Cobb, H. D. Thrall, Ford H. Hovey, David R. West, J. Cameron Thomson, John S. Pillsbury, George D. Dayton, Garner B. Perry, and W. A. Brockman.

The swindling charge carries a penalty of not less than two years nor more than five years in the state penitentiary or fines of not less than $200 nor more than $2,000.

Claim Newspapers Used.

The larceny penalty under the law is not more than five years or not less than one year in the county jail, or a fine of not more than $500.

The allegation in the swindling complaint is made that one of the "tricks" was "to make use of various large newspapers of general circulation in the state of Minnesota and particularly the Minneapolis Journal and Minneapolis Tribune."

Elmer A. Benson, Minnesota state banking commissioner, tonight explained that issuance of the complaints against many officers and directors of Northwest Bancorporation in no way affects local officers or board members of banks affiliated with the chain and in no way affects solvency of the banks.

Investigation of Bancorporation's stocks was launched last November at the suggestion of Gov. Floyd Olson. It was inaugurated under the supervision of Mr. Benson, at that time state securities commissioner and now state banking commissioner. Hearings were held from time to time by the state commerce commission, composed of Banking Commissioner Benson, Paul Skahen, present securities commissioner, and Garfield W. Brown, insurance commissioner.

ZION CHIEF BATTLES SAVAGE MEPHITIS TO DEATH IN ZINNIA BED

Chief of Police Earl Casperson of Zion had an encounter last night with a savage Mephitis mephitica.

This Mephitis mephitica has been scaring the citizens of Zion for some weeks past. People would see the creature prowling about in their back yards, but by the time police could be summoned it would vanish.

That it was trapped at all was due to Mrs. Charles G. Upp of 2708 Emmaus avenue. She sighted the beast right in the middle of her zinnias at the rear of the house and called for Chief Casperson.

He arrived, and, sure enough, there was the beast. Chief Casperson advanced on the Mephitis mephitica with a drawn gun. Little did he know that the best authorities advocate an umbrella in battling Mephitis mephitica.

Chief Casperson fired. The Mephitis mephitica fired back. Chief Casperson staggered but did not fall. He fired again. The Mephitis mephitica collapsed, mortally wounded.

"It was a skunk," he said later, "and I had to bury my uniform. Scientists can call it a Mephitis mephitica if they want to, but it smells just the same!"

BULLOCH YACHT, ISSUE IN DIVORCE, GOES AGROUND

The 76 foot yacht, Indexograph, owned by George C. Bulloch, owner of the Indexograph company, 209 West Jackson boulevard, ran aground in the Detroit river last night, according to dispatches from Detroit. The coast guard report was that the accident was due apparently to the incompetence of the crew.

A man who identified himself as Bulloch was aboard and told the guardsmen that he was taking a yachting trip as his vacation.

Bulloch was sued for divorce by his wife on last Aug. 17, and at that time Mrs. Bulloch asked a court order to restrain him from disposing of the yacht or any of his other properties. Columbia Yacht club officials stated that as a result, the boat is in the hands of the United States marshal.

[Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.]

New York, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Mrs. Anna Hauptmann, wife of the prisoner accused in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, declared tonight that neither she nor her husband knew George Michael Paullin, Ohio convict, alleged to have received from Hauptmann a code letter saying he intended to kidnap the Lindbergh baby.

Mrs. Hauptmann also asserted her husband had called for her at a Bronx restaurant late on the night of March 1, 1932, when the child was abducted and that he could not have been in New Jersey.

Weary and gaunt after working almost continuously sixty hours in an effort to clear her husband, Mrs. Hauptmann sat in a downtown office and told about the case.

Informed she had given an interview, the Hauptmanns' attorney, James M. Fawcett, New York, declared "she had nothing to hide."

Story of Suspect's Wife.

Mrs. Hauptmann's story, as she told it, follows:

"As I left the Greenwich street police station Thursday night a horde of people screamed, closed in about me, and I thought for a moment they would kill me.

"The detective who accompanied me sheltered me and rushed me into a nearby restaurant. The maddened mob, continuing to shout 'There she is,' followed me to the door of the restaurant and sought to batter their way to get a better look at me or perhaps to lay their hands on me.

"I was dumbfounded. Here were work-a-day people like myself shouting, so it seemed, for my blood.

"This came after twelve hours of gruelling terror.

"Like Horrible Nightmare."

"As I sat in the Greenwich street police station, while they questioned my husband in a separate room, I was utterly numb. It seemed like a horrible nightmare.

"As they led my husband from the room I leaped up to embrace him. One of the officers brushed me aside.

"Earlier in the afternoon one of the detectives had come up to me and demanded: 'You tell the truth. Your husband has already said that you know all about the money. He told me that you know Mr. Fische had given him the money.'

"I answered: 'That is a lie. My husband would never say such a thing. He knows that I know nothing about the money.'

"Since then the entire world seems to have gone crazy. Some newspaper headlines have called my husband 'kidnaper' and inferred that he is a 'murderer.'

"There has been comparison between my husband's handwriting and the handwriting of the so-called 'Lindbergh kidnap notes.' Even a blind person could see that there is no similarity.

Sees Assumption of Guilt.

"Gradually it seems the world is taking for granted the guilt of my husband in this horrible affair, without having been given the opportunity to hear a coherent statement from either him or myself.

"Thank God, I can at last explain.

"As conviction that my husband is guilty seems to deepen, people fail to look back for proof of some of the horrible statements made by sensationalists throughout the world.

"New names have been introduced some as 'accomplices' of my husband,

KIDNAPING PLOT CODE LETTER IS LAID TO SUSPECT

Officers Search for Woman in Case.

THE CODE NOTE

The strange code note signed "Bruno" and received by a prisoner in the Ohio penitentiary shortly before the Lindbergh kidnaping appears on page 2.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

New York, Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh tonight announced in a long distance telephone call to authorities here that he will come at once from California to aid in the prosecution of Bruno Richard Hauptmann in connection with the kidnaping and murder of the colonel's infant son, two and one-half years ago. It was assumed Lindbergh would fly east. The airplane he flew westward last week was removed from the hangar and refueled.

District Attorney Samuel J. Foley said that he planned to take Col. Lindbergh before a grand jury next Wednesday morning. He will begin the presentation of evidence against Hauptmann Monday and ask for an indictment charging the ex-convict with the extortion of $50,000 ransom from Dr. John F. [Jafsie] Condon, who acted as Lindbergh's agent.

A series of revelations today combined to weave more closely about Hauptmann the web of circumstantial evidence indicating him as the writer of the kidnaping and ransom notes, the collector of the ransom, and as guilty of the kidnaping itself.

Plot Message Revealed.

From Columbus, O., came a story quoting the warden of the Ohio state penitentiary as saying that a convict there George M. Paullin had received a letter signed "Bruno" before the kidnaping with a code message "will kidnap Lindy baby."

The hunt for Hauptmann's accomplices continued at a furious pace, the investigators being convinced that Hauptmann must have had confederates. The search extended to Germany because of the connection with the case of Isadore Fische, who died in Leipzig last March.

It was disclosed that Fische paid for his steamer passage with gold certificates which were a part of the ransome money.

Search for Woman.

The search in New York centered upon a woman who was reported to have been seen with Hauptmann on various occasions.

This woman is believed to be the one encountered by Dr. Condon the night of April 2, 1932, when he handed over the $50,000 ransom money to a mysterious "John." Dr. Condon said that as he approached the rendezvous a woman said, in passing: "Keep walking," which he construed as directing him to the cemetery where the money was paid over.

The phlegmatic man of 34 years who is the center of the investigation continued to insist upon his innocence despite a verbal battering which has been almost incessant since he was taken into custody last Wednesday morning. His stoicism broke under the strain late today and he wept at times, but he did not change his story that he received the money from Fische.

Inspector John J. Sullivan revealed that he had cabled instructions to Detective Arthur Johnson of the New York police department, who has been in Vienna on the Poderjay case, to begin an investigation at once into everything connected with Hauptmann and Fische in Germany. A suspicion has been voiced that Fische may have been murdered and an autopsy may be performed to determine if he was poisoned.

Uhlig Is Questioned.

Henry Uhlig, a friend of both Hauptmann and Fische, who accompanied the latter on a trip to Germany late in 1933, was questioned at length today. Both Uhlig and Fische paid in part for their steamship tickets with gold certificates.

District Attorney Foley declined to make public any information about the case except in the form of answers to written questions. But most of his answers were of the "I don't know about that" type, and many details of the inquiry were withheld.

It was learned, however, that a Mrs. Max Hinkle, a blonde, termed by "a friend of the Hauptmann family" had been quizzed at length.

"But Mrs. Hinkle's testimony was of no particular significance," he commented, "It was the examination of another woman that led to important developments."

He refused to explain the nature of the "important developments." He parried questions concerning whether the connection of a woman in the case had been established.

The possibility that a federal indictment might be sought against Hauptmann was indicted when Frank X. Fay, in charge of the department of justice investigators here, visited U. S. Attorney Martin Conboy. Fay said it was possible that such action might be taken.

New Defense Lawyer.

A new attorney, James M. Fawcett, brother of a Brooklyn Supreme court justice, was retained by Mrs. Hauptmann for her husband and the attorney issued a statement which indicated an early line of defense for the defendant.

"This case will be taken care of with regard for the law and with the proper respect for the feelings of the complainant, Charles A. Lindbergh," the statement read.

"The defendant and his counsel will coöperate with Samuel J. Foley, district attorney of Bronx county, in endeavoring to clear up this mystery and to apprehend the real culprit in this case.

"Information makes me believe that the defendant has spent only several hundred dollars of the ransom money consisting of gold certificates within the last few weeks, which money he received from Fische, who placed it in his custody along with a bundle of clothes without informing the defendant that there was any money in the bundle.

"I don't believe he is the real culprit."

Jersey Waits on New York.

New Jersey authorities continued to mark time on a decision to extradite Hauptmann for the kidnaping and murder, watching the New York authorities proceed on the extortion case. District Attorney Foley asserted he had a "perfect case" against Hauptmann as the author of all the kidnaping and ransom notes. He voiced this belief after handwriting experts had declared they could give a "most positive" expert opinion that the prisoner wrote all the notes.

The district attorney had announced that he expected to have an auditor's statement of the brokerage account that Hauptmann maintained in Wall street but he announced tonight that the investigation in this direction had not been completed. Officials of Steiner, Rouse & Co., the brokerage concern, continued to maintain silence about the account which is said to have gone as high as $25,000 at one time.

Wife Questioned Again.

Mrs. Hauptmann was recalled for questioning about the Fische-Uhlig angle of the case. She quoted Uhlig as having told her that while in Leipzig Fische had purchased thousands of dollars worth of furs.

Prosecutor Foley finally declared that both Fische and Uhlig were apparently innocent of any connection with the kidnaping. He said he believed Hauptmann was using Fische as a scapegoat because he was dead and could make no denials.

In disclosing that Fische gave a number of gold certificates, a part of the ransom money, in payment for a steamship ticket to Germany, police said that the agency which received Fische's gold certificates kept them as souvenirs until two months ago, when they were deposited in a New York bank.

Fische Gets Passport.

Fische obtained a passport May 12, 1932, the date on which the Lindbergh baby's body was found. He booked passage to sail on the Leviathan July 19, 1932, but later cancelled the reservation.

Fische next returned to the agency, accompanied by Uhlig, on Aug. 18, 1933, and made a $300 deposit for transportation on the Manhattan. A purchase of $600 worth of reichsmarks was made by Fische on Nov. 14, 1933, and he sailed on the Manhattan Dec. 6 of the same year.

The persistent belief of the investigators that there is a woman in the case was based upon several factors.

"No man would risk moving a baby through the countryside without a woman to aid him and to divert suspicion," said Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan. "A woman must also have been provided to care for an infant."

Hauptmann was given a few hours' sleep early this morning and was then taken from his cell for a renewal of the persistent questioning to which he has been subjected.

Hear Hauptmann Sobbing.

Hauptmann's iron composure was broken for the first time late this afternoon. His loud sobbing could be heard in the corridor outside the closely guarded room where he was being questioned. Reports immediately spread that he had confessed, but these were officially denied by police.

Two women figured prominently in the earlier portion of the case, one being Violet Sharpe, the maid in the Englewood home of the family of Mrs. Anne Morrow Lindbergh. Violet Sharpe committed suicide after the baby had been found dead. The other woman was Betty Gow, the Scotch nurse who cared for the child. She was the subject of a very thorough inquiry, which resulted in her being cleared. Only a short time ago she left the employ of the Lindberghs and returned to Scotland. She is there now. Officials here have not said whether they would request her to return to the United States to look at Hauptmann, or in any other way aid in the revivified case.

Dr. Condon expressed the belief that at least three persons were involved in the kidnaping and that one of them was a woman. He also suggested that Fische might have been murdered and suggested that an autopsy be performed on the body. Fische is buried at Leipzig, Germany.

Traced to Lumber Yard.

A search of the records of the Great National Millwork and Lumber company, to which the boards used in constructing the kidnaper's ladder were traced, disclosed today that Hauptmann worked there ten days before the baby was taken. He came back a week after the kidnaping and worked two days but never returned after that.

The records produced by Joseph Hirsch, member of the firm, showed that Hauptmann was employed as a skilled worker, but sporadically.

"Hauptmann could have picked up the lumber for the ladder but he would have had to pay for it," Hirsch said. But the records, he admitted, would not show the name of the buyer in such a small matter.

The significant nature of this evidence was that Hauptmann was absent for a period of 17 days, from Feb. 19 to March 7, during which period the baby was stolen.

Believed "Key Man."

While continuing in a belief that there were other persons implicated in the kidnaping, the authorities are certain that in Hauptmann they have the "key man" of the case. His stoicism under examination has only convinced them the more that he was a leading figure in the plot. A detective with a flair for the picturesque has already christened the prisoner the "granite man." His imperturbability under fire seems to reveal a cold and calculating mind hardly in character with his portrait of himself as a poorly educated, common working man, and his history in Germany indicates that he was possessed of criminal instincts at an early age.

One question the investigators want answered is whether Hauptmann had any contacts in the home of the Lindberghs at Hopewell, N. J. A source of information concerning the layout of the house would seem to have been essential to the kidnapers.

The servants in the home who were working there at the time of the abduction are being questioned to determine whether any of them might have been connected with Hauptmann or can furnish any information about him.

Stranger's Visit Recalled.

A watchman who guarded the home while it was being constructed told shortly after the kidnaping of the visit of a stranger who wanted to go through the house and see just what it was like. The request was refused. This watchman, Theodore Kutchiak, after viewing pictures of Hauptmann, said that he is inclined to believe that his visitor and Hauptmann are the same man.

Meanwhile, there was additional evidence in the form of expert opinion that Hauptmann wrote the ransom notes. Albert S. Osborn, one of the foremost handwriting experts in the country, made a formal report definitly calling Hauptmann the writer.

Commenting that he compared the writing in the ransom notes to a dozen specimens of Hauptmann's writing, Osborn reported: "I think the evidence is clear and unmistakable and sufficient in amount so that a most positive opinion can be given."

Handwriting experts in Washington had already arrived at a similar conclusion. It seemed possible that these conclusive opinions might speed New Jersey's efforts to extradite Hauptmann for trial on charges of murder. District Attorney Samuel J. Foley of New York has promised to release Hauptmann to New Jersey authorities as soon as they are confident they have a strong case against him. Otherwise, the prisoner would first go to trial here on the extortion charge.

Waldorf-Astoria Clerk, 25, Confesses $5,400 Theft

New York, Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The monthly audit of the books of the Waldorf-Astoria hotel led today to the arrest of a clerk on a charge of having stolen $5,400 in cash from the office safe last July 2. The prisoner Thomas F. McKenna, 25, confessed to stealing the money and spending it "for a good time," according to detectives.

SAY HAUPTMANN WROTE CONVICT OF KIDNAP PLOT

Ohio Warden Bares Code Note to Prisoner.

Columbus, O., Sept. 22.—(AP)—A startling disclosure, further linking Bruno Hauptmann with the Lindbergh kidnaping case, came from behind the walls of Ohio penitentiary today.

Preston E. Thomas, veteran warden of the prison, was authority for the sensational statement that one of his prisoners, George Michael Paullin, alias George Paul, had received a code letter from "Bruno" late in 1931 or early in 1932 stating that "Will kidnap Lindy baby. Hope for me."

Text of Code Letter.

The code used was the second word of each sentence, the convict said. The letter read [with second words in black type]:

"I [will] write you a few lines today to let you know that all is well. Old [kid] how I wish you were here with us. A [nap] is taken by Mildred every afternoon since she came from the hospital. Mr. [Lindy] went to Red Bank last week and while skating caught a severe cold and had pneumonia. Old [baby] wish you could have been with us last week as we surely had a grand time. I [hope] everything is going well with you. As [for] me things re not going so good. Oh [me], oh my, [signed] Bruno."

Today Paullin, serving a term for robbery, identified a picture of Hauptmann, held in New York as the receiver of the Lindbergh ransom money, as the writer and inventor of the code letter he received. Paullin has been in the penitentiary since Jan. 25, 1930.

Mentions Lindbergh.

During his association with Hauptmann in New Jersey, the warden said Paullin told him, Hauptmann had mentioned Col. Charles A. Lindbergh as "a good subject for a big touch."

Paullin told his story to Warden Thomas shortly after the letter reached the prison, but when he produced the letter the signature had been torn from it.

The name of Bruno Hauptmann was brought into the case here by Miss Amanda Thomas, Ohio penitentiary mail censor and daughter of the warden. She said "after Hauptmann was arrested in New York I recalled the letter, because of its peculiar wording, and recalled that it was signed 'Bruno.' Other letters, also from Perth Amboy, N. J., were signed 'Bruno' or 'Hauptmann.'"

Prisoner Taken East.

Immediately after he learned that Paullin had a code letter Warden Thomas contacted New Jersey authorities and took the prisoner with a guard to that state.

Officers there, he said, did not appear much interested, and Paullin was returned to the Ohio penitentiary.

Nothing more was thought about his story until Miss Thomas recalled the signatures on letters received by Paullin. Then Warden Thomas told his story to newspaper men.

The warden disclosed further that while in a Newark, N. J., railroad station, waiting with Paullin for a train to return to Columbus, a man and a woman attempted to contact Paullin, but the Ohio prison guard, P. F. Deuber, prevented this. Paullin claims the man was Bruno Hauptmann.

U. S. Agents Called In.

The warden asserted that department of justice agents had been called in on this latest phase of the Lindbergh case, and indicated other persons may be involved in the kidnaping of the famous aviator's son through the story told by the convict here.

Paullin claims he knows Hauptmann well and has associated with him in various New Jersey cities. The prisoner told him, Warden Thomas said, that Hauptmann worked various "rackets" and was associated with him in pocket picking.

Rolling and smoking one cigaret after another, Paullin sat beside Warden Thomas as he told newspaper men of his acquaintance with the German ex-convict and his knowledge of the kidnaping.

"I only wanted to save the life of the child," the prisoner said, in commenting upon a secret but fruitless journey to New Jersey with the warden and another officer when the hunt for the kidnapers was at its height.

Ready to Face Hauptmann.

Other high spots in Paullin's story included:

A declaration that he did not believe Hauptmann intentionally killed the Lindbergh child.

A promise that he will face Hauptmann and accuse him face to face if Hauptmann's inquisitors desire it.

The strange chain of circumstance which Paullin declared linked him, Hauptmann, and the kidnaping of the infant was outlined first by Warden Thomas, a few hours before Paullin was called into the presence of newspaper men to relate the story himself.

The warden read aloud from a statement he had prepared, incorporating the verbatim content of a code letter Paullin had said he received from Hauptmann.

The warden turned from time to time to Paullin, who volunteered his approval of the entire statement.

Paullin credited his failure in the attempt to locate the child to a lack of coöperation between him and New Jersey authorities and Col. Lindbergh. He declared he might have been successful if the baby had been alive at the time and providing he had received what he believed proper coöperation.

"I did the best thing I could without wanting to see Hauptmann caught. But they didn't take much stock in what I told them," he stated.

Paullin said the method of writing in code had been proposed by Hauptmann when Paullin was associated with him in New Jersey—in New Brunswick and Perth Amboy where Hauptmann lived.

Fails to Find House.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 22.—(AP)—George Paullin, Ohio state convict, who claims to have received a code message telling of plans to kidnap the Lindbergh baby some weeks before the crime, spent 24 hours in the vicinity of Perth Amboy and New Brunswick in an attempt to find a house where he said the two kidnapers resided.

"When he got here," Maj. Charles H. Schoeffel, assistant superintendent of the state police, said today, "he told our investigators two men were responsible and that he could find the house [where they lived] near New Brunswick or Perth Amboy.

"We drove him around for about 24 hours and he did not identify it."

Schoeffel said the code message was "never produced here, but information given us was that it was unsigned."

HAUPTMANN ALIBI MAN'S STRANGE DEATH STUDIED

Probe Rumor of Fische Murder in Germany.

[Copyright: 1934: By the New York Times.]

LEIPZIG, Germany, Sept. 22.—The identity of Isidor Fisch [spelled Fische in American], mystery man from whom Bruno Hauptmann claims to have received the Lindbergh ransom money, was established today. It was discovered a man of that name died at St. George hospital here on March 29, this year. Fisch was 29 years old and was listed as a naturalized American citizen with a New York address.

According to reports made to the hospital and the American consulate at the time, Fisch returned from America in December, 1933, with another man whose name was given as Henry Uhlig, supposed to be an Englishman.

Rumor He Was Murdered.

Fisch was delivered to the hospital on March 27 in a critical condition and died two days later. There were and still are rumors afloat he had been murdered. Hospital authorities readily gave all information available about the case except the cause of death on the ground they were bound by professional secrecy and could reveal that only with the permission of the dead man's family or the courts. The death certificate submitted to the American consulate, however, stated Fisch died of tuberculosis of the lungs.

Fisch was born on July 26, 1905, at Mockau, near Leipzig. His father, a brother and a sister are still living in Leipzig and are engaged in the fur business. None of his relatives could be reached today but it is quite obvious they are living in rather poor circumstances. They are Jewish Polish citizens.

Spoke of Leaving Money in U. S.

The American consulate's attention was drawn to the case in July by Isidor's sister. She told Assistant Consul Patrick Mallon her brother had spoken of having left money in America and inquired as to the best way of going about recovering it. Mallon asked for details and documents which she promised to submit, but failed to do so. After waiting some time, Mallon took up the matter on his own initiative, visiting the family and also checking up official records of the case.

Since the family was Polish he advised it get in touch with the Polish legation in Washington or the Polish consulate in New York. No document proving Fisch's American citizenship could be found, but at the police registry his identification paper is stated to have been an American passport No. 497022 issued in Washington May 14, 1932.

Arthur Johnson New York detective now working on another case in Vienna, is expected to arrive here by plane tomorrow. He is expected to investigate whether Fisch revealed anything about the Lindbergh case to his relatives and also whether any Lindbergh ransom money possibly found its way to Leipzig or Kamenz, where Hauptmann's mother is still living.

HUSBAND, WIFE ARE KIDNAPED BY AN EX-CONVICT

Oakland, Cal., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Kidnaped as they started to enter their home garage in Glendale late last night, Mr. and Mrs. R. O. Stratton were released about 1 o'clock this afternoon by a man who forced them to drive to Oakland.

Mr. and Mrs. Stratton were not harmed. They immediately went to the police station here and told their story.

Stratton said the kidnaper first forced them to drive around Glendale until they reached Wilson street between Jackson and Isabelle. There a bullet-riddled car was parked. They were told to stop. The kidnaper went to the other car, took out several guns, and climbed into the Stratton machine.

"We gotta get to San Francisco," he ordered.

A general police alarm was sent out in hopes of intercepting the kidnaper, who had told the Strattons he was a fugitive from Illinois and was to meet in the San Francisco bay region another ex-convict from Illinois.

No Clew to Missing Girl.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 22.—(AP)—The fate of 6 year old Dorothy Distelhurst, who disappeared Wednesday afternoon on her way home from school, remained as much a mystery as ever tonight while her parents awaited some word from the supposed kidnapers.

Although police reported they have found no clew and the possibility remained that the child may have been killed accidentally by train or automobile, the parents held to their theory that the girl was kidnaped as an act of vengeance or to obtain ransom.

OFFERS ALIBI FOR HUSBAND

WIFE MAKES A DRAMATIC PLEA FOR HAUPTMANN

Says He Was with Her Night of Kidnaping.

names with which for the most part I am utterly unfamiliar.

"This is my explanation of developments as I see it:

"On Wednesday morning I had just finished bathing our little baby, Manfried, 11 months old, and I had taken him out in the yard for the sunshine. I saw a man standing on the corner looking queerly at me. His arrogance made me angry.

Asks for Her Name.

"He came over and said gruffly: 'What is your name?'

"I thought: 'What business is it of yours,' but I told him: 'I am Mrs. Hauptmann.'

"He asked me: 'Where is your husband?'

"I said: 'Why, he went to work.'

"Then he took me upstairs and I went into our apartment to find a great number of men—I don't know how many—standing around; and, on the bed, sat my husband as though he were terribly upset. He had been arrested on his way to work.

"I asked: 'Richard, what is this?'

"He did not answer, but one of the men said: 'Never mind, you'll find out pretty soon.'

"I went over and held my husband and asked him: 'Did you do anything wrong?'

"He said 'No.'

"I said: 'Tell me if you did anything wrong.'

"Spirit Seemed Crushed."

"They took Richard away and, as I saw him enter the car, he looked like an utterly broken man. His spirit seemed crushed. It looked as if the entire world were aligned against him. That was about 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

"I asked permission to go down into the yard to see my baby, who needed me. The police let me go down. I found my neighbor, Mrs. Schuesler, had taken my baby.

"I went back upstairs and got dressed, and sent for a woman relative and at about 3 o'clock Thursday I, too, was on my way to the Greenwich street police station.

"I do not wish to remember, much less speak, about the horrible experience in that dismal, gloomy place.

"I have already told about my leaving Greenwich street police station, and the crowd screaming, so it seemed, 'crucify him.'

Tells of Questioning.

"After I had had a bite to eat I was taken to the Bronx county courthouse. I was questioned there, in the district attorney's office, by four men, including Mr. Foley, the district attorney, who was very nice to me.

"Meanwhile they had ransacked every nook and cranny of my home even the baby's room was not left untouched—a closet which Richard had made for the baby had been gone through and all the tiny belongings were strewn over the floor.

"To get back to the district attorney's office, I had only a few minutes talk with Richard. I said: 'Richard, tell me the truth. What is it all about? How did that money get into our garage?'

"Richard replied: 'You remember Isadore? Isadore Fische, who left for Germany last December? Just before he left Isadore came to me and said 'Keep that box. Put it somewhere for me until I come back from Germany.'

"Later on he brought bundles of clothing to my husband, at our home to keep for him until he, Fische, returned from Germany.

She Describes Fische.

"Isadore Fische was about 28 years old. He was a little, thin man, clean shaven, blacked haired, and weighed about 128. He never looked any one straight in the eye. He lived at 149 East 127th street in a furnished room.

"I talked with Mr. Fische several times in 1932. My husband did not go into the fur business until 1933. That is all I know about Isadore Fische.

"He told my husband that he sold and bought skins and kept them in a warehouse. My husband later found out that Isadore was a liar and that there was no business at all—but this we learned only after Isadore had died in Leipzig in March of this year.

"At the time Isadore Fische brought the box, Richard just threw it on top of an old closet and let it remain there and forgot about it. A few weeks ago it rained very hard; water had soaked down through the closet into the shelves and the floor and even the box.

Says He Found $14,000.

"For the first time, at the district attorney's office yesterday, Richard told me, that when he was cleaning up the shelves he remembered the money. He took the box down and counted the money and, he told me yesterday, there was about $14,000. He was so upset, as he told me yesterday, that when he found so much money in the box, he didn't know what to do. He said he took the money and put it away for safe-keeping.

"After he had been in business with Fische, he told me, that he had found out Fische had cheated him in their business. His loss, he said, was about $7,000.

"When he found this money, he felt that, now that Fische was dead, he was entitled to his loss.

Unable to Sleep.

"I tried to sleep but couldn't. Later in the day I went again to the Bronx district attorney's office.

"Today I again saw Richard in the district attorney's office.

"In the meantime, I had found out that the kidnaping had occurred on a Tuesday. I know that every Tuesday and Friday in 1932 I had to work late and Richard always called for me.

"I asked him how he was treated and he just looked at me. He asked about the baby and said he felt all right but he worried so much about me and the baby. I tried to cheer him up.

"He said: 'Don't you remember Annie, at the time of the kidnaping, I was working in New York City as a carpenter and I read about it in the morning newspaper when I went to work?'

BAD TEAMWORK HINTED IN LINDY CASE ON CONVICT

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—(AP)—The first hint of a lack of coöperation between the New Jersey state police, the New York City police, and the department of justice in the Lindbergh kidnaping investigation came tonight when government officials indicated that the New Jersey state police had withheld a portion of their information on the case.

This indication came after authorities confirmed news from Columbus, O., that a convict professing to have information on the Lindbergh case had told his story of having been taken to New Jersey without being given an opportunity to disclose his evidence there.

Takes Data on Fische.

The justice department meanwhile took over from both the state and labor departments all data on both Isadore Fische, who died in Germany last March, and Henry Uhlig, a close friend, held for questioning today in New York.

State department officials imposed strict censorship on any word regarding representations to Germany. A request was known to have gone to the reich, however, that the activities of Fische be investigated.

On the word of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, arrested suspect, that Fische had given him the ransom bills before the latter left this country last November, the scientific criminal laboratory of the justice department investigated all records furnished by other federal agencies.

Fische Master Mind?

The possibility that Fische, plagued by tuberculosis, might have been the master mind in the case, was one of the speculations considered. Outwardly, at least, officials did not place great weight upon this theory.

Although following all leads, the opinion was held in the office of Attorney General Cummings that while others probably were involved, Hauptmann still stood as "the key man" in the case. Nevertheless, one official said:

"There are a lot of things we have yet to learn."

BLOOD FOUND ON 15 OF LINDBERGH RANSOM BILLS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Fifteen of the Lindbergh ransom bills recovered by the department of justice were stained with blood, the New York News learned exclusively tonight. The blood marked gold certificates were not a part of the $13,750 discovered in the walls of Bruno Richard Hauptmann's garage but had trickled in from parts of upper Manhattan and the Bronx during the last two months.

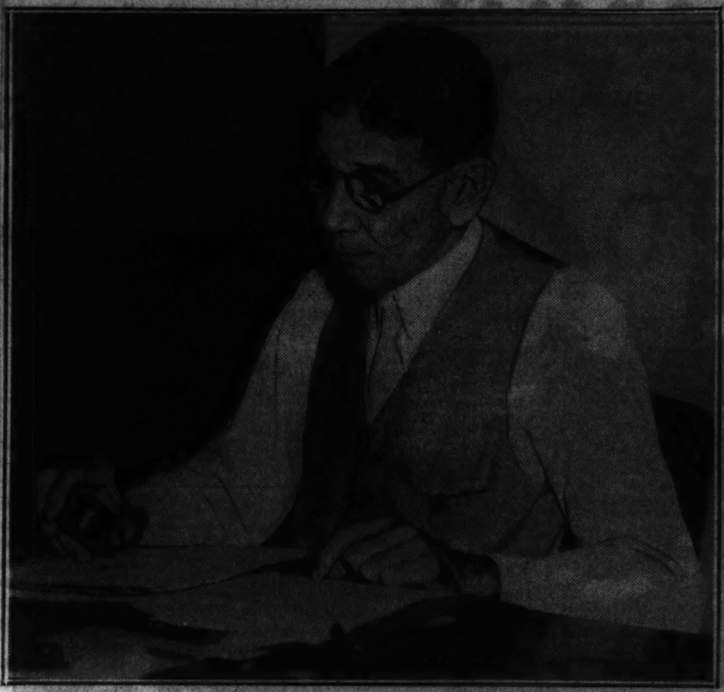
Experts of the department of justice, the New York police and the New Jersey state police have examined the crimson splotched banknotes, but can only guess at their obvious significance. There is far too much blood, they decided, to be explained by a cut finger or trivial accident.

The almost unanimous conclusion is that at least two persons started to divide the spoils, quarreled over the split, and violence resulted.

State's Attorney's Police Raid Silver Slipper Again

More than a hundred patrons of the Silver Slipper dance hall at 3945 South Harlem avenue, Stickney, were sent away from their merry-making last night when state's attorney's police raided the place and arrested the owner, Anton Molchoir, 35 years old, of 2140 South Harvey avenue, Berwyn. Police said the place had been closed on several occasions because it was being operated without a license.

HIS TIP PROVES ASTUTE



Long before the Lindbergh ransom money was paid, B. C. Farrer, handwriting expert in the United States treasury department, examined notes demanding $50,000 and said he believed the kidnaper was a methodical German carpenter. He based his conclusion on study of notes. The arrest of Bruno Richard Hauptmann, then, was no surprise to Farrer, shown at his desk. [Associated Press Photo.]

LIST WITNESSES FOR HAUPTMANN EXTORTION CASE

New York, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Besides Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, District Attorney Samuel Foley announced tonight, witnesses before the Bronx county grand jury in connection with the case against Bruno Richard Hauptmann would include:

Dr. John F. [Jafsie] Condon, who paid $50,000 ransom to supposed kidnapers of the child.

Col. Henry Breckinridge, attorney and close friend of Col. Lindbergh.

John Perrone, taxi driver who identified Hauptmann as the man who gave him a note to deliver to Dr. Condon.

Walter Lyle and John Lyons, gasoline station attendants. Suspicious of a $10 gold certificate given to him by Hauptmann, Lyle took the license number of his automobile, enabling authorities to trace him.

Gregory F. Coleman, reporter for the Bronx Home News, who was associated with Dr. Condon.

Three employés of the stock brokerage house which prepared package of ransom money for Col. Lindbergh.

High police officials of Manhattan and Bronx boroughs.

Foley said that there might be other witnesses, but that these were the only ones as he was prepared to announce tonight.

FREE YOUTH IN THEFT ATTEMPT.

James Laksich, 19 years old, 1310 North Artesian avenue, was freed of a charge of attempted robbery yesterday. Judge Lambert K. Hayes in the Boys' court declared identification insufficient, but fined Laksich $200 for disorderly conduct to keep him under court supervision.

SOUVENIR HUNTERS FORGET LONELY HOME OF LINDY IN WOODS

Hopewell, N. J., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Forgotten by the curious public which two years ago stripped it bare in zeal for souvenirs, the lonely, desolate spot where the body of little Charles A. Lindbergh Jr. was found today has regained its natural appearance and is hidden to most people by shrubs and grass.

After the discovery of the body thousands of motorists flocked to the place on the side of Rock Mount Rose hill. They tore away bushes and shrubs, they ripped foliage from the trees, they pulled up the blades of grass and picked up stones, some even took away small portions of the earth—all to have a "remembrance" of one of the world's greatest tragedies.

When they finished, and it did not take many weeks, there was only naked, scarred earth within a radius of 25 feet.

But the public forgets, and in two years the grass has reappeared, shrubs have resprouted, and only few persons can find the spot so securely has it been hidden by the dense underbrush.

The place is remote, a mile out of the village on the Princeton-Hopewell road and not within sight of any house.

WOMAN IS FOUND DEAD.

Mrs. Eva Henniges, 66 years old, was found dead in bed yesterday morning in her home at 1829 Fremont street. Death was believed due to heart disease.

Mystery Youth Enters Quiz Into Slaying of Headmaster

Northfield, Mass., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—With all clews exhausted here, for the present at least, concerning the murder of Dr. Elliott Speer, head master of Mount Hermon school, detectives turned toward Wayne, Pa., where some slight hope was held for the solution of the crime in the arrest there of a 17 year old boy on a charge of vagrancy.

Tells Conflicting Stories.

After the youth had told conflicting stories, now saying he was John Wyatt of Worcester and later that he was John Heath of Tennessee, he said he knew two students at Mount Hermon who possessed 12 gauge shotguns of the type with which Dr. Speer was slain. The names were wired here and although the two boys were questioned, no progress was made in the case.

However, police here are hopeful that Wyatt or Heath can throw further light on the slaying and have asked Wayne police to continue to hold him. He told the police there that he had tried to matriculate at the school here, but had been refused entrance.

Says Son Is Missing.

The boy at Wayne at one time declared that his father was W. Lester Wyatt, lawyer of Worcester and Mr. Wyatt is now on the way to Wayne. Before he left he said that his son was missing, but that while he had talked about going to the Mount Hermon school he had never gone there.

During the day 100 CCC, attached to the Erving camp, near here, continued to search the woods near the school campus for the shotgun believed used by the murderer.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22.—(AP)—The population of the St. Charles School for Boys has been reduced 48.7 per cent in four years with a consequent saving to taxpayers of $228,467.10 annually.

A. L. Bowen, state director of public welfare, who made this announcement today, attributed the decrease in the school's population to the work being done in the prevention of juvenile delinquency throughout the state.

Numerous organizations throughout the state, the director said, coöperate in the big brother movement which was credited with bringing about the decrease.

"The salaries of the men doing big brother work," he said, "range from $1,200 a year to $50,000, yet these men find time to contact their boys at least once a week."

FILM STARS FIND IT'S THE THING TO LEARN TO SING

Hollywood, Cal., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Nearly everybody in motion pictures who has any sort of voice is taking vocal lessons. There is an increasing demand in Hollywood these days for stars who can sing, at least as well as a movie hero or heroine might be expected to sing.

Even many of those who sing are taking more lessons. Dick Powell hurries his lunch for a daily lesson. Elissa Landi continues her studies with Nina Koshetz. Experts have discovered that Mary Borland, who has been burlesquing singing, really has a fine voice.

Virginia Bruce has disclosed a fine singing voice and Mae West is surprising her teachers. Spencer Tracy will sing in his next starring vehicle, "Helldorado," and whether the singing masters will hear it with pride or alarm remains to be seen.

LONG TIME WORK RELIEF IN CITIES ASKED BY MAYORS

Urge Roosevelt to Back Public Works Program.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 22.—(AP)—The executive committee of the United States conference of mayors on unemployment relief today made its recommendations to President Roosevelt. Members of the committee are F. H. La Guardia, mayor of New York; Daniel W. Hoan, mayor of Milwaukee; C. A. Dykstra, city manager of Cincinnati; T. S. Walmsley, mayor of New Orleans; Paul V. Betters of Chicago, director of the conference; Frederick W. Mansfield, mayor of Boston; Watkins Overton, mayor of Memphis; Harry L. Davis, mayor of Cleveland; M. C. Ellenstein, mayor of Newark.

Here Is Text of Report.

The report to the President follows:

"It is the conclusion of the executive committee of the United States conference of Mayors, after comparing conditions in the various cities and studying all available data, that the country is reaching a new normal level. Granted an improvement in conditions of today, the present number of unemployment cannot possibly be entirely taken care of by industry, agriculture and business for some years to come. It therefore becomes necessary to think in terms of a long time program which will meet what is called "the unemployment problem."

"The unemployed may well be divided, for the purpose of fixing the responsibility of their care, into two classes: those people able to work but unable to find employment and those mentally, physically or otherwise unfit for regular gainful employment.

Must Create Employment.

"The latter have been and should continue to be the charges of the state and local communities [except men disabled in the military or naval service, which always has been a federal responsibility]. The permanently involuntary unemployed, by reason of changed conditions, must be cared for under an established system, supervised by the federal government. It is recognized that owing to the great number of workers who cannot be absorbed, employment must be created and found for them.

"We, therefore, believe that it is necessary to establish a permanent federal relief fund, preparatory to the creation of a nation wide system of unemployment insurance. Under this plan insurance benefits would be administered by the federal government and all current financial requirements would be secured from current revenue.

Urge Work Relief Fund.

"This permanent unemployment work relief fund and program should include the following features:

"1.—It should include all workers of all types.

"2—The governments, federal, state, and municipal, should draw upon those benefited from the fund for work on public work relief projects.

"3—Such benefitted persons should be paid prevailing wage rates up to the amount of the determined benefits.

"4—The United States should be divided into regions for the purpose of fixing weekly benefits in accordance with the regional costs and standards of living.

"5—General administration and supervision of the plan and fund should be the responsibility of the federal government.

Provision for Material.

"With regard to the immediate situation confronting us, it is imperative that the work relief program of the federal government be continued and expanded if the welfare and morale of our people are to be maintained. We recognize that work relief must be given immediately to all employable persons now on relief. Our studies force us to conclusion that the real purpose of an immediate work relief program will fail unless there is adequate provision for costs of material as well as labor costs.

"We further recommend that where possible there should be effected closer coöperation with regard to selection and administration of work projects between the municipal governments and the relief authorities. In this connection we are of the opinion that many persons could be profitably placed at work in the field of governmental social services.

Enact Long Term Program.

"This expanded work relief program should be carried out until such time as the congress of the United States enacts into law a permanent long term program in accordance with our primary recommendation.

"We have from the outset of our conference and still do hold steadfastly to the belief that the best stimulus to recovery is a federal public works program promoted on such a scale as to make an impact upon private industry. Such a program not only lessens the burden of relief, but provides the method by which the cities and states of the nation can be enriched by the expenditure.

"The nation is confronted with a severe shortage in housing which is being augmented very rapidly by the failure of building operations in this field. There is not only need of a general demolition and rebuilding of our slum areas, but we must also provide for low cost housing to help those not otherwise able to either acquire or gain possession of a home. In neither field has private capital in the past nor in the present been able to operate. All other modern nations have been compelled to attack this problem as a social undertaking.

Ask U. S. to Finance Program.

"We suggest financing and general supervision of such a program by the federal government as offering one of the best means of employing labor and stimulating business.

"Second in importance is a provision for the finanacing of self-liquidating public works. The only obstacle to the promotion of such enterprises in large numbers by local governments and states is the difficulty of obtaining immediately the funds required to commence operations now.

"Next in order in the great field of public construction are those public facilities such as schools, public buildings and so forth, from which the locality derives no direct revenue. Finally we suggest that many localities are prepared to promote in a major way the abolition of present street crossings over railroads and interurban lines at grade, if only they can be financed.

"Such a public works program as is here outlined can proceed without straining the credit of the federal government or of the cities by the initiation of a fiscal policy which will allow cities to use their full available credit resources in combination with the financial agencies of the United States. At the same time such a program will lessen the interest burden now resting on local governments.

"In connection with the unemployment problem, which is in many respects largely an urban problem, we recognize that by providing work and wages to our unemployed persons we shall expand the markets for our great agricultural population. The only market for our agrarian workers lies in the direction of increased purchasing power of city groups.

"We appreciate the coöperation which the federal government has extended to the municipal governments and we pledge a willingness to coöperate in the development of this program which has for its ultimate goal the solution of the problem."

PWA LIAISON OFFICER.

Paul V. Betters, of Chicago, who has served as chairman of the committee to study national unemployment, is secretary of the United States conference of mayors and executive director of the American Municipal association. He formerly was with the Brookings institute. Last year he was appointed liaison officer between the Public Works administration and the municipalities of the country.

BUSINESS LEADERS IN NEW YORK ACT FOR TAX ON TRANSIT FARES

New York, Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Convinced that the relief program recently adopted by the municipal assembly will prove inadequate, leading business organizations today prepared another drive for a tax on rapid transit fares.

A careful study of the trafic on rapid transit lines, as well as on surface car and bus routes will be made, it was ascertained today, so that reasonably accurate estimates can be had of the income to be expected from a tax on fares.

POWER COMPANY LOSES SUIT.

Eau Claire, Wis., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—A jury in Circuit court here today returned a verdict for $1,816 in favor of the Delpo corporation and the L. U. S. FARMERS WIN 1ST COURT FIGHT IN DRIVE ON JAPS

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 22.—(AP)—American farmers, seeking to eject aliens from Salt river valley agricultural lands, won their first court victory today when Superior Judge Marlin T. Phelps made permanent an injunction enjoining the S. A. Gerard company, fruit growers, from "aiding or abetting aliens in gaining possession" of land.

The injunction restrains the Gerard company from permitting "the farming, possession, and enjoying of land" by 13 Japanese aliens.

GIVE UP HOPE FOR 100 WELSHMEN TRAPPED IN MINE

Flames and Poison Gases Halt Rescuers.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WREXHAM, Wales, Sept. 22.—After a day of frantic efforts to rescue 100 miners trapped by an explosion and fire in Gresford colliery hope that the men might still be alive was practically given up tonight. Rescue workers, heroically braving death by poisonous gases which poured from the pit and by flames which still were raging tonight, were unable to penetrate the death trap.

Sixteen bodies were recovered during the day. Two rescuers were overcome and carried to the surface, where they died. Numerous other rescue workers were overcome by the fumes, but are recovering after hospital treatment.

400 Periled by Blast.

About 400 men were in the mine when the explosion occurred at 2:30 o'clock this morning, nearly two miles from the mouth of the pit. Nearly 300 of these escaped. The explosion is believed to have been caused by crossed electric wires.

Word of the tragedy spread rapidly and great crowds assembled at the mouth of the mine. Volunteers were called for to descend into the shaft. Those picked for the rescue squads were armed with bags of sand, stone dust, and chemicals. It was impossible to fight the flames with water because of their great distance from the surface.

The rescue workers found it impossible to penetrate far into the mine because of the clouds of poisonous gas. Adding to the difficulties, huge rocks crashed in the mine after the explosion, barring the paths of the volunteers.

Rescue Worker Tells Horrors.

John Jones, one of the rescue workers, said conditions in the mine were appalling.

"We are using chemical extinguishers, lime and sand in an effort to penetrate as far as possible into the burning section," he said. "Progress is very slow. I do not think there is much chance for my mates. Falls from the roof have occurred all along the roadway leading to the entombed men and have filled tunnels to half their height."

Pitiful scenes were enacted at the mouth of the colliery. Wives and children of the trapped victims wept and prayed in a driving rainstorm as the futile rescue efforts went on.

One of those in the crowd, Albert Chesters, saw the bodies of his father and a brother brought up. Three other brothers are missing. Chesters said his father had worked in the mine all his life and last week had talked about retiring.

H. Dennis, managing director of the colliery, after a consultation with the chief inspector of mines, tonight issued the following statement:

"The latest report is that the fire is being overcome. It may be that some of the men will be found still alive, and in this hope no effort is being spared, but in any event the death roll will be heavy."

The colliery, which is owned by the United Westminster and Wrexham Collieries, Ltd., is one of the most up to date in north Wales, being furnished with all the latest equipment. The second largest mine in north Wales, it employs more than 2,000 men.

A larger number of men than usual were in the mine last night because they were football fans. A game was to have been played today and in order to be free to witness it many of the miners chose to work through the night.

King George and Queen Mary sent a message of sympathy from Balmoral castle to the lord lieutenant of Denbighshire, the county in which the mine is located.

NEW DEAL FATE UP TO SUPREME COURT THIS FALL

Nine Justices Reconvene on Oct. 1.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The United States Supreme court will reconvene on Oct. 1 for an eight months' session of incalculable import to the future of the republic.

Before the court recesses next June it will have rendered decisions determining the fate of the New Deal, revealing whether the American nation is to endure in the form conceived by it founders or is to be remolded permanently in the fashion already temporarily effected by the New Dealers. And, as some jurisprudents have suggested, the decisions will determine whether the very court itself is to endure, at least as a final arbiter of legislation.

Assembling for the last term in their old capital chamber, while their new 9 million dollar marble temple over the way is nearing completion, nine black robed old men will take their places on the bench in an atmosphere vibrant with the drama of great causes of human conflict and elemental forces at play behind the scenes.

Four Are Conservatives.

The drama will silently unfold around the division of the court, and its bearing upon the question whether the New Deal is to be wholly accepted, wholly rejected or partly embraced and partly spurned. Four of the nine elder statesmen are conservatives, congenitally opposed to the novel departures from the established order inherent in the New Deal. They are Associate Justices Willis Van Devanter, James Clark McReynolds, George Sutherland, and Pierce Butler.

Three are liberals whose opinions have revealed them to be hospitable to the interpretations of the constitution favorable to many of the objectives of the New Deal. They are Associate Justices Louis D. Brandeis, Benjamin N. Cardozo, and Harlan F. Stone.

Occupying a position between the two groups is Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts and holding the balance of power when Justice Roberts votes with the liberals is Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes.

Four Eligible to Retire.

With the prospect of the fate of the New Deal resting on divided opinions, not improbably five to four, the drama is heightened by the fact that there are four justices eligible to voluntary retirement on full pay. Their passing from the tribunal would enable the President to constitute a court overwhelmingly committed to the Roosevelt revolution. They are Associate Justices Van Devanter, 75; McReynolds, 72; Sutherland, 72, and Brandeis, 78.

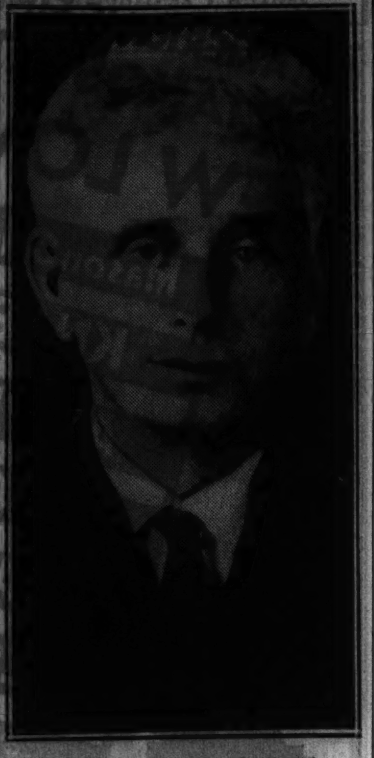
But none of them is going to exercise the right to retire after the age of 70 and ten years' continous service. In addition to feeling physically and mentally competent for the work of the tribunal each one deems it a patriotic duty to stick to his post and vote his convictions in this critical period for the welfare of the country.

A sensational turn has been given to the unfolding story by the revelation that Justice Brandeis may have disqualified himself to participate in decision of the New Deal cases through having had a hand in the formulation of the New Deal legislation.

Brandeis Reports.

Throughout the two sessions of the Seventy-third congress it was whispered about Washington that Justice Brandeis was guiding the framing of the NRA, the AAA, and other bills establishing the major institutions of the New Deal; that he was being freely consulted by the New Dealers and was giving advice on the casting of the legislation in such form as to bring it seemingly at least within the limitations of the constitution. The New Dealers were reputed to be confident that the bills they framed with the aid of Justice Brandeis would "get by" the Supreme court when the test of constitutionality should come.

CALLED ADVISER



JUSTICE BRANDEIS.

At the time these reports were current THE TRIBUNE correspondent sought to learn from Justice Brandeis whether they were well founded. The secretary to the justice carried the correspondent's inquiry to Mr. Brandeis and returned with the reply that the justice would not depart from his rule never to answer questions propounded by the press.

Thus the secret was kept until last week, when Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, chief of the NRA, let the cat out of the bag in his New York speech.

In Touch with Brandeis.

"During this whole intense experience," said Gen. Johnson, "I have been in constant touch with that old counselor Judge Brandeis. As you know, he thinks anything that gets too big is bound to be wrong. He thinks NRA is too big, and I agree with him. I don't know whether dividing it up in this fashion will satisfy his idea or not, but I want to make one thing very plain, and that is, whatever reorganization there is at NRA will be worked out by the President and no one else."

Although Justice Brandeis continues to decline comment, Gen. Johnson's statement is accepted as ample confirmation of the reports that the jurist has been active from the start in guiding the evolution of the New Deal.

It has been an unwritten rule of the Supreme court for generations that it is contrary to ethical considerations and public morals and inimical to justice for a member to participate in the activities of the other two branches of government or otherwise to identify himself with affairs likely to come before the tribunal for adjudication. Not within the memory of living men has there been a violation of this rule.

Will Brandeis Participate?

All Washington, therefore, and lawyers everywhere, are wondering whether Justice Brandeis will participate in deciding the New Deal cases. It is customary for members of the court to withdraw from the consideration of cases involving interests with which they have been identified. Justice Brandeis himself took no part in the decision of cases some years ago involving interests for which he was attorney before he went upon the bench.

It is for a justice to determine in his own conscience whether he is subject to the rule of disqualification. None would be surprised if Justice Brandeis were to stand aside when the New Deal cases come before the court. If not, however, it would be within the right of counsel on either side to suggest in open court that the identification of Justice Brandeis with the creation of New Deal agencies indicates the propriety of his retirement from disposition of the case.

Court May Be Packed.

If the court should hold against the Roosevelt program in the first one or two cases an extremely tense situation would be created, in view of the thinly veiled hints emanating from various New Dealers that the court will be packed if necessary to assure a verdict favorable to their purposes.

In the absence of vacancies occuring through death or retirement the only way to pack the tribunal would be to increase the number of justices from nine to as many as might be deemed necessary to guarantee a safe majority at all times for the New Deal. When the number of justices was increased from seven to nine in 1870 President Grant was accused, unjustly it appears, of seeking to pack the court in order to influence the decision of the legal tender cases.

Congress alone possesses the power to increase or reduce the membership of the tribunal. If an attempt should be made to pack the court it will be for the congress elected in November to acquiesce in or block the move. Through an obedient congress, exercising vast powers over the judiciary, a dictator could virtually snuff the Supreme court out of existence. By law the court might be limited, as Congressman James M. Beck, noted constitutionalist, recently pointed out, to meeting only once every ten years or limited to review of only such cases as involve 10 million dollars or more.

Hughes Bulks Large.

In the light of these possibilities the figure of Chief Justice Hughes, who may hold the balance of power frequently in the decision of the New Deal cases, assumes colossal proportions on the national stage.

If it be true, as Mr. Dooley averred, that the constitution follows the flag and the Supreme court follows the election returns, it will devolve chiefly upon Mr. Hughes to read the omens of the November election.

Those who are best qualified to expound the character, political philosophy and mental processes of Mr. Hughes profess to find in his opinions on cases growing out of recovery measures up to date ample evidence that he is striving to avoid either a Fascist or proletariat revolution and to tide the country over the depression crisis without permanent impairment of its institutions, including the Supreme court itself.

They believe this accounts for his turning of the scales in support of the Minnesota mortgage moratorium, upheld by a five to four decision, as within constitutional limitations, but only in grave economic emergency. If this be the true touchstone of Mr. Hughes' attitude it may reasonably be expected that the court will uphold much, if not all, of the Roosevelt recovery program as an emergency measure only, not as a permanent remolding of our economic system.

FILIPINOS MOVE TO END JAPANESE CONTROL OF LAND

MANILA, P. I., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Charges that Japanese control 90 per cent of the agricultural land in Davao, richest province in the Island of Mindanao, were voiced at the Philippines constitutional assembly today. Delegates urged a proposal to limit leases to five years, saying Japanese held control in the province through long time contracts.

Pantaleon Pelayo, delegate from Davao to the convention, which is drawing up a constitution for the forthcoming insular commonwealth government, asserted members of the legislature, constabulary officers and government officials were involved in a profitable system of leases to Japanese.

Pelayo claimed the leases were camouflaged by various devices. He said Filipinos acquired public land and made overtures to the Japanese for a percentage of the profits.

REFUELING PLANE ON ENGLAND-INDIA HOP BURNS; 5 DIE

Sir Alan Cobham Forced Down in Malta.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 22.—Five persons were killed near Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, shortly after dawn today when an airplane, which had been used to refuel Sir Alan Cobham's plane as he started on a proposed non-stop flight to India, crashed on the main London highway. Flames enveloped the plane as it plunged to the earth. Two of the occupants were an unidentified woman and a child.

The five victims were returning to England when the crash occurred. C. H. Bridges, royal air force pilot, and two mechanics had poured 100 gallons of gasoline in Cobham's ship over the English channel and 20 miles out of Portsmouth.

Cobham Forced Down.

The refueling plane, observers said, had difficulty on the return trip because of stormy weather.

Despite the bad weather, Cobham insisted upon starting on his attempt to hop the 5,300 miles to India in 48 hours. He was forced down tonight on the Island of Malta after his throttle jammed when he was several miles out over the sea.

The Brittish flyer first passed over the island's airdrome at 5:13 p. m. His plane was refueled by another ship piloted by Lieut. Johnson. Cobham circled the airdrome after the refueling and then disappeared in the dusk. A few minutes later the ship reappeared and descended. The aviator had covered 1,800 miles.

Cobham was accompanied on his interrupted flight by Squadron Leader Helmore of the Royal Air Force. One other "aerial tanker" had been stationed near the Persian gulf. The third refueling was scheduled to have taken place at dawn tomorrow.

Karachi Was His Goal.

Cobham had fixed his goal as Karachi, India. The aviator is known as the "pioneer of empire airways." Before taking off he said:

"This is not a stunt flight. My flight is the culmination of two years' extensive and very laborious experiments for the purpose of demonstrating the practicability of refueling while in flight. With the rapid growth of commercial flying on long trans-continental journeys the system of refueling in the air has become imperative."

Makley Is Killed, Pierpont Seriously Wounded.

and tried to smash their way toward Jones, for they had to get past his fortification before they could reach the open cell block. While battering at the door they used Pfarr as a shield from Jones' rifle.

"Looking through his peek hole in the steel door Jones saw what was going on and sounded a general alarm. When the riot squad arrived they lined up and the door was flung open. As Pierpont and Makley poked their false weapons forward, the guards opened fire."

One of the guards, Harold Whetstone, was slightly wounded in the hand by a ricocheting bullet.

After order had been restored and the other convicts returned to their cells, additional guards were called to duty within the walls to forestall more trouble. Outside the walls guards conducted a search in an effort to apprehend any outsiders who might have been waiting to help the gangsters if their escape had succeeded.

The two wounded convicts, who lay where they had crumpled, were taken to the prison hospital. Makley died there. Pierpont exhibited little concern over his wounds.

"O hell," he said to Coroner E. E. Smith, who examined a forehead wound. "That's all right. The bullet isn't in my head. It's only a glancing blow."

Pierpont's Wounds Slight.

He proved to be right, for his wounds, at first believed serious, were found to have been only slight. Makley was killed by a bullet that entered the right side of his body and took a downward course, coming out on the left side.

The soap "weapons" the gangsters used were so expertly modeled that even after the shooting some of the guards insisted they were real. It was obvious that the designers had not only copied their late leader's scheme in using them, but had gained the ability to make them from the wide knowledge of guns learned while associating with Dillinger.

Makley had fashioned his snub nosed "weapon" after an automatic pistol. It was about four inches long and had a hole in the muzzle to resemble that of a real automatic. It even had a hole through which cartridges were supposedly discharged.

Makes Realistic "Gun."

Pierpont's "gun" was even more realistic. It was modeled after a .32 caliber revolver and weighed about half a pound. The chamber had been placed on an axis that turned slightly. Looking at it from the muzzle end the glint of fake cartridges could be seen in the chamber. Wooden pieces of a jig saw puzzle and small bits of tin had been used to reënforce the grips.

It was supposed the convicts had taken soap a bit at a time from the sinks in each of the "death house" cells. Apparently tin foil from cigaret packages had been used to give the instruments their appearance of steel.

The warden's secretary, Walter Kohberger, was so convinced the weapons were real he insisted on biting into one. His teeth sank into the "steel" barrel and he bit out particles of soap.

Amanda Thomas, daughter of the warden and postmistress at the prison, advanced the theory that Pierpont had planned the break because he believed his sweetheart, Mary Kinder, was no longer true to him. She said Pierpont had the "blues" and hadn't written a letter yesterday, which was unusual, because both he and Makley wrote nearly every day.

Appeal to High Court.

Pierpont and Makley were sentenced to die in the electric chair last July 13 for the murder of Sherif Sarber. The execution was automatically stayed by an appeal to the State Supreme court asking for a new trial. The court heard arguments on their appeal last week and took the case under advisement. It is expected a verdict will be given next week.

The murder of Sarber was executed with the usual cold bloodedness of the Dillinger mob. Pierpont, Makley, and Clark walked into the Allen county jail at Lima and announced they were officers from the Indiana state prison and had come to get Dillinger.

Asked for their credentials, Pierpont whipped out a revolver and fired, saying, "Here's our credentials."

They then forced the sherif's wife and a deputy to open Dillinger's cell. In this way they repaid Dillinger for his part in engineering the plot that had freed them and seven other convicts from the Indiana penitentiary a few weeks earlier.

The three gangsters and their leader were captured last Jan. 25 at Tucson, Ariz., after they had blazed a trail of bank robberies through the middle west. Dillinger was taken to Crown Point, where he subsequently made his notorious "wooden gun" escape, and the others were returned to Lima and tried for the Sarber murder.

Clark Gets Life Term.

In separate trials, watche over by National Guardsmen equipped with machine guns, all three were convicted. The sleepy eyed Clark was saved from the electric chair by drawing a life sentence, but the jury ordered the other two electrocuted.

Pierpont swore he would "never sit in the hot chair," and said, when informed of the slaying of Dillinger in Chicago, that he'd willingly trade places with John.

Reporter Describes Break Tried by Two Dillinger Aids

BY R. P. CRONIN JR.

[Associated Press correspondent, who was interviewing the warden on the Lindbergh case at the time of the break.]

[Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.]

Columbus, O., Sept. 22.—(AP)—The desperate Dillinger gangsters made their ill fated break for freedom today from the Ohio penitentiary death house while I was seated in the office of Warden Preston E. Thomas.

As I listened to the warden's recital of a story further linking Bruno Hauptmann in the Lindbergh kidnaping case, a gong in the guard room gave warning of trouble within the prison.

That bell still was ringing when I almost upset a prison official from a chair, grabbed his telephone, and called up my editor, telling him "It looks like two big stories."

Guards Race to Death House.

Dropping the receiver, I ran to the main guard room. Warden Thomas was shouting orders to his men. The emergency squad of guards in the main guard room had jumped to their feet at the sound of the bell. Grabbing their riot guns they raced for the "L" cell block, where the death house is located.

A trusty came in, and as he passed me he said, "They are trying to get out of the death house. The guards have opened fire on them."

This information I telephoned to "my" office and within a minute I sent the flash: "Dillinger gangsters break for freedom but are shot." The outside world knew of the shooting before the guns ceased to bark.

In the prison yard guards forced convicts into their cell blocks. Then out of the "L" block door came a half dozen guards.

Blood dripped from the finger tips of one. He had been shot in the arm by a fellow officer when he got into the line of fire as the riot squad mowed down Harry Pierpont and Charles Makley.

Other guards brought out Pierpont and Makley, the latter fatally wounded. The two were rushed to the prison hospital, where Dr. George Kiel and his aids gave them surgical attention.

Then into the prison office came the guards who had thwarted the bold attempt to escape. One big fellow asked for more cartridges, lighted a cigaret, and returned quietly to his post in the guard room.

Guard Describes Break.

Another told his story to prison officials. He told of the convicts' attempt to batter the inside door with table legs. "Guard J. T. Jones was shouting for aid," he said. "We opened the outside door and then we let loose. Makley and Pierpont went down with the first volley. The other prisoners were herded into their cells and the thing was over."

Then came the story of Chief Deputy Warden J. C. Woodard, who told how Makley and Pierpont, with "guns" fashioned from soap, got loose in the death house and tried to break out. It was a matter of fact recital by a man who has been through this same thing time and time again.

And thus was closed another chapter in the history of the notorious Dillinger gang.

Near Prison at Time of Fire.

Twice within four years the writer has been near by when big stories broke in Ohio penitentiary. Four years ago on an Easter Monday night I was several blocks from the prison when fire broke out in it.

A taxicab carried me to the main entrance and the door guards knew me and passed me into the prison yard.

I reached the scene just as the fire department apparatus arrived, and soon I had telephoned my office of one of the major disasters of our time—the death of 320 convicts in fire and smoke while they were locked in their cells.

EXPECTED BREAK, SWEETHEART OF PIERPONT SAYS

Decatur, Ill., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Mary Kinder, sweetheart of Harry Pierpont, Dillinger gunman wounded today in an attempted prison break at Columbus, O., left here this afternoon for Columbus when informed of Pierpont's injury.

"I was expecting Harry to make the break if the Supreme court upheld his death sentence," she asserted. "He didn't have a chance in the Ohio courts and I guess he preferred that way out to a seat in the electric chair."

Miss Kinder, who also has been lecturing in a carnival show here this week on "Crime Doesn't Pay," was accompanied by her mother and sister.

STARES INTO GUN MUZZLE 7 HOURS; HELPS GET FELON

Oklahoma City, Okla., Sept. 22.—(AP)—After staring into the menacing muzzle of a shotgun for seven hours, Paul A. Vickers, 26, went into action today and caused the capture of Hugh M. Gilley, 21 year old escaped convict who sought refuge in the Vickers home.

Gilley had covered Vickers and his wife, parents of three children, with the weapon throughout the night. About 6 a. m. the gunman dozed.

Vickers sprang upon him, threw the shotgun out a window and battered Gilley with a fruit jar, ironing board, and whatever came to hand.

The intruder, cowed, and bloody, fled from the house into the arms of policemen, rushing to the home after neighbors reported the fight.

Police Officers J. C. Emock and Reg Brandon said the captive confessed he was one of the men who yesterday engaged in four daylight holdups and escaped after a gun fight with police.

A woman, Mrs. Ruby Anderson, 24, was wounded critically in the gun fight, another woman and two men companions escaping on foot.

Vickers said the outlaw spent the night telling his victims of his escapades.

Mrs. Anderson, 24, with a bullet wound through the head, told officers she and her woman companion were picked up by the desperadoes for "a ride" last night. She gave police the names of the woman and the escaped outlaw.

72 CONFESS PART IN PONTIAC RIOT AS 2 ARE SLAIN

20 Prisoners Admit to Leading Roles in Plot.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Seventy-two inmates of Pontiac reformatory have confessed to a part in the rioting Aug. 18 which brought death to two inmates, A. L. Bowen, director of the public welfare department, announced today.

The inmates confessed to participating in a riot and escape plot, Bowen said, that culminated during a baseball game on the prison grounds when a group of prisoners attacked guards, set fire to the prison print shop, and vainly attempted to escape.

Set Fire to Print Shop.

Two inmates were fatally wounded in the rioting, and a number of guards and prisoners injured. The leaders, after barricading themselves in the print shop, set fire to the structure. It burned to the ground while the Pontiac fire department waited outside the gates, unopened for fear of general escapes.

Twenty of the inmates confessed to playing leading rôles in the plot, Bowen stated, and the other 52 merely joined in the plan which included a wholesale escape by the south gate.

"An interesting feature of the plan was the escape by the south gate," Bowen said. "The squad in the south gate tower is one of our crack marksmen, and did much of the shooting that quelled the riot. The boys chose the wrong gate."

Transferred from Joliet.

Bowen said the majority of the prisoners involved in the plot were of a group which recently was transferred to Pontiac from the Joliet penitentiary.

The number of confessions brought a larger number of youths into the case than were thought to be involved in the riot, officials said.

SIX FIRMS ORDERED TO SURRENDER THEIR BLUE EAGLES BY NRA

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—(AP)—NRA today ordered six Blue Eagle removals for code "violations." The firms and charges were:

The Joliet Mantel and Tile company, Joliet, Ill., "for failing to file bid copies with its code authority;"

The Augusta [Ga.] Bag and Burlap company, "for violating minimum wage and maximum hour provisions of the code for the used textile bag industry;"

A. L. Sereni of Philadelphia, "for violating minimum wage and maximum hour provisions of the canvas goods code;"

Lawrence and Oscar Hickerson of Chesterfield, Tenn., "for violating minimum wage, maximum hour, and child labor provisions of the lumber code;"

K. O. Lee & Son company of Aberdeen, S. D., on the national labor relations board's finding it "violated labor's collective bargaining guarantees."

Hugh S. Johnson sent the Aberdeen firm this telegram:

"The national labor relations board has found that you have violated Section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery act by discriminating against Milton Frantz and Hans Christianson because of their organizational activity. You have failed to notify the board by Sept. 18 as required by the board that you offered reinstatement to these employés.

"The board has referred the case to the compliance division. On the basis of the recommendations of the board and of the compliance division you are hearby deprived of the right to display any NRA insignia in any manner."

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 22.—(AP)—A 78 year old man, John L. Kirlin, today became the father of a baby girl here. Both child and the mother, Mrs. Etta Kirlin, 35, were reported "doing nicely." Mrs. Kirlin is the mother of six children by a former marriage.

MANVILLE JR., WIFE SEPARATE; PLAN DIVORCE

New York, Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Thomas F. Manville Jr., only son of the founder of Johns-Manville and heir to a $10,000,000 slice of the Manville fortune was separated from his fourth wife, the former Marcelle Edwards, chorus girl, ten days ago. Divorce proceedings will be started soon, it was learned today.

Samuel I. Hartman of Hartman, Sheridan, Tekulsky & Pecoran, attorneys, has been retained by Mr. Manville to represent him. No reconciliation will be attempted, it was said, but plans for the divorce at Reno or elsewhere will be decided at conferences between Mr. Hartman and attorneys for Mrs. Manville, as yet unnamed.

A public notice appearing in today's newspapers gave the first inkling of the separation. The advertisement read: "I will not be responsible for any debts contracted by my wife, Marcelle Edwards Manville."

Miss Edwards, whom Mr. Manville married on Oct. 8, 1933, was a protégé of Earl Carroll. She left "The Band Wagon" in 1931 to join the chorus of "Vanities." Later she engaged in motion picture work. She was separated from her husband last April, but a reconciliation was effected in June.

Mr. Manville's three other marriages ended in divorce.

Whisky and Truck Taken by Masked Robber Band

Five masked robbers yesterday raided the American Transportation company warehouse, 401 North Ogden avenue, held up a watchman and two other men and drove away with a company truck loaded with whisky and clothing looted from the storage room. Oxenhardt estimated the value of the stolen goods at about $5,000.

TWO POLICEMEN AND TWO BANDITS SLAIN IN BATTLES

Negroes Fatally Wounded by Pursuers.

Two policemen were shot to death in two encounters with Negro robbers in the Wabash avenue police district yesterday. In subsequent gun battles with pursuing policemen, the two Negro killers were fatally wounded.

The two slain policemen were:

LOUIS FURST, 44 years old, died in the Englewood hospital from five bullet wounds incurred when he attempted to frustrate the holdup of a combined real estate office, postal substation, and currency exchange.

THOMAS TORPY, 38 years old, fatally wounded while arresting Clifton Myrick, 27 years old, a Negro, in the latter's apartment at 4733 St. Lawrence avenue.

Myrick was shot five times and captured outside the building by Torpy's partner, Robert Galbraith. En route to the Bridewell hospital in a patrol wagon, Myrick attempted to seize a policeman's revolver, and was shot twice more, fatally.

Escaped Convict Trapped.

The Negro who killed Policeman Furst was identified through his fingerprints as James Franklin, 21 years old, 5330 Prairie avenue, an escaped convict from the penitentiary at Jefferson City, Mo. Franklin was riddled with bullets when he was trapped in a second floor apartment at 5821 Grove street, where he had taken refuge.

Policeman Furst was slain when he attempted to stop Franklin as the latter fled from the H. J. Coleman real estate office at 5857 South State street. There were several customers inside when Franklin entered and asked Byron Bailey, 922 East 62d street, the manager, about an apartment. He waited until the last customer had left, then stepped behind the counter, drew a nickel plated revolver, and pointed it at Bailey and Miss Mary Kowal.

Gets $200 in Cash Drawer.

Ordering them back against the wall, Franklin went through the cash drawer, collecting about $200. The office is used as a postal substation and a small currency exchange.

His actions were seen by Miss Irene Lewan, another employé, who was eating her lunch in a rear room. She ran next door to a restaurant and told Mack Calloway, Negro proprietor, of the holdup. Calloway hurried outside to the corner of 59th and State streets, where Policeman Furst was on trafic duty. Furst ran toward the real estate office, pistol in hand.

Seeing the policeman, Franklin placed his foot against the bottom of the glass door and both fired. Furst's one shot went wild, but the Negro's first bullet struck him in the head. Jerking open the door, Franklin fired four more shots into Furst's body, then turned and ran west across the street.

Takes Refuge in Pantry.

Attracted by the shooting, Policemen John Noonan and Francis Callaghan, cruising in a squad car, and Policeman Carl Nelson, who was off duty, all from the Wabash avenue station, saw the Negro fleeing and gave chase. A detective bureau squad, in command of Policeman Charles McMullen, also joined in the pursuit.

Franklin dashed into a second floor apartment at 5821 Grove street, two blocks west, and told Mrs. Johanna Childress, colored, to "hide me quick, my wife's after me." Brushing the woman aside Franklin took refuge in a pantry as two of the policemen pounded up the front steps behind him. Two others went to the rear, where he could be seen through a window opening on the rear porch.

When Franklin replied to an order to surrender with a burst of gunfire, all four policemen began shooting through the door and window, fatally wounding him. All the money taken in the robbery was recovered.

Slams Door on Policemen.

In the other shooting Policemen Torpy and Galbraith established a detail at the St. Lawrence avenue apartment to seize two members of a gang suspected of forty robberies and two murders. Five of the gang, including Myrick's brother, John, were already in custody.

Torpy was nearest the door when Myrick appeared. The Negro opened the door, saw the policemen had him covered with their guns, and slammed the door. Torpy pulled it open, stepped out, and was shot twice. He continued to fire and started down the stairs after Myrick. The Negro shot him twice more, the last bullet piercing his head. As Torpy tumbled down one flight of stairs Galbraith pursued the Negro, firing as he went.

Torpy was married and had one daughter. He had been a member of the police department for twelve years.

Headless Victim?

MISS LEONA GAIZAITIS.

[Moffett-Russell Photo.]

Lake county authorities last night were investigating the possibility that the headless body of a woman found near the old Ravinia opera house in Highland Park last Thursday is that of Miss Leona Gaizaitis, 45 years old, former secretary of the Lithuanian consulate here, who disappeared on May 24. In June, the consul, Antanas Kalvaitis, reported her disappearance to the state's attorney's office, saying she had left a note telling of a nervous breakdown and she was going to a sanitarium. The consul also said there was a shortage of about $8,000 in her books.

Michael J. Kiras, a realty dealer of 3335 South Halsted street, a friend of Miss Gaizaitis viewed the dead woman's effects last evening, but he refused to comment on the possibility that the body was hers. Consul Kalvaitis could not be reached last night, Chief of Police Edward Moroney of the Highland Park police said he hoped to talk to him about the matter today.

The skull was found at some distance from the body, several weeks ago. The woman apparently had been dead for three months or more. There were no definite clews to indicate whether she was murdered or was a suicide.

SEVEN ARRESTED IN SLAYING OF WILLIAM TRUDEL

With the arrest of seven men, four of whom were held, the mysterious death of William J. Trudel, 52 years old, has been solved, Capt. John Norton of the Maxwell street station announced yesterday. Trudel's body was found on Wednesday beneath a railroad viaduct at West 15th street. It was at first thought he was the victim of a hit and run motorist.

Trudel, who tended bar in pre-prohibition days at the famous Righeimer saloon across from the county building on Clark street, was killed in a brawl at a tavern at 177 West Washington street, owned by Thomas Brady, according to Capt. Norton. Stephen J. Kriho, 33 years old, 211 East Delaware place, has admitted striking Trudel to avenge an insult, the police captain said.

Trudel lived at 6164 Winthrop avenue. Capt. Norton said Trudel was promised a job in a tavern at 168 West Washington street by Stephen O'Donnell brother of Edward [Spike] O'Donnell, who had just bought it. To celebrate, Trudel, Kriho, and Arthur W. Jones, 8250 South Green street, who were present, adjourned to Brady's saloon where the fight occurred. The fourth man held is A. J. Nichols, a bartender in Grady's tavern.

Police seek two of Kriho's friends who aided in moving the body.

Three Touhy Gangsters Appeal; Allege Errors

Appeals by three members of the Touhy gang, serving 99 year sentences in the penitentiary for the kidnaping of John [Jake the Barber] Factor, were filed in the Supreme court at Springfield yesterday. Those appealing are Roger Touhy, Peter Stevens, and Albert Kator. The appeals were brought on writs of error listing 34 alleged errors of a technical nature in the trial of the three men.

Bank Official in Hospital After Attempted Suicide

George Gray, 42 years old, assistant cashier of a Maywood, N. J., bank, waited in his bed at the county hospital for his wife to arrive and take him home. He was placed in technical custody after police discovered he attempted to take his life by gas Thursday in his rooms in the Cambridge hotel, 530 Diversey avenue.

G. O. P. SENATE ASPIRANTS TO MEET SEPT. 30

Party Financial Parley Opens Here Tomorrow.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Republicans and New Dealers are now concentrating upon the middle west as a great battle ground in the congressional elections. Republican candidates for the United States senate were summoned yesterday to a conference on Sunday, Sept. 30, in the Palmer house.

They are to exchange advice and plan a program for the final month of campaigning. Thirty-five senators are to be elected this year, and a large showing of candidates in northern and western states is expected at the conclave. Senator Daniel O. Hastings of Delaware, chairman of the Republican senatorial committee, is to preside.

Meanwhile western members of the executive committee of the Republican national committee are to meet at Chicago headquarters tomorrow and Tuesday. They will confer with National Chairman Henry P. Fletcher and Treasurer George F. Getz.

Deficit Cut in Half.

The purpose of the two days' conference is to discuss finances and to work out a program for concerted action for the final weeks of the campaign. Treasurer Getz says the $206,000 deficit inherited from the 1932 campaign has been cut about in half by contributions.

At the June meeting a quota plan from Committeeman R. B. Creager of Texas was subscribed to, and pledges for more than enough money to wipe out the deficit were made, but so far Mr. Getz reports only about half has been received.

Chicago and Illinois have more than held up their end in raising funds, national headquarters reports, but other states are backward.

"There have been requests for 1934 funds from many states," said Mr. Getz, "and the executive committee members will be told the reason why money hasn't been sent to them."

Republican managers are focusing activities on the region between the Ohio and the Rockies. Here they consider their prospects greatest of regaining Republican seats lost two years ago in the Roosevelt landslide.

What the Rivals Predict.

The rival claims at present are as follows:

Senator L. J. Dickinson of Iowa, western chairman of the Republican senatorial committee, estimates that in November the Republicans will regain 50 to 75 seats in the house and will more than hold their own in the senate. The Republicans have no expectation of capturing control of either house.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, Democratic national chairman, says the Democrats will increase their strength in the house and will gain at least six seats in the senate. Mr. Farley, who is completing a swing around the middle west, is to address a Democratic rally Friday night in the Chicago Stadium.

With the season of primaries now over, the politicians are still weighing results.

The New York Situation.

In President Roosevelt's home state of New York, Republicans and Democrats are to hold their nominating conventions this week. Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, friend of the President, is conceded to be certain of the Democratic nomination at Buffalo, where the delegates meet Wednesday and Thursday.

GOV. LEHMAN.

An astonishing situation has arisen on the Republican side. The Republican state chairman, Kingsland Macy, is an old schoolboy friend of President Roosevelt. Macy weeks ago argued that the Republicans should not make the New Deal an issue, saying that to attack it would mean defeat for Republicans. He also sponsored Samuel Seabury, a Democrat, for the Republican nomination for governor.

Macy Short of Power.

Leaders of a movement to draft Congressman James W. Wadsworth, former United States senator, for the Republican nomination for governor, formed a committee of 400, with F. Trubee Davison, former assistant secretary of war, as chairman. Although Macy was not removed from his office he was smothered so far as his plans were concerned, and the convention this week will be able to pick a ticket and frame a Republican platform for the nominees to run on.

Wadsworth, who is sometimes mentioned as among the possibilities for the Republican nomination for President in 1936, has declared he does not want to run for governor. Wadsworth will run for reëlection to congress instead.

Robert Moses, park commissioner in Mayor La Guardia's cabinet and personal friend of Al Smith, has been chosen by the anti-Macy Republicans as their prospective candidate for the nomination for governor. This group, which embraces many of the strong men in the Republican state party, declares it has no doubt that it has lined up sufficient delegates to nominate Mr. Moses over Mr. Seabury, who is still being pushed by Chairman Macy.

Al Smith's Dilemma.

The nomination of Mr. Moses for governor at the Republican convention at Rochester this week would rather put Al Smith in a quandary, as the former governor was instrumental in bringing both Mr. Moses and Gov. Lehman into politics. He is a close personal friend of each, and weeks ago he accepted a request that he nominate Gov. Lehman at the Buffalo convention this coming week. Mr. Moses, who is rated as a liberal Republican, was one of the most trusted advisers of Al Smith when the latter was governor.

Gov. Lehman managed Mr. Smith's 1926 campaign for governor against Ogden L. Mills, later secretary of the treasury, and was a large contributor to Smith's 1928 campaign for the presidency.

See Radical Endeavors.

As to the Seabury Democratic movement backed by Republican Chairman Macy, it has been charged by some Republican chiefs that it has earmarks of a movement directed at capturing the Republican machinery in New York so that with Senators La Follette, Norris, Shipstead, Johnson, Gov. Pinchot, and Upton Sinclair a "new Progressive party might be formed" as an adjunct for the Democratic New Dealers.

Considerable attention has been roused at western G. O. P. headquarters by the results of the Georgia primaries as indicating trends of opinion. Georgia, a Democratic stronghold, is "second home" of President Roosevelt.

Gov. Eugene Talmadge has been renominated by the Democrats by a great majority. Talmadge, although a Roosevelt man, has been a severe critic of certain phases of the New Deal. He has not hesitated to tangle with the NRA and the AAA, and what he has said about the Brain Trust has made the hair of the Washington profs. and drs. curl.

Interpretation of Georgia Vote.

The governor's leading opponent was Judge Claude C. Pittman, whose campaign stock in trade consisted largely of reproaches of Talmadge for his anti-New Dealism.

The tremendous popularity of the governor, of course, was the main factor in the vote, and the $3 automobile license he proclaimed after the legislature refused to pass it was a potent vote getter. But the Republican managers discern in the great vote given a Democratic critic of the New Deal, albeit a supporter of Roosevelt, considerable of significance.

They analyze it as demonstrating that although Roosevelt is the chief vote attracter for the Democrats, the New Deal is showing its vulnerability to attack even in one of the strongest of Democratic states—Georgia was one of the eight states carried by Al Smith in 1928.

INTRODUCES BAREFOOT FAD IN RENO

Shoes are "barbaric" and "outrageous," says Mrs. Mildred Tilton Holmsen of Southampton, L. DEFENSE COUNCIL FAILS TO INDORSE 5 CONGRESSMEN

3 Democrats' Views Held "Unsafe."

Five Democratic Illinois congressmen, all candidates for reëlection in November, failed to receive the endorsement of the Illinois National Defense council in the election recommendations it made public yesterday.

Plans for the national defense "will not be safe" in the hands of three congressmen, the council believes. They are Adolph J. Sabath and Leo Kocialkowski of Chicago and William W. Arnold of Robinson. Characterized as "unsatisfactory in the matter of national defense" are J. Leroy Adair of Quincy and James A. Meeks of Danville.

Discusses Sabath's Record.

Of Congressman Sabath, the council finds that "there is nothing in Mr. Sabath's statements now to overcome the record of his continued opposition to amendments for appropriations within its national defense program."

Congressman Kocialkowski gave "evasive and unsatisfactory" answers to the council's questions asked two years ago, the council reported, and this year did not answer them at all. No record vote on national defense was found during the closing term of congress and the council therefore gave him an adverse report.

Congressman Arnold was also given an "unsafe" recommendation in the council's 1932 report because he voted against amendments it believed necessary. This fall he wrote that he had always been for an "adequate" defense but that there is quite a little difference of opinion as to what "adequate" means. The council believes that he opposes its program and failed to recommend him.

Congressman Meeks wrote that he favored a more adequate national defense but made no statement on the council's program. Therefore he was found unsatisfactory.

Thinks Curtailment Necessary.

Congressman Adair declared that he had supported every war and navy appropriation bill but added that curtailment was necessary and did not present his views on the council's program. On that basis he, too, was found unsatisfactory.

Both sets of candidates for congressmen-at-large were listed as "satisfactory." They are Congressman Martin A. Brennan of Bloomington and M. L. Igoe of Chicago, Democrats, and C. Wayland Brooks of Chicago and Milton E. Jones of Williamsville, Republicans. All other sitting members were likewise recommended.

Several candidates for congress were listed as unsatisfactory or failed to receive a recommendation because they did not answer the defense council's queries. They include Frank G. Zelezinski, Republican nominee in the 4th district; John A. Stanek, Republican nominee in the 5th district; Edward Richard Piszatowski, Republican nominee in the 8th district; James McAndrews, Democratic nominee in the 9th district; and Harry H. Mason of Pawnee, Democratic nominee in the 21st district.

Among the national defense specifications the council lists as essential are a regular army of 14,000 officers and 165,000 enlisted men, and an increase of enlisted naval personnel from 79,900 to 91,400 men.

The council's election report was signed by John R. Mayeskie, chairman, and Glenn P. McAtee, secretary.

CANVASSING BY G. O. P. BEGUN; 150,000 FAKE REGISTRANTS CHARGED

Republican county headquarters announced yesterday a door to door canvas. A statement from the county committee said:

"The canvass has been started for two purposes—to get the greatest possible number of legitimate voters to register for the Nov. 6 election and to get an estimated 150,000 fraudulent names stricken from the present registration lists, especially in Chicago.

"This fraudulent registration is known to extend into some of the best residential wards.

"All citizens of Chicago who have not registered previously or who have moved since the last election, must register on Oct. 9. This is the only day this year when such registration can be made.

"Citizens of Chicago Heights, Berwyn, Cicero, Summit, Evergreen Park, Stickney, Morton Grove, and Elmwood Park under jurisdiction of the election commision, must register Oct. 9, if they were not registered for the last election, or if they have moved since that time.

"All previous registration books in voting districts in the country have been destroyed and there must be a complete new registration. The voting places will be open for this on both Sept. 28 and Oct. 9."

G. O. P. WOMEN TO HOLD COUNTY ROUNDUP OCT. 10

Hamilton Fish to Speak at Luncheon for 500.

Republican women of Cook county will hold their first official roundup on Oct. 10, the day after registration day, with Representative Hamilton Fish as speaker, Mrs. Bertha Baur, national Republican committeewoman for Illinois, announced yesterday.

This announcement does not imply, Mrs. Baur asserted, that the Republican women intend to wait until Oct. 10 to start their campaign for the November elections. Already they have been at work for the last six weeks. It does mean, however, that at that time the "precinct patriots," as Mrs. Baur has dubbed her precinct executives, will receive final instructions for organizing the women in their communities.

Invitations to the rally, a luncheon meeting, are to be sent to approximately 500 Republican women leaders in Cook county.

Sketches Plan of Action.

Mrs. Baur, in her capacity as chairman of the women's division of the Cook county Republican central committee, will preside, and will outline to the workers her plan of campaign.

With that plan many of them already will be familiar. Roughly speaking, it consists of an "A-B-C" arrangement—[a] to induce everybody who is eligible to register; [b] to influence those persons to vote Republican, and [c] to see that they vote before the polls close.

Work toward the first goal must be completed by Oct. 9, registration day. For the second goal the women have a working period of five weeks. For the third they have only election day itself.

Women, Mrs. Baur believes, will flock to the polls this year in numbers unequaled since they first received the right of suffrage, for there are few women, she says, who have not had brought to them this year, through some channel or other, the need for an active interest in their government.

Appeal to Business Sense.

"The housewife awoke to this need when she saw her food prices doubling. The elderly woman saw it when her trust funds started their gradual dribbling away. The business woman has seen it on every side in the business and industrial world."

It is toward the business or "independent" woman, however, that the main effort will be directed, for it is they, Mrs. Baur says, "who have first hand knowledge of actual facts."

"The business woman knows that no business can be run successfully when the overhead of current expenses is more than the income. She knows that no business can long survive that is not run on sound principles and sane business methods."

To Republican women of Illinois as a whole Mrs. Baur has offered one suggestion: "Adopt the preamble of the United States constitution as your 'statement of purpose' and coöperate at all times with the men of the party and there can be no doubt as to the outcome on Nov. 6."

KIDNAP DRIVER, TAKE CASH.

James Gresham, 5732 Cornelia avenue, a driver for the Sinclair Oil company, was kidnaped and robbed of $43 and a number of checks yesterday by two bandits as he was delivering gasoline to a garage at 2500 West Washington boulevard. Gresham was released five blocks from the garage.

State Board Certifies Labor, Socialist Parties on Ballot

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22.—(AP)—The state certifying board today accepted for the Nov. 6 ballot the petitions of the Socialist and the Socialist-Labor parties, ending a dispute which has waged most of the week, and increasing to seven the number of parties which will have slates of candidates at the election.

Announcement of the board's action came from Gov. Horner who said the board had decided to waive technicalities and permit the filing of the two additional party tickets "as they have been prepared in good faith, thousands of Illinois citizens have signed their petitions and we do not feel it would be just to deny them an opportunity to express their convictions at the polls."

Defective as to Form.

The dispute over the Socialist petitions, which were found to be on legal form, came about when Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes' office refused to accept them, claiming they were presented after filing time. The Socialists, however, had obtained Gov. Horner's indorsement, as required by law, on the petitions and claimed they had sought to present them at the secretary's office within the time specified.

The board first ruled the Socialist-Labor ticket defective as to form, it not containing candidates for the three positions as trustees of the University of Illinois. The Socialist Laborites claimed, however, that they had been misadvised and understood they had to have candidates for none but the positions of treasurer, superintendent of public instruction, and the two congressmen-at-large.

Ballots Are Accepted.

The board, on inquiry, discovered, it was said, that it is a moot point whether the trustees are included as state officers and so decided to allow the petitions to be filed.

In addition to these two parties, tickets of the Republican, Democratic, Prohibitionists, Communists, and National Progressives have been accepted for the ballot.

Reports have been current that objections would be filed to the National Progressive ticket, on which Walter Nesbit, incumbent congressman-at-large, is seeking reëlection. He was defeated for renomination in the Democratic primary. At a late hour it had not been done.

PRESIDENT MAY TAKE STUMP IN MICHIGAN VOTE

Lansing, Mich., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Strong possibility that President Roosevelt will visit Michigan during the fall campaign in an effort to bring about election of the Democratic nominee, Frank A. Picard, to the United States senate over the admittedly strong Republican incumbent, Arthur H. Vandenberg, was seen today by Walter I. McKenzie, chairman of the Democratic state central committee.

Vandenberg, who is considered possible presidential timber in 1936, is an energetic and convincing campaigner and leading Democrats admit that he will have the inside track over their candidate unless more than ordinary effort is put forth in Picard's behalf.

The pronounced swing back toward "Republican normalcy" noted at the primary when the Democrats, now in complete control of the state government and congressional delegation, were outvoted two to one, indicates to Democratic leaders that they have an uphill and probably losing fight on their hands.

Snowstorm Sweep Down from Montana on Colorado

Denver, Colo., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Snow swept down from the north promising to reach central Colorado tonight. The storm left four inches of snow at Helena, Mont., and covered a section of Montana from Yellowstone National park eastward beyond the continental divide. The weather bureau said the snow would blanket Wyoming and come as far south as central Colorado.

Aviation Show Entertains Vets at Hines Hospital

An aviation show entertained war veterans yesterday at the Edward Hines Jr. Memorial hospital in Broadview. About 1,200 patients were taken outdoors, while an announcer system carried a description of events above the hospital grounds to those confined inside. The sponsors were Aviation post No. 651 and Earl A. Carr post No. 302 of the American Legion. Wayne Wagner made a parachute leap from the plane of Capt. Richard Granere, Arthur Chester of Joliet did stunt flying and Joseph Lucas gave a model plane demonstration.

NEW DEAL RULE DRAWS ATTACKS AT PRESS PARLEY

Appeal for "March Back" Made to Editors.

Sycamore, Ill., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—An attack which will echo through the press of northern Illinois was sounded this afternoon as Republican editors and publishers, sectional standard bearers, and state leaders joined here in the 36th annual session of the Twelfth District Republican Editorial association.

Assumption of power, extension of constitutional boundaries, and abandonment of preëlection pledges by the administration were in turn denounced at the meeting.

More than 150 newspaper publishers, writers, county officers and legislators attended. Congressman John T. Buckbee [R.] of Rockford; Hiram L. Williamson of Springfield, secretary of the Illinois Press association; State Senators A. P. Benson of Batavia and N. M. Mason of Oglesby; State Assemblyman Frank McCarthy of Elgin, and D. J. Collins of De Kalb were principal guests.

Appeal for "March Back."

Justus L. Johnson of Aurora, state Republican central committee chairman; Circuit Judge W. J. Fulton of Sycamore, Editor Barney Thompson of Rockford, Congressman Buckbee, Mason, and Williamson shared in the general denunciation and appeal for a "march back."

Mason, self-styled "thorn in Gov. Horner's side," declared:

"We, the people, are becoming dizzy as we try, day by day, to put together this cross-word puzzle which continues to come from Washington labeled with the letters of the alphabet."

Members heartily indorsed the resolutions drawn and paid silent tribute to the late Fred E. Sterling, former lieutenant governor of Illinois and stanch member of the association. In a resolution the group set forth:

"The greatest Republican of all times said in his immortal Gettysburg address that it was the duty of America to see that government of the people, by the people, and for the people should not perish from the earth. In this day of national emergency, when the welfare of the republic is not only troubled by a period of untold depression, but when its very foundations are shaken by what seems an internal attack on its vital principles, we heartily commend the words of Lincoln to the attention of the people we serve.

Thanks for "Good Things."

"For the good things that have been done to battle unfavorable economic conditions we express commendation. But if these efforts at prosperity are to be paid for by the abandonment of the constitutional guarantees which have been the heritage of every citizen for 150 years, the price for recovery would be too high. We therefore affirm our faith in the political party that was built on the lives of Lincoln, Grant, Garfield, McKinley, Roosevelt, Coolidge, and Hoover. We maintain our confidence in the Republican party as founded on the just powers given to government by the constitution, and we pledge the activity of this association toward the restoration of power to this party."

PRESIDENT AND HUEY LONG WIN LEMKE'S PRAISE

Congressman William Lemke, North Dakota Democrat and co-author of the Frazier-Lemke farm moratorium bill, declared before an audience of 700 farmers at Woodstock last night that Franklin D. Roosevelt is the greatest President since Lincoln, and Huey Long the greatest lawmaker in the United States senate.

Mr. Lemke, in answer to a question from the audience, said he did not believe the recent decision in the federal court at Baltimore, that the Frazier-Lemke bill is unconstitutional, would stand. The attorney general of the United States, he said, had approved the measure. He added that he believed a farm mortgage refinancing bill would be passed at the next session of congress.

ASKS DIVORCE

MRS. DORIS TETENS.

Mrs. Doris Tetens, 22 years old, known as Doris Delairs in the cast of Ziegfeld Follies playing here, filed suit yesterday in the Circuit court for divorce from Hubert E. Tetens, New York broker. The bill charges desertion. It states that the couple married on Dec. 19, 1929, at Weehawken, N. J., and separated on June 1, 1931. Mrs. Tetens, who won the title of Miss New Jersey in 1929, asks for custody of their child, Ronald, 4 years old.

Spokane Transportation Employes Go Back to Work

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Spokane bus and street car operators returned to work today, but with few of the concessions they had hoped for in a 25 day strike. On the main issue—reinstatement of eight men discharged purportedly for union activity—the union was allowed to ask the regional labor board to reopen the case. Their demands for a 10 per cent wage increase and a closed shop were denied.

TREE BELT PLAN IS NOT SCRAPPED, SAYS PRESIDENT

Infers McCarl Ruling Has Only Delayed Project.

BY CHESLY MANLY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt declared today there is no intention of abandoning the $75,000,000 "tree belt" from Canada to Texas which Controler General J. R. McCarl turned down as an improper use of funds from the $525,000,000 emergency drouth appropriation.

The President stated, in a press conference, that he was in full accord with the controler general's ruling that emergency drouth funds might be used for putting men to work planting trees, but could not be used for land purchases. He said the original plan of the administration was to begin the shelter belt project with $15,000,000 of drouth money, and that some of this was to be used to purchase land.

President Says He Agrees.

When the matter came before the controler general, the President said he ruled that emergency drouth funds could not be used for long range projects such as the purchasing of land. Mr. Roosevelt said he agreed.

The President said the shelter belt project, designed to protect the middle west region from future drouths, would be carried out, but that the initial funds would have to be taken from sources not yet determined.

Mr. Roosevelt announced he would have another "talk with the nation" in the near future. He said he had not as yet chosen the subject of his address.

Mr. Roosevelt said the relief problem in general was far from settled, and added, ironically, that anything written about it would be wrong. Asked when he expected to reveal his program for permanent relief, or "social security," he laughingly replied, "Jan. 3 and Jan. 4," adding that the annual message to congress is made on the 3d and the budget message on the 4th.

Harry L. Hopkins, federal emergency relief administrator, conferred with the President immediately after the press conference, but Mr. Roosevelt said the visit was more of a social call than anything else. He declined to comment on Hopkins' declaration in Washington that states and cities must bear a much larger share of relief costs or else be shut off from federal aid.

Entertains at Picnic.

The President spent this afternoon on his farm entertaining guests at a picnic at the cottage, as the farmhouse is designated. Besides Relief Administrator Hopkins, the guests included Henry Morgenthau, secretary of the treasury; Henry Morgenthau Sr.; Frank Walker, on leave of absence as chairman of the national emergency and national executive councils; Bernard M. Baruch, unofficial adviser to the President; J. M. Patterson, publisher of the New York Daily News; and Ruth Bryan Owen, minister to Denmark, whose recent return from Greenland on board a United States coast guard cutter created something of a scandal.

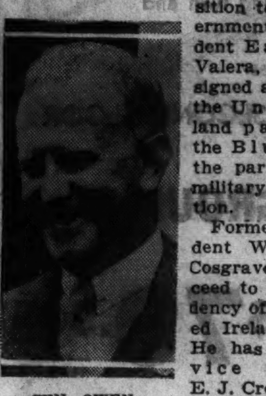
O'DUFFY QUITS AS HEAD OF IRISH BLUE SHIRT ARMY

Cosgrave Becomes Leader of Opposition Party.

BY HUGH CURRAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

DUBLIN, Sept. 22.—Gen. Owen O'Duffy, militant leader of the opposition to the government of President Eamon de Valera, today resigned as head of the United Ireland party and the Blue Shirts, the party's semi-military organization.



GEN. OWEN O'DUFFY.

Former President William T. Cosgrave will succeed to the presidency of the United Ireland party. He has been its vice president. E. J. Cronin, general secretary of the party, will become head of the Blue Shirts.

Hold All Night Session.

The executive committee of the party announced O'Duffy's resignation after an all night session, saying they accepted his resignation "with very deep regret." Dissension in the ranks of the party, officially the Fine Gael, has been evident for some time. Cosgrave and O'Duffy had split, but it was believed their differences had been healed in August.

Cosgrave has been objecting for some time to O'Duff's public speeches. He even asked to read his speeches before he delivered them. The general refused the request.

It is freely reported that last month the government intended to declare the Blue Shirts an illegal organization. The government charged they were blocking roads and conducting a campaign against the sale of cattle seized from farmers for land annuities.

Protests O'Duffy's Methods.

The trouble within the ranks of the United Ireland party began with the resignation of Prof. James Hogan, brother of the minister of agriculture in Cosgrave's government. He resigned as a protest against what he called "reckless and irresponsible methods adopted by Gen. O'Duffy." Hogan's action induced the government to withdraw its order banning the Blue Shirts.

It is believed here that O'Duffy may form a new party.

O'Duffy is traditionally a fighter. He was chief of staf of the Irish Republican army during the Anglo-Irish struggle in 1921-'22 and remained with the army in the fighting which followed the establishment of the Irish Free State.

Under President Cosgrave he organized the new state police, the civic guards. He developed them into what is declared to be one of the best police forces in the world. President De Valera removed O'Duffy Feb. 22, 1933.

The United Ireland party was formed by a merger of the Cosgrave-MacDermott-Dillon forces. O'Duffy became leader of the Army Comrades' association. He named the body the "National Guard" and aligned it with the United Ireland party. The organization's members dressed in blue shirts. Hence the organization became known as the Blue Shirts.

FATE OF CANADIAN REGIME AT STAKE IN ELECTION TOMORROW

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 22.—With new members of the federal parliament to be elected Monday in five Ontario political constituencies, Canada is in the throes of a miniature federal "general election." The results are calculated to have great influence upon the general election which must be held next summer, but they surely will determine the tenor of the winter session of parliament.

MACKENZIE KING.

Mackenzie King, leader of the Liberal party, who has spoken in every one of the five constituencies—East Toronto, Elgin West, North York, Kenora-Rainy River and Frontenac-Addington—has announced that if Liberals are returned in all five he will blockade parliament against further money votes for the Bennett government. His purpose will be to force immediate disbandment of parliament and a quick election.

With Prime Minister Richard B. Bennett, Conservative leader, absent in Geneva, the Tory campaign is being led largely by Harry H. Stevens, minister of trade and commerce in the Bennett government. With or without his leader's approval—the answer is a conundrum at the moment for the Canadian electorate—Stevens is seeking Conservative votes on a "justice in industry" plea, based upon denunciation of "soulless corporations," unjustifiable corporation profits, and what he alleges to be the disastrous effects upon small industry of the massed buying powers of chain stores.

GUN GANG ROBS BANK; TAKES FIVE HOSTAGES ALONG

Holdrege, Neb., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Nebraska's fourth 1934 bank robbery netted a cursing robber and his henchmen approximately $5,400 when they held up the First National bank here today and made a clean cut getaway.

The gunmen's leader uttered a string of oaths as he and his two aids inside the bank lined up customers, clerks, and bank officials and threatened to "murder" an assistant cashier unless he opened a safe while the two masked men worked quietly, one scooping up the counter cash and currency.

Five hostages were taken in the automobile with the three or four gunmen when they fled, not waiting the twenty minutes necessary for a time lock on the safe where the bank's chief resources were stored.

Two school teachers, Nora Hueftle and Eva Crissman, and the bank's cashier, L. B. Titus, were released a few blocks from the bank and the other hostages, William Lindstrom and a bank clerk, Belle Manley, several miles out in the country. That was the last trace reported of the robbers' car.

Bandits Overpower 5, Get $17,704 in Holdup of Bank

Russellville, Ky., Sept. 22.—[U.P.]—Two bandits overpowered five employés and customers at the Southern Deposit bank here today, forced the cashier to open the safe, and escaped with $17,704 in cash and bonds.

TEXTILE STRIKE LEADERS CALL OFF WALKOUT

Order Men to Return to Jobs Tomorrow.

"It is a simple and cold statement of facts," Gorman reported, "that our strike has changed the whole relation of the government and of NRA to labor and we have utterly abolished the control of labor relations by code authorities. That is an achievement which cannot be too strongly emphasized. It is a tremendous thing to have gained."

Strikers List "Gains."

The strike committee, in a later statement, asserted:

"We have secured these definite things:

"1—An end to the stretchout.

"2—A method of determining hours on a basis of fact.

"3—A method of determining wages upon a basis of fact.

"4—Practical recognition of our union.

"5—Reform in the whole administration of the labor provisions of the code, on a scale so sweeping that we must confess ourselves surprised at the sweeping character of the victory we have won."

Only a militant minority stood out for a continuation of the strike. It insisted the employers first guarantee unconditionally the reinstatement, without discrimination, of all who quit the mills.

President Roosevelt is expected to move swiftly in setting up machinery for carrying out his plan now that the union has agreed to it.

The President is to appoint a textile labor relations board of three members. The board will take over all of the union's complaints against labor policies of the textile industry. Its creation is considered a direct White House snub to an NRA board established long ago to do the same work.

This new textile board will select another commission to make a special study of the "stretch out" or the work load assigned to textile mill hands. This second board also will regulate the working of the stretch out system between now and Feb. 1, when a permanent control plan is to go into effect.

Meanwhile, the department of labor and federal trade commission, under the President's peace plan, are to investigate the textile industry's ability to pay the higher wages demanded by union labor.

Roosevelt Told of Order.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—President Roosevelt was notified today of the calling off of the textile strike, effective Monday morning, by a telegram from Francis J. Gorman. Marvin H. McIntyre, White House secretary, sent the following telegram in reply:

"The President was glad to learn of the action taken by the executive council of the United Textile Workers of America and the national strike committee and appreciated your wiring him."

Supposedly Docile Bull Goes 'Berserk'; Man Gored

Scottsbluff, Neb., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Gored by a supposedly docile bull that went momentarily "berserk" today in a live stock auction ring, L. D. Johnson, 55, Scottsbluff cattle buyer, is in a serious condition.

FIGHT INJUNCTION AGAINST STRIKING COACH DRIVERS

A motion asking the court to dissolve an injunction which restrains officials and members of three unions from committing acts of violence against the property or employés of the Chicago Motor Coach company was argued yesterday before Circuit Judge John Prystalski. A decision is expected tomorrow.

Attorneys Maclay Hoyne and William Levine, representing the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes of America, and the street car and elevated employés unions, argued that the bus company did not come into court "with clean hands" when it obtained the injunction without notice two weeks ago. They obtained a change of venue from Judge Klarkowski to Judge Prystalski, who was assistant state's attorney when Maclay Hoyne was state's attorney.

The attorneys asked that contempt citations against A. Connelly, charged with throwing an iron weight through a bus window, and Bernard Kelly, accused of shooting slingshot missiles at bus windows, be dismissed.

BANDITS WOUND GROCER.

East St. Louis, Ill., Sept. 22.—[U. P.]—A. P. Meyer, 42, grocer, was shot and seriously wounded by two Negro bandits as he resisted their efforts to rob him last night.

BENDIX WORKERS IN WAGE PACT TO KEEP PLANT OPEN

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—With the assurance of employés that they will ask no wage increases, Vincent Bendix, president of the Bendix Aviation corporation, announced at a massmeeting of workers today that the corporation plant and all its subsidiaries will continue to operate.

Demands for lower prices by contracting automobile companies have forced the corporation to slash contract rates on brakes and accessories to an extent, Mr. Bendix said, that in order to keep the factories operating the corporation must take a loss.

"We would rather operate at a loss," he said, "and keep our factories going than maintain prices not agreeable to contracting firms and thus be forced to close our plants. It will not be necessary to cut present wages to reduce these prices, but we must be assured that the present wage scale will continue to be accepted."

TWO KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK.

Carbondale, Ill., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Two men, said by railroad officials to have been trespassers riding a freight train, were killed when an M. & O. train was wrecked 15 miles north of here yesterday. One man who died on the way to the hospital said he was G. W. Thompson, Raleigh, N. C. The other had army discharge papers bearing the name of Obie L. Henderson.

BY EARL MULLIN.

The twelve millionth visitor to the World's Fair was welcomed early yesterday afternoon at the 23d street gate. The honor guest was Miss Jane Brennan, 16 years old, 1335 Asbury avenue, Evanston, a student in the Evanston Township High school. She was accompanied by Miss Ray Tillotson, 16 years old, of Glen Ellyn, Ill.

Miss Brennan, who came in at a time when the electric tabulators showed the day's admissions to be 42,609, was greeted by Fair officials and Joe Penner, radio performer. A score of gifts from exhibitors were presented to the lucky visitor.

Yesterday's attendance reached 107,211 at midnight, giving further evidence that admissions during the final six weeks would be sufficient to run the final figure past the fourteen million mark.

Carnival Week Concluded.

Numerous special events filled yesterday's Fair program with entertainment and education for visitors. Chief among these were the celebrations of Swedish day, National Education day, Modern Woodmen day, and the week's finale of fun for Carnival week.

Miss Letitia O'Neil, 26 years old, 2309 Eastwood avenue, was chosen from 150 entrants as the winner of a masquerade contest held as part of Carnival of Fun week. She was awarded a prize for her costume as Joan of Arc.

The Swedish celebration centered around a historical pageant in the Court of States in the evening. The costumed actors traced the history of the Scandinavian people, including the landing of the first Swedes at Delaware, their part in the revolutionary war, and the present activities of Swedes in the culture of the world.

Honor Charles S. Peterson.

As a prelude to the pageant a program of music and songs entertained the guests. Speaker of the day was Charles S. Peterson, vice president of the Fair and a leading Swedish-American, whose vision and energy played a large part in the creation of the Exposition.

With the Joliet High school and the Pekin, Ill., Woodmen bands, the lodge members, nine hundred strong, marched from the Court of Honor at the 14th street gate down the Avenue of Flags to the Court of States.

WINS FAIR TRIP

Miss Rosemary Ganter, 21 years old, has been spending the last several days at the World's Fair as a result of winning a popularity contest in her parish.

URGES REVISION OF TAX SYSTEMS TO AID SCHOOLS

A plea for revision of "outworn and grossly unfair" tax systems in some states was made yesterday by Dr. Henry Lester Smith, president of the National Education association, in a National Parent-Teacher day address at the World's Fair Court of States.

"The local property tax," he said, "formerly the sole support of schools in most states, is now utterly inadequate, and the need for new forms of taxation is imperative."

Dr. Smith said the nation must decide within the next few years "whether we want schools on a poverty level, or whether we are to continue the great tradition of universal education."

"The decade we are now facing," he said, "will present the greatest need for substantial educational advance of any period in our history."

Other speakers on the program included Mrs. B. F. Langworthy, president of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and Mrs. Arthur R. Williams, head of the Chicago organization.

Forest Fire Threatens California Settlement

Truckee, Cal., Sept. 22.—(AP)—A forest fire which had burned over 200 acres in Onion valley, four miles south of Emigrant Gap, was out of control today and threatened the little settlement of Bradley. Seventy-five fire fighters were sent from here to reinforce the 110 men sent out last night.

PRECISION GAUGE IS MADE TO FORM 'PERFECT PLANE'

200 Pounds Required to Pull Inch Blocks Apart.

The bureaus of standards in all the principal nations now gauge their basic linear measurements so precisely that they agree to one-four-millionth of an inch, according to Carl Edward Johansson, Swedish scientist and manufacturer, who spoke at a Swedish day luncheon in his honor yesterday in the Ford building at A Century of Progress Exposition.

Dr. Johansson explained the new international agreement which establishes a standard inch as equal to 25.4 millimeters at 68 degrees Fahrenheit or at 20 degrees centigrade.

Heretofore, he said, each government carried out the conversion of inches and metric linear measurements to four decimal places, and the several bureaus varied the digits of the decimal fraction. A factor in this variation was the different temperatures at which the "precision" measurements were taken. Several countries used 68 degrees Fahrenheit.

Practical Difficulty in War.

The practical result of these varying measurements was that parts of machinery, firearms, and apparatus manufactured according to specifications in one country would not fit with other parts made ostensibly by the same exact measurements in another land. In many instances during the world war American equipment could not be satisfactorily repaired with parts made in Europe.

Dr. Johansson was a leader in the international movement to end this confusion. He manufactures precision gauges in his factory in Sweden and in the Dearborn plant of the Ford Motor company.

His gauges, which all national bureaus now accept, consist of steel blocks "calibrated" by the light refraction method at the specified temperature of 68 degrees. The blocks are of different convenient sizes and are accurate to one-four-millionth of an inch.

Bases for Working Gauges.

So precisely are these blocks fashioned that their surfaces form almost a perfect "geometric plane." Dr. Johansson demonstrated that when two of them are pressed together their polished surfaces cohere because of molecular attraction until a pull of 200 pounds is required to separate the blocks.

These block gauges are used to manufacture other gauges for general application and to test from time to time the gauges already being used.

A new convention bureau of the Chicago Association of Commerce, organized to promote Chicago as a convention city after the end of the World's Fair, will replace the present bureau Oct. 1.

The new organization will be directed by an executive committee representing hotels, purveyors, transportation companies and theaters, who are contributing a fund of $50,000 to carry on the promotion work. Frank Bering, manager of the Hotel Sherman, is head of the committee.

Approximately 750,000 visitors to more than 800 conventions this year in Chicago will have been registered when the association closes its 1934 books. These figures fall short of last year's all time high, because of the opening of the World's Fair, but greatly exceed those of 1932, it was explained, when 458,795 visitors attended 694 conventions here. Arrangements already made for next year indicate an increase in convention attendance over this year.

Coaxes 2 Mountain Lions from Zoo Into Auto, Flees

Salt Lake City, Utah, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The fellow who stole a bass drum was a rank amateur. R. McC[illegible]n, director of the zoo, reported that a man drove up in a truck, opened the mountain lion cage, coaxed two of the beasts into his vehicle and drove away. Police said the animals were taken by a former employé who claimed he had a written contract for their purchase.

Durante Sued for $3,000 by Continuity Writer

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Suit for $3,000 claimed as back salary was filed today by Bert Levine against Jimmy Durante, film comedian. Durante, Levine's complaint stated, hired him to write the comedian's radio continuity at a salary of $200 per week. Durante used his efforts, but neglected to pay him, Levine asserted.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS NOTES

Officials of the New York Central lines yesterday estimated that this week-end's arrivals in Chicago for the Fair would total nearly 8,000 persons.

Tomorrow night's selections of candidates for the title of Miss Century of Progress will be made from groups of Czechoslovak, Jugo-Slav, Ukrainian, Greek, Chinese, and Japanese girls. One representative from each nationality will be selected to compete in the finals which will be decided by ballots cast by Fair visitors during the week preceding Chicago day on Oct. 9. Preliminaries for the various nations will be held every night this week at 7:30 p. m. on the Midway boardwalk. Semi-finals for all groups will be held Saturday night.

A contest for vocal quartets will be held in the Court of States tomorrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights. A trophy for the winning team and medals to each member of the first three teams will be awarded.

Probably more lost articles have been found and returned to their owners at Wings of a Century than at any other concession. Thus far this year 150 women's purses, 500 walking sticks, fifty women's and children's hats, and twenty two pairs of eyeglasses have been returned. One item which still remains unclaimed is a lady's brown shoe.

You Need No Longer Be Told That You Have an Expensive Foot

SURE WE LOOKED at THE OTHERS and that's why

I BOUGHT A HUDSON

In my Hudson I've got the best that all of the cars I've owned before could give me, plus a lot none of them had. I looked at several cars before I bought, but Hudson won hands down.
—S. G. TAYLOR, Des Moines, Ia.

I BOUGHT A TERRAPLANE

I'll always be glad that we didn't stop with the first couple of cars we looked at. Among other things, I insisted on big, extra-wide doors—and the one place I could get them was in the Terraplane.
—SAM HERSH, Milwaukee, Wisc.

I BOUGHT A HUDSON

I am now really enjoying my trips, thanks to the large luggage compartment which accommodates all my luggage; also to the fast pickup of my Hudson and the economy of running it. Am getting between 15 and 18 miles per gallon. —DR. HYMAN W. BAU, Chicago, Ill.

I BOUGHT A HUDSON

I've had cars before that were fast on the getaway, others that were fine for long trips and others that were pretty economical. But in my Hudson I've got the best that all of them had, plus a lot none of them had.
—FERD LORENZ, Minneapolis, Minn.

I BOUGHT A TERRAPLANE

My Terraplane is undoubtedly the most economical car on gasoline I have ever owned. The quick pickup has taken me out of many a tight place. I notice the freedom from body squeaks and rattles that have been an annoyance on several cars I have owned.
—M. F. GUILFOYLE, Omaha, Neb.

I BOUGHT A HUDSON

Yes, I looked at a good many cars and that's why I'm a Hudson owner today. I don't hesitate to encourage anyone who's buying a car to use Hudson as their standard of comparison. —P. J. CRAGEN, State Manager, Maccabees of S. D., Aberdeen.

Does it pay to take your time about buying a car? Just ask Hudson and Terraplane owners. Of the thousands of men and women who have bought new Hudsons and Terraplanes this year, 5 out of every 8 looked at several other makes of cars before they decided.

RUSSIA BECOMES PEDDLER; PUSHES GOODS ON FARMS

Seeks to Coax Peasants to Give Up Grain.

MOSCOW, Sept. 22.—A new merchandising plan combining certain features of the American mail order system with old fashioned house-to-house peddling was announced by soviet authorities today. Its purpose is to coax peasants to dispose of their surplus grain to state agencies at the fixed price instead of on the private markets.

The government has shrewdly assumed that if desirable merchandise is made available to peasants they will gladly trade in their grain for it. Accordingly, the general coöperative society will send out large supplies of household articles, shoes, textiles, sugar, gramophones, automobiles, building materials and farm implements to the rural districts.

Barter Goods for Grain.

Local coöperative organizations then are to load wagons with various articles and travel from village to village, offering them at fixed prices in exchange for grain.

In addition, price lists of goods in coöperative stores have been prepared to be sent to collective farms and villages, permitting peasants to order what they want.

This system is supplemental to a new governmental decree permitting any peasant who has fulfilled his share of grain deliveries to the state to sell his surplus to coöperative and state organizations instead of holding it, as heretofore, provided his particular district has fulfilled its delivery program.

Punishment Is Threatened.

The purpose of this change is to get into the hands of the government, which can distribute it where needed, grain that previously has gone into private markets.

Severe punishment is promised for peasants who sell privately.

Quake Felt in Alaskan City; Stirs Up Wind and Waves

SEWARD, Alaska, Sept. 22.—(AP)—A sharp earthquake was felt here at 2:28 a. m. today. The wind blew hard and waves crashed on the shore for five or ten minutes. Then the disturbance subsided.

Russia Champions Battle of Women for Equality Rights

GENEVA, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Maxim Litvinov, Russian foreign commissar, took the lead today, within four days of Russia's admission to the league of nations, in demanding equality of rights for women.

He was the first to sign a petition submitted by an international committee of women, which included in its members Madeleine Doty of New York and the Misses Alice Hall and Mabel Vernon of Washington, D. C.

"I will sign," Litvinov said when the women told him they had failed to get the subject of equality on the league assembly agenda. "Don't forget that we have complete equality for women in Russia."

Women Accuse League.

The women told Litvinov that the league secretariat seemed to them to be conspiring to balk their project. Later they besieged the hotels of other delegates and by noon had secured signatures from representatives of Czechoslovakia, Turkey, Mexico, Chile, Colombia, China, Panama, Siam, Haiti, the Dominican republic, Argentina, New Zealand, Latvia, and Jugo-Slavia.

This afternoon the league's steering committee voted to put the question on the agenda of the assembly—next year, not this.

The women's petition said that in view of the world-wide restrictions on the rights of women, such as "the right to earn a living, the right to education, to hold public office, and to enter professions," the signers requested the juridical committee to consider the convention of equality for women in nationality made by the Pan American conference at Montevideo and now in force in the United States.

An impetus to the American doctrine of most favored national clauses in treaties was given by the adoption of a report on world economic conditions by the economic committee.

The committee informed the assembly that obstacles to international trade were reduced by collective actions by groups of states through agreements invoking the most favored nation clause.

Charges Nazis Threaten Saar.

A warlike statement, attributed to an anti-French leader in the Saar territory, brought the delicate Saar question before the league of nations today.

The league council, about to consider the matter of the Saar plebiscite scheduled for January, heard a declaration attributed to Alois Spaniol that he was ready to march on the Saar with 17,000 unemployed Germans "and reduce the Saar to ruins."

The statement was contained in a letter which the Saar governing commission said was confiscated. It was said to have been dispatched by a regional leader of the German front, headed by Spaniol, to the head of a labor service at Saarbruecken. The Saar commission admitted the German front disapproved the plan of Spaniol, but said the situation required vigilance.

LEAGUE PROVIDES JOBS FOR 25,000 GERMAN EXILES

GENEVA, Sept. 22.—High tribute was paid today to the accomplishments of the commission for refugees, established to care for persons who have fled from Germany. The work of the American high commissioner, James G. McDonald, came in for special praise.

Geoffrey H. Shakespeare of the British delegation summarized for the seconl league of nations committee, which deals with technical organizations, what had been done in the comparatively brief period since the commission was set up. Five million dollars has been collected from Jewish organizations in the United States and Great Britain; about 25,000 refugees, of whom 7,000 were university graduates, have been assisted to find a livelihood. The initial league loan has long been repaid and no further appeal has been made to public authorities. It was a stupendous undertaking, Shakespeare said, but so far private organizations were carrying the burden.

French, Polish, Dutch, Norwegian, Swedish and Czechoslovak delegates indorsed the British tribute to the work of the American commissioner and the generosity of the private organizations which had backed him.

SOCIETY JURY TO HEAR ASHLEY DIVORCE CASE

LONDON, Sept. 22.—(AP)—A jury selected from Britain's four hundred will hear the divorce case of Lord and Lady Ashley, in which Douglas Fairbanks Sr. has been named a corespondent.

The case was set today for hearing at coming law sittings in the so-called Michaelmas term, from October to December.

A special jury was designated, which means the jurors will be chosen from a list of persons approximating the social and business standing of parties to the action. Cases heard by a common jury draw their twelve good men and true from ordinary jury lists.

ARGENTINA GETS MYSTERY CABLES SENT TO DU PONT

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Five mysterious cablegrams withheld from the public by the senate munitions committee because of their war-provoking potentialities today were ordered delivered to the government they concern—the republic of Argentina.

At the same time the committee gave Secretary Hull a complete record of testimony thus far adduced at the investigation of ramified, high-powered sales of munitions and war implements.

The secretary will give copies to the ambassadors of Argentina, Chile and Peru whose countries had made diplomatic requests for full details of committee revelations involving certain of their nationals in high places in allegedly questionable munitions deals.

Not Part of Record.

The Argentine government may make whatever use it wishes of the cablegrams which are not part of the record. They were brought up last week during the interrogation of officials of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours corporation about details of successful efforts by their Buenos Aires agent in blocking an Argentine government project for building a powder plant there.

Testimony was introduced showing that a man named Antonio Carames was paid compensation by the du Ponts after he had claimed credit for being instrumental in obtaining on three different occasions the cancelation of a government contract made with a German firm for construction of the enterprise.

Carames complained of the sum of money he had been offered and also of the du Pont's delay in submitting their own bid for the work. This disclosure drew from Felix du Pont, a vice president of the powerful firm, the statement that "we'd rather sell powder than build powder plants."

Committee questioners learned from a du Pont representative that Carames had said he had the services of an engineer "related to some official."

After Lammot du Pont had agreed that the cables should not go into the record, Stephen Raushenbush, committee examiner, declared:

"If they were made public it might mean actual destruction of life and property."

SEIZED IN OFFICER'S SHOOTING.

ISLAND UNIVERSE NOT SO BIG, SAY 2 ASTRONOMERS

Find Dimensions Half Old Conclusions.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Madison, Wis., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The "island" universe in which the earth, its solar system, and all of the stars which can be seen individually through telescopes are located, was slashed to half its formerly accepted dimensions in conclusions published today by two University of Wisconsin astronomers.

Up to about a year ago, astronomers generally assumed that their calculations—showing the immediate universe to be about twice the size of all other nebulae sighted in the far distance—were correct.

Observations by Prof. Joel Stebbins, director of the Washburn observatory at the University of Wisconsin, and C. M. Huffer, assistant professor of astronomy, with the aid of a photo-electric cell and an amplifier, fixed in a vacuum chamber, showed about a year ago that the distance beyond the Milky Way was not as great as formerly was believed.

Find Calculations High.

Conclusions of the two astronomers today, founded upon studies of 733 "blue" stars in the island universe of which the world is a small part, are that all dimensions and distances of the Milky Way system must be reduced by half.

They confirmed existence of a relatively thin layer of dark, scattered material—believed to be composed of dust particles and gas—in the Milky Way. They also found that hot, blue stars, which are believed to be three to six times as hot as the sun, acquire a reddish hue as they reach the center of the Milky Way.

The amount of absorption of the light of the blue stars, out to a distance of 20 quadrillion miles or more from the earth, shows that the inferred distances of objects near the Milky Way, especially in the direction of its center, must be greatly reduced, the astronomers said.

Favor Half-Reduction.

Because of the spotted nature of the space reddening in different longitudes, the correction of distances still is uncertain, but the largest absorption found for blue stars is about two magnitudes [photographic], or a reduction of about half their distances.

"When the absorbing effect of the dark material is properly allowed for, it is expected the difference between the dimensions of our galaxy and other such systems will largely disappear," the astronomer declared.

Observations during the last five years have indicated other universes or nebulae are larger than first measurements indicated, Prof. Huffer said. The tendency of recent observations is to show that separate universes are much alike and that the one including the earth does not stand out in space as a large aggregation of matter, he said.

ROMANS CHEER AS POPE RETURNS FROM VACATION

VATICAN CITY, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Pope Pius drove back to the Vatican today from his summer home at Castel Gandolfo, in the Alban hills, where he spent a vacation of seven weeks.

The pontif seemed in good health when he drove out of the papal summer villa.

As his car wound through the streets of Rome the populace cheered his return. When he reached Vatican City the Swiss guards stood at attention and workmen engaged on construction work inside the papal city shouted "Viva Il Papa!"

FIGHTS AN ICKES' SUIT; GETS PWA JOB; AIDS ICKES

F. J. Vurpillat Quits City's Pay; Helps Brother John.

The quest of John Ickes, brother of the secretary of the interior, for $40,781, from the city of Chicago in a civil service dispute took a new turn yesterday. It was discovered that Francis J. Vurpillat, a counsel in the public works administration, headed by Secretary Harold L. Ickes, is also representing Brother John.

Vurpillat's connection appeared all the more interesting to city hall officals investigating the matter, inasmuch as he was a former assistant corporation counsel, and in this capacity had represented the city in its defense against the Ickes claim.

Brother John's $40,781 claim against the city originated during the administration [1923-1927] of the late Mayor William E. Dever, whom Harold Ickes aided in the campaign. Early in the Dever administration John Ickes was made chief of assessments in the board of local improvements.

Goes to Court for Job.

In 1926, after a row with his superior, the late John J. Sloan, then president of the board of local improvements, John Ickes applied for and was granted a year's leave of absence. Sloan, at the same time, withdrew his charges, which never were published. Ickes went on the pay roll of the sanitary district almost immediately, but at the end of the year he demanded his city hall job back.

Ickes made the demand on Aug. 1, 1927. Circuit Judge Thomas Taylor issued a writ of mandamus ordering Ickes' reinstatement on Jan. 30, 1932, but the job was not restored to him until July 1, 1933, a few months after his brother became a cabinet member.

At this court hearing, and in proceedings before and after, Vurpillat represented the city against Ickes. But since Vurpillat has been on the legal staf of the PWA he has represented Ickes, writing two opinions in which he upheld the legality of his $40,781 claim against the city. The second opinion was dated two weeks ago.

In Series of Situations.

While he was out of his civil service job, John Ickes drew a total of $18,307 from public pay rolls, of which $15,339 came from the sanitary district during the Tim Crowe "whoopee era," and $2,968 from his services as a deputy bailif of the Municipal court. The jobs are itemized as follows:

1. Investigator of lake level for the sanitary district from Aug. 1, 1926, to Jan. 15, 1929, at $300 a month, with total pay of $8,850.

2. Special investigator of the Illinois valley for the sanitary district from Aug. 1, 1929, to July 15, 1930, at $300 a month, with total pay of $3,450.

3. Assistant public relations agent for the sanitary district from Oct. 17, 1930, to Aug. 20, 1931, at $300 a month, with total pay of $3,039.

4. Deputy bailif of the Municipal court from Jan. 5, 1932, until July 1, 1933, with total pay of $2,968.

In the latest legal opinion signed by Vurpillat on behalf of Ickes' claim, he makes four demands for a total of $40,781 from the city.

Itemization of Claims.

They include: First, $4,500 for the year of his leave of absence from the job of chief of assessments; second, $20,250, salary for the clerkship up to the time of the court order reinstating him; third, $5,031 from the date of the order up to the time he got his job back; and last, $11,000 in damages.

The damages, as set forth in Ickes' claim, are "for loss through being deprived of anticipated increases in salary paid to said position."

The corporation counsel's office dickered with Ickes and offered as settlement $2,351, which is the difference between his salary as bailif and the salary he would have received as chief of assessments, plus interest, for the period dating from the court order to the date of his reinstatement. Ickes refused.

NORTH CHICAGO LOAN IS HELD OPEN BY PWA

The Public Works administration's offer of a loan and grant of $382,000 to North Chicago for a light and power plant, subsequently refused by a majority of the city council, will remain in effect until a referendum vote is taken in the city on Oct. 30. This information was received yesterday by C. M. Osborn, state engineer for PWA, from Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, public works administrator at Washington, D. C.

The loan was allocated July 19, after an earlier request of the city council for the funds. Some time later dissension developed in the council and a majority of the members voted to notify Secretary Ickes the loan would be refused. A minority of the council protested this action.

The Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, which serves the community with light and power, is opposing the building of a municipal plant.

THREE PARTNERS MEET; 1 KILLED, 1 SHOT, 1 HUNTED

Cleveland, O., Sept. 22.—(AP)—A roar of gunfire broke up a conference of business partners in a downtown office building today. One partner was fatally shot and another wounded seriously.

The third partner, Abraham Knopp, 60, of Waterbury, Conn., was named by authorities as the gun wielder, and tonight was sought throughout the city.

Shot through the head, Ben Z. Levine, 45, a motion picture exhibitor, died in a hospital within a few minutes after the shooting.

Ernest Schwartz, 49, attorney, president of the Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' association, and partner with Knopp and Levine in ownership of a neighborhood picture house, was shot four times, but is expected to recover.

In a signed statement to police, Schwartz said that dissension among the three partners had resulted in litigation and that a court had ordered Levine to pay a sum of money to Knopp.

The Connecticut man met the Clevelanders today in Schwartz' office and demanded payment. Levine replied that "Times are hard," and a quarrel ensued.

Schwartz said Knopp suddenly whipped out a pistol and opened fire.

"Give me but the liberty of the press and I will give to the minister a venal house of peers. I will give him a corrupt and servile house of commons. I will give him the full swing of the patronage of office. I will give him the whole host of ministerial influence. I will give him all the power that place can confer upon him, to purchase up submission and overawe resistance; and yet, armed with the liberty of the press, I will go forth to meet him undismayed. I will attack the mighty fabric of that mightier engine. I will shake down from its height corruption and bury it beneath the ruins of the abuses it was meant to shelter."

—Richard Brinsley Sheridan.

YOU HAVEN'T SEEN ANYTHING YET.

Dr. Rexford Tugwell has been sent into temporary exile. The muffler of political expediency is on most of the other Brain Trusters. Dr. Moley has his magazine, but it is not being used by Mr. Farley as a campaign pamphlet. That line of the Potomac which is doctrinaire, scholastic, pedagogical and revolutionary is very quiet. All is not quiet along the Potomac, but the revolutionary sector is for the time being. Mr. Farley and the old line Democrats, cheery and affable, with federal pay checks in their pouches for distribution, are conducting business as usual for the period of the campaign.

Temporarily the New Deal subsides a bit and the old deal of vote getting proceeds with as few distractions as possible. The paramount political questions will be silenced if the practical Democrats can control the situation, and to date they have succeeded in quieting the planners.

Democratic vote getters apparently concede that the Republicans can give the country just cause for alarm if they succeed in getting the revolution in its full embodiment before the eyes of the voters. Therefore the Democratic campaigners intend to embody it in nothing more alarming than pay checks to the various constituencies which must elect congressmen. After the election, if its results again give the federal government a yes congress, the revolutionaries will return to their places of authority in Washington. They can conduct revolutions, but they cannot carry elections.

It is necessary that the country get behind this evasion of the issue and consider the consequences of a Democratic success, ostensibly confirming what has been done already. There is no responsible or authoritative planner connected with the Roosevelt administration who would concede that the new laws, however much they upset American social, economic, and legal forms, have made any real progress toward the end desired. The banishment imposed upon Dr. Tugwell until after the election and the silence which prevails with the other theorists do not impair their standing in the affairs of the administration.

The strategy applied in the presidential campaign two years ago was to say as little as possible of the real purposes which were to be unfolded after inauguration. Proof of that can be found by comparing what appeared in the Democratic platform and in the campaign speeches with what was immediately done after inauguration. The economic program of the revolution did not appear in anything that was pledged or said. The revolution burst upon an unprepared people too dumfounded by the swift course of events to realize what was taking place. The present subsidence of the revolutionary talk fits the pattern of what was done two years ago.

The country must be prepared for a repetition of this. Democratic success will be followed by an acceleration of the revolutionary program and the people now must try to discover what is proposed for the future. In this respect there is no better authority than Dr. Tugwell, the temporary exile, because what is now in the new and revolutionary laws of the United States is found in his prospectus as the tentative approach to the final plan of society.

To paraphrase Abraham Lincoln, if you find various artisans approaching a building site, each bringing parts, mortised and framed to articulate in a completed structure, you have a right to assume that a plan had been prepared for this and that it only awaited opportunity. You have before you in the present government measures the foundation and are able to see in the blue prints the structure to be laid upon it.

The various alphabetical combinations which are the working mechanisms of the New Deal do not as yet get anywhere. They only half reveal purpose and their failure to work in their present scope and range does not indicate failure to the New Dealers but only presents the necessity and opportunity for expanding. The NRA, for instance, is only the shadow of an idea. Dr. Tugwell has recognized its value as an approach.

As the NRA tends to monopolistic practices, it is truly revolutionary, because it gathers industry into a seizable form. As it fails in its present shape it merely demands the expansions which will bring theory and form together. The Tugwell cure for industry is found, as he described it, in an allocation of capital by government and the management of industry by technicians and skilled labor. "Capital allocation would depend on knowledge from some planning agency of how much for a measured future ought to be put to one use rather than to another."

It is assumed that the anti-trust acts have been abandoned. It is proposed that a department of federal government be empowered to issue certificates of convenience and necessity to industrial organization. This is a substitute for federal instead of state incorporation and is supposed to get around constitutional objections. Under the licensed system requiring a presentation of facts to show the cause for issuance of a certificate there would be a management coördinating industrial plans, policies, prices, division of markets, and working conditions. The central body Dr. Tugwell suggests be known as the United States Industrial Integration board. It would govern by imposing fines and revoking certificates.

An industrial reserve fund would be built up by an excise tax laid on products of industry. The fund would be divided annually into three parts. One-third would be returned to industries as a reward for compliance, one-third retained in the fund until it was available for dividends, and one-third returned to states which had set up unemployment insurance.

This scheme is the successor in the plans of the Brain Trust to the NRA, which merely scratches the ground and prepares it for seeding. This one instance of what is in the background of the New Deal, granted its success in getting a vote of confidence from the people, is given to illustrate in one phase how tentative the revolution has been thus far. The repeated suggestions and admonitions of the New Dealers have been quite frank, although because they are incomprehensible they may not have been heeded. Even Gen. Johnson has admonished the people that they have not seen anything yet, and there is every reason to believe that the general is not inside the inner counsels and himself does not know the half of it.

"Evidently what we have done is not enough," says Dr. Tugwell. Again, "If we ask why it is with an equipment adequate to this purpose [the complete provision for all human wants] this provision of a minimum of security still remains conspicuously lacking, the answer must be discovered in the kind of political and economic organization which dominates our industrial machine. The system of unregulated business enterprise has failed us in this respect. It must be modified and regulated to repair the failure."

There need be no doubt in the minds of any perceptive American citizen that a Democratic victory in the congressional elections, a victory which can be interpreted as a complete, unqualified indorsement of present federal procedure, will release the complete American revolution.

Some Americans put their reliance in the courts. There is the final appeal under the constitution for constitutional rights. The ballot box is a surer protection. Even of the United States Supreme court Dr. Tugwell expresses a doubt which to him is hopeful. "Whether the Supreme court is prepared to accept the consequences of the reasoning and to permit a far-reaching control, no one can say. Its attitudes have hitherto been somewhat contradictory and uncertain."

Gen. Johnson has disclosed that Mr. Justice Brandeis of the Supreme court has been his counselor in the administration of the NRA. In the light of that Americans can take no chances beyond the ballot box.

Editorial of the Day

SCHOOL MONEY.

[Indianapolis News.]

The Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce has announced that it favors the distribution of the proceeds from the state gross income tax so that a fair proportion of it is returned to the community from which it is drawn. This has raised an issue that has been pending since publication of figures by the income tax division revealed that only about one-third of the new tax collected in Marion county is returned to its school units. Two sides to the question readily can be seen.

Indianapolis, in common with several other urban centers, is contributing a large amount of taxes annually to the support of education in other districts. It has been estimated that gross income tax collected in Indianapolis is about $2,000,000 annually. This amount, formerly remaining in the city and county, now is spent in outside areas. On the other hand, arguments are advanced that stronger communities should aid weaker in support of education, and that much of the tax collected in large urban centers results from business turnover involving purchases and other transactions to which residents of other sections of the state are parties.

The issue logically goes much further than the mere question of tax distribution. The gross income tax was added as a new source of revenue when property taxes failed to produce the amount to which officials had become accustomed. The preference was for a new source of taxation rather than for the degree of retrenchment called for by conditions—although reorganizing the governing machinery was pointed to as the means of accomplishing the required retrenchment. Much of the income tax proceeds goes to township schools, and experience has shown that the multi-headed township administration of schools is an expensive enterprise. Although urban residents probably would agree to the justice of the stronger communities aiding education in the weaker, they have a right to demand assurance of economical spending. They have also valid reasons for objecting to extension of aid to communities better able than they to carry the burden.

WINDOWS OF SCIENCE

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Fourth Article.]

Modern physicists are finding in the framework of their empirical knowledge windows that open upon a new horizon of philosophic idealism. From Scotland one hundred years ago came the voice of the prophet Carlyle crying in the wilderness of the Newtonian mechanical universe that this is but a "Shadow-system gathered round our Me," and that space and time are but thought forms, illusions that hide the "star doomed City of God." One was born about that time who began that slow process of experimental knowledge in electromagnetism that has led today to the all encompassing spectacle of radiation. That was James Clerk Maxwell, mathematician and physicist, also out of Scotland.

Now we have a third voice out of Scotland, giving the new world picture of modern physics, based on a lifetime of research in mathematics and the laws of radiation and enriched by the discoveries in all related fields during the century. It goes straight back to the intuitions of the attic philosopher, who also saw what many scientists now consider on the verge of proof, that the universe is renewed instead of running down. (Read the chapter on Organic Filaments in "Sartor Resartus.")

This age does not accept authority of philosophers, poets, or religious teachers, but it does increasingly yield its interest and faith to the scientists. They are beginning to present something besides a meaningless and mechanistic man and universe. It is only a step from this to Plato and Berkeley, and perhaps to Him who said: "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

Sir James H. Jeans, D. Sc., Sc. D., LL. D., secretary of the Royal society and president of the British Association for the Advancement of Science, in an address at the recent meeting of the association in Aberdeen, after a discussion of the mysterious dual wave and particle nature of light, said:

"In the old physics the perceiving mind was a spectator; in the new it is an actor. Nature no longer forms a closed system detached from the perceiving mind; the perceiver and perceived are interacting parts of a single system. Things still change solely as they are compelled, but it no longer seems impossible that part of the compulsion may originate in our own minds.

"The determinism which appears in the new physics is one of waves, and so, in the last resort, of knowledge. Where we are not ourselves concerned, we can say that event follows event; where we are concerned, only that knowledge follows knowledge. And even this knowledge is only one of probabilities and not of certainties; it is at best a smeared picture of the clear cut reality which we believe to lie beneath.

"The contribution of the new physics to this problem (free will) is not that it has given a decision on a long debated question, but that it has reopened a door which the old physics had seemed to slam and bolt. We have an intuitive belief that we can choose our lunch from the menu or abstain from housebreaking or murder, and that by our own volition we can develop our freedom to choose. We may, of course, be wrong. The old physics seemed to tell us that we were, and that our imagined freedom was all an illusion; the new physics tells us it may not be.

"The old physics showed us a universe which looked more like a prison than a dwelling place. The new physics shows us a building which is certainly more spacious, although its interior doors may be either open or locked—we cannot say. But we begin to suspect it may give us room for such freedom as we have always believed we possessed; it seems possible at least that in it we can mold events to our desire and live lives of emotion, intellect, and endeavor. It looks as though it might form a suitable dwelling place for man and not a mere shelter for brutes.

"Both materialism and matter need to be redefined in the light of our new knowledge. When this has been done the materialist must decide for himself whether the only kind of materialism which science now permits can be suitably labeled materialism, and whether what remains of matter should be labeled as matter or something else: it is mainly a question of terminology.

"What remains is in any case very different from the full blooded matter and the forbidding materialism of the Victorian scientist. His objective and material universe is proved to consist of little more than constructs of our own minds. To this extent, then, modern physics has moved in the direction of philosophic idealism. Mind and matter, if not proved to be of similar nature, are at least found to be ingredients of one single system. There is no longer room for the kind of dualism which has haunted philosophy since the days of Descartes.

"This brings us at once face to face with the fundamental difficulty which confronts every form of philosophic idealism. If the nature we study consists so largely of our own mental constructs, why do our many minds all construct one and the same nature? Why, in brief, do we all see the same sun, moon, and stars?

"I would suggest that physics itself may provide a possible although very conjectural clew. The old particle picture which lay within the limits of space and time broke matter up into a crowd of distinct particles and radiation into a shower of distinct photons. The newer and more accurate wave picture, which transcends the framework of space and time, recombines the photons into a single beam of light and the shower of parallel moving electrons into a continuous electric current.

"Atomicity and division into individual existences are fundamental in the restricted space-time picture, but disappear in the wider and, as far as we know, more truthful picture which transcends time and space. In this atomicity is displaced by what Gen. Smuts would describe as 'holism'—the photons are no longer distinct individuals, each going its own way, but members of a single organization or whole—a beam of light. The same is true, mutatis mutandis, of the electrons of a parallel moving shower. The biologists are beginning to tell us, although not very unanimously, that the same may be true of the cells of our bodies. And is it not conceivable that what is true of the objects perceived may be true also of the perceiving minds? When we view ourselves in space and time we are quite obviously distinct individuals; when we pass beyond space and time we may perhaps form ingredients of a continuous stream of life."

TRY THIS WAY.

"Wife home from the mountains, Jim?"

"Just got back."

"Didn't she stay longer than usual?"

"Yes. Couldn't afford to leave there while there were so many servants to tip. She had to stay until most of them were gone."—Boston Transcript.

How to Keep Well
By Dr. Irving S. Cutter

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Cutter will not make diagnoses or prescribe for individual diseases.

SHINGLES OR HERPES ZOSTER.

NAMES given to diseases are usually associated with the part of the body involved. Sometimes the name is descriptive of the nature of the disease process. For example, tuberculosis acquired its name from the characteristic tubercle or small nodule. Lumbago is a disease involving the lower back, that is, the lumbar region. The word shingles means a girdle and the name attempts to describe the encircling character of the disease.

Shingles may be and often is an extremely painful condition. Fortunately it is more annoying than dangerous, in spite of the tradition that if the eruptions meet in the middle of the body death is sure to follow.

Diagnosis is usually easy. The first symptom is generally pain starting in the region of the spinal column and passing around the body parallel with the ribs. This symptom may be mistaken for arthritis involving the spine, pleurisy, or possibly some manifestation of heart disease. The annoying pain may continue for a week or longer before the watery blisters first make their appearance on the skin.

The particular poison causing the disease appears to have a strong attraction for nerve tissue and it is believed that the manifestations are due to the poison traveling along a nerve fiber that supplies a certain skin area. There is a grouping of the blisters along this pathway. As a rule the eruption is confined to one side of the body, more frequently the right.

The exact cause of the disease is not clear. Careful research by bacteriologists has failed to disclose significant organisms in the blister fluid. Many believe this fact is not important, as the cause may be an organism so small that it cannot be seen by the most powerful microscope.

As far as it is known, shingles is not contagious; that is, the disease is not transmitted in exactly the same form to others. There are, however, known instances in which children have developed chicken-pox shortly after association with a case of herpes zoster. Conversely, cases of chicken-pox are occasionally accompanied by shingles in other members of the family. The suggestion has been offered that chicken-pox and shingles are diseases with the same origin but with different manifestations.

Herpes may show itself in other parts of the body than that supplied by the intercostal nerves. This is particularly true in the ophthalmic type, where there may be involvement of the nerves of the tongue, ear, eye, and scalp. When blisters occur on the conjunctiva or the eyeball they are sometimes serious. Cold sores on the lips and about the mouth are identical in nature with shingles, but are known as herpes simplex. Lesions in this area usually subside in a week or more.

General principles of treatment involve the restoration of body resistance to normal by means of rest, adequate elimination, and a bland diet. As a rule the disease afflicts those who permit themselves to become nervously fatigued and who have lost sleep. In herpes zoster either sodium iodide or potassium iodide is recommended, and light doses of x-ray, ultraviolet light, and the static spark have also been used with success. As the blisters break it is well to cover the area with some dusting powder containing boric acid, zinc oxide, and starch. Salicylates may be required for the relief of pain. The application of spirits of camphor is useful in cold sores.

In individuals who are below par in general health the lesions and the pain may continue for weeks or even months.

BLOOD PRESSURE.

R. B. C. writes: My mother, 69 years old, had a blood pressure of over 200. She was bled and the pressure dropped to 189. In less than two weeks it was 244. She has severe chest pains and pain in the back of her neck and arms. Any exertion causes these spells. A physician said mother has angina. Do you think he means angina pectoris? Is her condition dangerous?

REPLY.

Undoubtedly this is angina pectoris. The condition is most distressing and generally shortens life. The physician in charge must outline the treatment. This should include diet, rest, some medication, and relief from active duties.

CHANGE YOUR DIETS.

M. E. writes: I have been using calamine lotion for pimples on my back and neck but have not found it satisfactory. Do you know of anything I can do?

REPLY.

PARKINSON'S DISEASE.

C. M. O. writes: Recently you had an article on Parkinson's disease. How could I get the prescription you mentioned there?

REPLY.

I will be glad to send details of the treatment to your physician if he will write me and inclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

FROM ACROSS THE SEA

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NANKING, China.—In a beautiful wooded valley outside the ancient city wall of the Chinese national capital, within an area known as the Sun Yat-sen Memorial park, stands an imposing foreign style residence which has been vacant since it was completed and furnished two years ago.

The building is China's "white house," or president's mansion, constructed by the government at considerable expense. It stands vacant because China's present chief executive, the venerable Lin Sen, an unassuming and modest gentleman now 70 years of age, has declined to live in the mansion. As a matter of fact, President Lin Sen spends little time in the capital, preferring to travel about the country. While in Nanking he lives in a cheap little house within the city walls.

The mansion has become a sort of white elephant and the subject of political controversy. Gen. Chiang Kai-shek's political enemies charge that the real object in constructing the imposing building was to provide a residence for the actual ruler of the country, Gen. Chiang himself.

But the generalissimo has also spurned the official residence, preferring to live in a modest house rented from a missionary at Nanchang, Kiangsi province, where his military headquarters are located. When Gen. Chiang is in Nanking, which has been seldom in the last three years, he resides in a one story red brick structure located within the walls of the Central Military academy.

Rumors are in circulation that Gen. Chiang may shortly come to Nanking and stay here permanently. Whether he will put an end to the controversy over the vacant "white house" remains to be seen. That Chiang would be uncomfortable in the executive mansion is likely, because for the last ten years, with the exception of brief periods, he has lived in his military uniform close to his troops.

While he was in Nanking on his recent trip to participate in the tenth anniversary of the National Military academy it was easy to discern who was running the government. The little red brick house in the military compound where he and his wife, the former Meiling Soong, resided was the center of things.

Only a few steps away was the flag bedraped reviewing stand, where the generalissimo and Mme. Chiang and his staf officers received the salutes of some 12,000 cadets, including infantry and cavalry units, artillery, machine and mountain gun detachments, and a fleet of baby tanks recently purchased from Germany. Overhead a dozen war planes, all of American manufacture and piloted by American trained Chinese student pilots, did stunts in formation and singly.

The military show left two definite impressions—the unmistakable military character of the government and the overwhelming importance of Gen. Chiang, who not only commands the military, naval, and air forces but also controls most of the other activities of the government.

Gen. Chiang's success in suppressing the revolt of the famous 19th route army had an undoubted salutary effect on other provincial chieftains who might have contemplated similar adventures. While Chiang was in Nanking they all came trooping to the capital to assure him of their loyalty. Even the Cantonese, most recalcitrant political group in the country, is now showing a spirit of compromise, particularly since Chiang's German trained army and American tutored air squadrons have mopped up the Red bandit gangs in southern Kiangsi province, which is adjacent to the borders of Kwangtung province, in which Canton is located. It is only the military leaders of mountainous Kwangsi province, Generals Bei Tsung-chi and Li Tsung-jen, who still maintain a cool attitude, but they are considered incapable of starting trouble without the coöperation of Canton.

Chiang is now 46 years of age and probably does not weight more than 135 pounds. He appears thinner and shows the effects of life in the open. He has now been at the head of things, militarily speaking, for practically seven years, a longer period than any other Chinese general since the first revolution in 1911. Thus after twenty-three years of revolution and experimentation with various forms of government, ranging from Anglo-Saxon democracy to Russian communism, the Chinese people now find themselves under the practical dictatorship of Chiang Kai-shek.

BUILDING WRECKED.

Chicago, Sept. 14.—[Friend of the People.]—I notified the building department several times that a fire which occurred in the building immediately adjoining my property on the north had damaged the roof of my building. I inspected the building later and found that it was badly damaged and in an unsafe condition. The building should be torn down, because if allowed to remain in its present condition it will be a menace not only to adjoining property but to the public as well. J. W. R.

A three story frame and brick building at No. 12 on this street was wrecked by this department on July 3, 1934. The three story frame and brick building now at No. 14 is now being wrecked on orders of the owner. The building is about 65 per cent wrecked and should be completed in two days. RICHARD E. SCHMIDT, Commissioner of Buildings.

TRUSTEESHIP.

Terre Haute, Ind., Sept. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. What is the duty or obligation of a trustee on a bond issue? 2. Is he required to remain as trustee until issue is paid? 3. If not, must a successor be appointed in his place? 4. Has the bondholder any recourse to obtain payment on such a bond? S. M.

1. Depends on the wording of the instrument creating the trust.

2 and 3. See 1.

4. It seems probable that the trust indenture gives the bondholders certain specified rights. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

SMALL LOANS.

La Salle, Ill., Sept. 14.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I borrowed $50 from a loan bank [automobile loan] for six months, paying $10 per month. They charged me $10 for interest, or 20 per cent, making the loan $60. 1. Can they charge $10 on a $50 loan? I signed notes for the loan. 2. Can they take the car if I am unable to pay the notes? 3. What is the legal rate of interest on loans? J. M.

1. It seems probable that these charges are not justified on other grounds and hence must be regarded as usurious interest.

2. In our opinion they cannot if proper resistance is made.

3. Seven per cent per annum except as to corporations organized under the small loans act. The small loans act says: "It shall be unlawful to make any loan . . . of $300 or less . . . and charge . . . a greater rate of interest than 7 per cent per annum . . . without first obtaining a license from the department of trade and commerce. . . . Every licensee . . . may loan . . . at a rate not to exceed 3½ per cent per month. . . . In addition to the interest . . . no further . . . amount . . . shall be directly or indirectly charged. . . . No person shall owe any licensee at any time more than $300 for principal."

Practically all of the agencies that make small loans at higher rates are unlicensed, so that under the first sentence above quoted the loans are void and the victims are under no legal obligation to repay principal or interest. See Matthews vs. Hayden, No. 36,590, Ill. App. court, First district, decided May 8, 1933. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Address Voice of the People, The Tribune.

THE FEET UPSTAIRS.

Chicago, Sept. 16.—I liked your editorial in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE on "A Little Less Noise," but I often wonder why writers on the subject of noise invariably fail to mention another variety than street noise. It apparently does not occur to them that about half of our apartment house population is either too selfish or too adolescent to live under the roof of a common dwelling. Many occupants of apartments walk like Iowa farm horses, and heavy treading over one's head is infinitly worse than any toot you mention. MARY B. GILSON.

COUNTER PROPOSAL.

Forest Park, Ill., Sept. 18.—I observe a suggestion in your columns to the effect that persons obtaining relief should be obliged to reimburse Uncle Sam as soon as they have been regularly employed in order that unworthy chiselers would be discouraged from accepting unnecessary relief.

This is a good idea except for the fact that such a plan would necessarily penalize the deserving along with the guilty. Another angle to the matter is that thereby millions of families would, in effect, be hypothecating or mortgaging their future incomes. We have had entirely too much hypothecation in the past, so let us rather discourage the practice in the future. Restitution to the government would merely mean continuity of the depression for several years beyond its normal life.

I should like to offer an alternative suggestion:

First, we should prohibit within the boundaries of the United States and its possessions the employment of all women whose husbands receive an income of $30 or more per week. Second, we should prohibit any man or woman from holding more than one position at a time when one jobs pays a weekly stipend of $80 or more. Third, we should reduce to the extent necessary the weekly number of hours any one whomsoever may be permitted to work so as to absorb all existing unemployment. Finally, we should establish a minimum wage of $20 per week for all family heads, 50 cents per hour for all male labor and 35 cents per hour for all female labor.

E. H. THORMAHLEN.

THE SAAR.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 17.—In a recent dispatch from Paris THE TRIBUNE correspondent, Harold Ettlinger, wired that the French foreign office is frankly discussing the possibility of a Nazi putsch in the Saar.

France is certainly trying her best to befuddle the minds of the American reader. In news dispatches it has been told innumerable times by correspondents of American newspapers that the Saar is more than 90 per cent Germanic, that the Saarlanders desire nothing more than a return to the reich and that France has not a ghost of a chance to win the coming election.

I believe anybody will grant the Nazis a certain amount of brains which will enable them to see that by a putsch they would have the whole world against them, while, on the other hand, if they have an election for which they have patiently waited for over 14½ years and which will take place now in four months, they will gain their wish without trouble and bloodshed.

It is France only which would profit by a putsch and may foment one for that reason. ARTHUR KOEGEL.

THE BACHELOR'S LOT.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—Many of our large and well known companies are deliberating discharging men because they are single, no consideration being given for ability or seniority.

This very condition is forcing these men into unhappy marriages to protect their jobs or to get charity that would be denied them in their single condition. Frequently children result from such marriages, thereby adding to the potential lists of charity dependents.

These same firms make no distinction between the married or single when it comes to selling their goods, so why should they discriminate when it comes to employment? INTERESTED.

CONSTITUTION DAY.

Chicago, Sept. 19.—I wonder if any of your bright cartoonists will slam the Republicans for the underhanded way they collected over $100,000 at the Fair on Monday, Constitution day.

What wonderful patriots they must be to use a day like that to swindle Americans out of a dollar. And I wonder what out-of-towners thought when they got into a mad mob that hooted and booed concessionaires because they wouldn't let them in. They did tell people to come back the next day, but what about people from out of town?

If the Democrats ever pulled anything that smelled as bad as that our President would be made a laughing stock by your so-called cartoonists.

The Republicans may think they pulled a smart one, but I bet all of the 200,000 tickets they sold will prove a boomerang. People won't forget in a hurry the mauling they got and they will get even by voting Democrat and I hope they do.

More power to Roosevelt. He never played a lousy trick on the taxpayers yet and he never will. ALICE CONN.

PEONAGE UNDER THE NEW DEAL.

Gary, Ind., Sept. 17.—Just a line to answer Mr. Walter Picken's letter of Sept. 12. I am a native of the south, and never, to my knowledge, was a colored woman put in jail for not cooking for white people. In fact there is always a surplus of colored help to be had at any time.

And I know the men or women given a chance at cotton picking would much rather earn their living than to have to apply for relief. Most any cotton picker who tries can earn five or six dollars a day. If they refuse any kind of work they are not worthy of relief.

I do not call that slavery or peonage, but real Americanism.

The New Deal is not trying to wipe out anything, but is trying to help the working man, regardless of color or creed, to be free from slavery or peonage, as Mr. Picken calls it. We must wake up before it is too late to help our President, who is the first man in the President's chair to even try to help the working man to feel free. And God help us if he fails. MRS. T. O. R.

FAVORITISM ALLEGED.

Chicago, Sept. 17.—I own a small dry goods store in a section where most of my best customers have been thrown out of work since the depression and placed on the charity rolls.

Recently the Red Cross has run short of supplies and have given these people orders which were to be filled by the stores they have patronized in the past.

I have worked on a very close margin of profit to be within the limits of the allotted requirements and even then I have been notified by the Illinois relief commission not to fill any more orders as they have given out contracts to certain large department stores.

I therefore voice my protest that there is no equality; the big fellow who does not need this business gets it all, while the little fellow, who has carried the neighborhood trade on his books for credit and in many instances donated to the needy, gets nothing. How can we expect to overcome this depression when we do not get a chance? SAUL ROSENBERG.

YOUR HERITAGE.

Toledo, O., Sept. 16.—In today's issue the editorial on "Your Heritage" is a masterpiece. It is one of the most concrete, intelligent, stirring expositions of that priceless heritage—Liberty—that I have ever read or heard, with the exception of those parts of the constitution which you refer to—simple, solemn, and with a clarity the purpose of which the whole world has acclaimed.

If we only had more editorial writers such as THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE employs, and more papers whose management dares to print the truth there would be no danger in the future of this country such as now confronts it in the policies and acts of the New Deal administration. C. J. ANDERSON.

UNCLE SAM PAYS GENEROUSLY FOR SHOVELING DIRT

Mound City, Ill., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Uncle Sam is paying generously for the moving of dirt in CCC camps, according to the figures recently made public by the unit at the Mound's camp. It is costing Uncle Sam about a penny and two-tenths every time one of these young men moves a shovel of dirt, and it is costing him some six and three-tenths cents every time a cubic foot is moved, and by cubic yards it would be just 27 times that amount.

The figures given out by the camp after three weeks of work do not go into details. They say that 19,380 square yards of earth were moved and 110 dams, and 33 yards of diversion ditch were built. This was the work of 200 men for three weeks.

No Costs Given.

No costs are given. The government is seemingly not sending out cost sheets to the press these days.

But facts lead to other things. The 200 men got $2 per day for 2 days. On top of this, a crew is kept in camp and there are officers, engineers, parties out locating projects, trucks, clothes, equipment, and such things. The cost per man will easily run $2 per day, and one can add in an extra crew of 50 for cooks and officers at a higher salary, so that the cost of 200 men for 21 days at $2 per day is three weeks is $8,400. Then add about $2,600 for officers, engineers and other things, even compensation, and there is $11,000 cost for three weeks.

One might add the transportation cost, home and back, to the list of costs and the cost of the overhead departments which go all the way back to Washington.

19,380 Square Yards Moved.

The boys moved 19,380 square yards of earth in this time. This, roughly, is about four acres of ground. The earth is moved in this manner: On farms, which are badly washed and gullied, and which for the most part are not worth much over $10 per acre, the boys start in by stopping these gullies. They shovel in the sides of the gully and then begin edging back, making a wide and shallow ditch. The earth moved will not be a foot deep over the entire surface.

The cost of moving this earth and building the dams was $11,000. The cost per cubic foot of earth was 6.3 cents. The cost Uncle Sam paid per shovelful was a little over 1.2 cents.

A man working seven hours per day "tosses out" a space of 58.1 cubic feet. That is, a space about 5 feet wide, 12 feet long and 1 foot deep.

Dams Are of Woven Wire.

The 113 dams are constructed of woven wire and are not hard to build. Probably five men in five days could do this with ease, while the 33 yards of diversional ditch is really but a task for two men for more than two days.

This means that 200 men in 15 days, working 40 hours in all, actually shoveled a foot of earth off of a field less than four acres in size at a cost of $2,750 per acre. They did not shovel it off. They merely moved it about two to five feet to one side or the other.

Figuring it another way: It is highly improbable that this ditch work was done on areas that drained over 1,000 acres of poor land. The work done, then, exceeded the value of the land.

This work was done on land privately owned and the benefits of this $11,000 expenditure in three weeks, whatever they may be, go to the land owner. The man who has neglected his soil and farm is helped.

At a fraction over a penny per shovelful, a working man could earn $6 per hour, or $48 per day, working eight hours; and Uncle Sam is paying at the rate of $6 per hour for moving dirt.

PAROLE DOCTOR AFTER 22 YEARS; SLEW HIS BRIDE

Twenty-two years after entering the state penitentiary at Joliet for the murder of his bride in a bigamous marriage, Dr. Harry Elgin Webster, 52 years old, received word of his parole yesterday. He was sentenced in 1912 for stabbing to death Bessie Kent Webster, a young girl whom he married on Jan. 14 of that year, ten days after his first bride went to visit her family.

Throughout the years in prison Webster was known as a model prisoner. He kept up his studies in medicine and was allowed to use the prison X-ray machine. Twice when epidemics threatened the inmates he was called on to assist the prison doctors. Dr. Webster also learned the trade of automobile mechanic.

He was eager yesterday to return to his home at Dixon and to make an effort to rehabilitate himself. Until two years ago, when ill health caused her to stop, his 82 year old mother visited him frequently.

Dr. Webster was a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and of Rush Medical college. He was attached to the Polyclinic hospital at the time of his conviction.

BARUCH ATTACKS LLOYD GEORGE'S 'SLUR' ON WILSON

Says President Did Try Hard to Win War.

BY CHESLY MANLY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hyde Park, N. Y., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—A sharp retort to the recent charges of David Lloyd George, war time prime minister of Great Britain, that Woodrow Wilson failed to throw his heart and soul into the winning of the world war, was delivered here today by Bernard M. Baruch after he had conferred with President Roosevelt.

Calls Lloyd George Disappointing.

"If the press dispatches are correct," said Mr. Baruch, referring to the charges in Lloyd George's memoirs that Wilson prolonged the war by his failure to go into its wholeheartedly, "it is very disappointing on the part of Mr. Lloyd George. His statements are uninformed and without basis in fact. Lloyd George did a great job in the world war, but when he takes the position that America didn't throw itself wholeheartedly into the struggle he is simply off his base.

"He knows and everybody knows that the allies wanted first and foremost materials and money. He knows and everybody knows that we not only furnished materials and money, which engulfed us in our present troubles, but when the war closed we had as many men in the trenches as England.

The Answer Was "Yes."

"I remember that one of the high officers of the British government reported that when he asked whether we could send troops over the sea, armed or unarmed, the simple reply was 'Yes.' We filled the allied lines from the Vosges to the sea.

"The prime minister [Lloyd George] told friends of mine that no potentate in the world would have dared to take such action without first consulting his cabinet."

"His hatred of war took the form of throwing as little of hi spirit, zeal, and force into its prosecution as he could consistently with his responsibility as chief executive of the republic."

U. S. Seizes Suspect in Song Publishing Fraud

Bresland, with Walter E. Sickels and Louis A. Webb, the other two, formerly of the National Composers' organization and the Artcraft Publishing company, are accused of sending out false information in circulars to would-be song writers.

CHURCH FREEDOM PLEDGED BY NAZI RELIGIOUS CHIEF

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Sixty thousand German Christians assembled on the eve of Dr. Ludwig Mueller's ceremonial installation as Evangelical reichsbishop were told tonight that the Nazi government "does not intend to interfere with religious freedom."

"But," menacingly added Dr. August Jaeger, Nazi commissioner for Protestant churches in Prussia, "if religion is used as a foil to sabotage the government, of course the state must interfere."

Worries Over Church's Future.

Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior, sounded a note of concern over the church's future.

"The present tension in the German Protestant church fills me with great apprehension," said Frick, expressing the hope the convention would promote peace in the church.

The vast church meeting appeared more like a political gathering than a religious affair. The Swastika cross was dominantly apparent. "With Hitler and Luther for faith and the nation" was the slogan.

The first major concentration of Mueller's followers, it was intended to offset the opposition from Württemberg and Bavaria which recently greeted Mueller's ousting of two bishops.

Opposition Rallies Forces.

Mueller's opponents, however, hailed the ceremonial day as a rallying call for further opposition. They have declared open rebellion against his suspension of defiant pastors outside the Nazi ranks.

Tomorrow's installation ceremony, scheduled previously and then postponed when the anti-Mueller controversy gained in rancor, was generally believed to be Hitler's attempt to solve the quarrels in the church, particularly since the Nazis fear religious opposition will alienate voters in the Saar plebiscite next January.

Opposition Leader Jailed.

NUREMBURG, Germany, Sept. 22.—[U. P.]—The leader of the Protestant opposition in Bavaria, Pastor Kaessler, was placed in protective custody today on a charge of "indecent political statements." He had publicly denounced the recently published testament of President von Hindenburg naming Adolf Hitler as his successor as a falsification.

LINE OF HORSES STAYS WITH SAME FAMILY 100 YEARS

Bloomington, Ill., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Ten generations in one family, representing 100 years of faithful service, is the family history of Old Short, 22, beloved horse of the Samuel C. Baker family of McLean, Ill.

Just 100 years ago the maternal ancestor of Old Short, known as Dappled Lucy, helped draw the covered wagon which carried Samuel Baker and his family from Ohio to a pioneer home near McLean. He was a grandparent of Samuel C. Baker, owner of Old Short. Samuel C. is the son of Joseph Baker, who was one year old when the family came to Illinois.

Dappled Lucy was a Morgan, but cross-breeding through a century has produced in Old Short the Percheron type.

TYPHOON DEATH TOLL IN JAPAN IS PLACED AT 1,661

Rebuilding of Ruined Areas Under Way.

TOKIO, Sept. 22.—(AP)—Placing the typhoon death toll at 1,661, Japan's home ministry tonight began the grim task of relief and rehabilitation in vast industrial areas of the nation laid waste by yesterday's catastrophe.

The cabinet in a four hour session debated the possibility of convoking parliament to vote funds for relief. Decision was deferred while Home Minister Fumio Goto proceeds to Osaka Sunday to investigate.

Government Compiles Figures.

The following compilation was made by the government: Injured, 5,414; missing, 562; buildings destroyed, 18,391; buildings washed away, 862; buildings damaged, 22,037; buildings flooded, 169,873.

No Americans were injured or suffered serious loss, according to a check at the United States embassy. United States Ambassador Joseph C. Grew and Mrs. Grew, who left Kobe the day before the typhoon on the steamer Fuso Maru for Dairen and China, were reported safe. Steamship officials said the vessel missed the main typhoon and passed through its fringe yesterday morning without damage.

The army continued to distribute supplies to 200,000 homeless and three destroyers sailed from the Kure naval base laden with medical necessities and other supplies for Osaka.

Blow to Munitions Program.

In addition to enormous industrial damage, calculated tentatively at $90,000,000, the army's ambitious munitions program received a setback. Scores of factories turning out weapons and ammunition were destroyed or damaged, especially on the Osaka waterfront where inrushing sea waters ruined machinery worth millions of yen.

No estimate of loss of life at sea was yet possible. The home ministry listed 4,164 small craft, mostly fishing boats, wrecked or missing, with the total steadily mounting.

Long lists of property damage still being compiled showed 30 out of Japan's 46 prefectures suffered almost as heavily as the heavily populated industrial areas. Losses to farmers and fishermen in Osaka prefecture alone were estimated at $6,000,000.

Baron Kischizaemon Sumitomo, Osaka's wealthiest capitalist, donated $300,000 for typhoon relief, the largest private contribution of its kind ever recorded in Japan.

BERLIN POLICE CHIEF RESTRICTS ACTIVITIES OF JEWISH YOUTHS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—Admiral von Levetzow, Berlin's chief of police, today issued a decree which drastically restricts outdoor activities of Jewish youths.

Jewish youth hikers are forbidden to carry flags or banners. They must not wear uniforms or badges even if covered with civilian clothes. They must not march together or indulge in military parades or field exercises so strongly advocated for other German youths. They are forbidden to live together in community dwellings or to stay over night in groups in private rooms or tents. Finally, they must not issue any publications.

Physical exercises, walks, excursions, and hiking are still permitted provided they are "kept within small circles and avoid any demonstrative character."

Violations of these orders will result in arrest. Similar regulations were issued in the Potsdam area.

GIRL, 4, BURNED TO DEATH.

Clarinda, Ia., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Betty Huffman, 4, was burned to death here today when fire destroyed the Hoffman home.

RADICALS DODGE POLICE; MARCH ON N. Y. CITY HALL

New York, Sept. 22.—[Special.]—More than one thousand radicals, eluding heavy police guards at a mass-meeting in Union Square, made a forbidden march from there on city hall today.

The demonstrators took advantage of a sudden downpour of rain to outwit the police. For more than an hour, they had been massed in the north plaza of Union Square park, listening to harangues by their leaders. As the drizzle which had prevailed all morning turned into a downpour, Richard J. Sullivan, secretary of the unemployed council, jumped to the speaker's stand.

"The delegation assigned come with me!" shouted Sullivan. "The rest of you get to City hall the best way you can!"

The radicals streamed away, down both sides of the square. Once out of the park they quickly formed into parade line and marched south at double quick. Chanting: "We're marching without a permit!" "We're marching without a permit!"

The demonstrators marched into City Hall park. From there they sent a group of five to city hall. This group was permitted to leave a note for Mayor La Guardia, who is out of town, informing him the united action committee on work relief and unemployment, which backed today's demonstration, would send a delegation to next Tuesday's hearing on the relief tax bills.

Four Men Seize Driver of Mail Truck; Take Sack

Coffeyville, Kas., Sept. 22.—(AP)—A United States mail truck was robbed of a single mail pouch here early today by four men who seized the driver, Ralph Woohlers, 40, and took him in their car to South Coffeyville where he was released. The men were believed to have fled toward Tulsa, Okla. Postal inspectors said there was "nothing of any great value taken."

Cut in Penalty Hastens Collections.

Collection of 1932 taxes have amounted to $119,935,653, or 55.05 per cent of the levy, County Treasurer Thomas D. Nash reported yesterday. Uncollected 1932 taxes total $97,927,832.

The treasurer pointed out that the collection of 1932 real estate taxes, which makes up the major portion of the levy, now amounts to $78,088,150, or 55.55 per cent of the levy of $140,578,201 assessed against real estate.

Mr. Nash explained that the announcement that only half of the one per cent a month penalty would be assessed against delinquent 1932 taxes has been responsible for the increase in the payment of taxes. Penalty date for the last instalment of 1932 real estate taxes was July 1.

Collections for Five Years.

Collections of real estate taxes during last week were $1,577,548, making a total of $217,724,053 taken in since enforcement of the Kerner-Skarda act began April 28, 1933.

Nash Distributes $1,284,000.

Treasurer Nash yesterday distributed $1,284,104 in 1931 and 1932 tax collections which had been withheld by his office because of the protests filed againsnt the 1931 and 1932 tax rates. The allocation of the tax money was made possible through the disposition of the rate cases two weeks ago by County Judge Jarecki.

Distribution of the tax collections was as follows: City, $577,943; state, $195,231; county, $174,267; sanitary district, $279,597; forest preserve, $57,064.

The treasurer reported that he is now withholding only $250,000 in 1931 tax collections and $1,829,330 in 1932 taxes which will amply cover the amounts in litigation while appeals are being taken from several of Judge Jarecki's rulings.

Two Seized with Bogus Bills Held to Grand Jury

Davenport, Ia., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Solly Petrillo and Sam Annucci of Sterling, Ill., arrested recently in Muscatine with 82 counterfeit $10 bills in their possession, were arraigned before Police Magistrate John Hornby today and held to the federal grand jury. Bonds were fixed at $20,000 each. The two pleaded not guilty.

$6,760,000 PROVIDED FOR REDEMPTION OF SCHOOL TAX WARANTS

Tax monies freed by the county treasurer during the last month have provided the board of education with $6,760,000 to redeem outstanding tax anticipation warants and to pay accrued interest on the warants, according to Harry J. Brackett, school auditor.

"We have our entire staf at work figuring interest charges due and preparing for payment," Mr. Brackett said yesterday. "The work will take a number of days since we must also keep up our efforts to balance books following the $26,300,000 pay day for teachers and school employés last month."

Warant redemption and interest payments will cover a five year period in the following amounts: 1928, $84,902; 1929, $289,678; 1930, $530,574; 1931, $529,645; 1932, $5,328,226.

There are at present no figures available on the total amount of school tax warants outstanding, Mr. Brackett said.

2 U. S. Bags Entered in 22d Contest.

WARSAW, Sept. 23.—[Sunday.]—Southwesterly winds prevailed early today as aeronauts prepared their balloons for the twenty-second race for the Gordon Bennett cup, to start this afternoon.

Weather predictions indicated that the balloons would be carried by a gentle breeze through a clear sky into Russia.

As the hour for inflating the balloons approached race officials were uncertain as to whether the Spanish entry of Julio Gillen and Juan Jauregui would be permitted to enter the contest. The balloonists announced their intention to participate twenty-one days after entries had closed. First it was decided to allow them to compete, but later they were ruled out at the insistence of the French Air club. An effort was being made to persuade the French to withdraw their objections.

Nations Represented.

If the Spanish balloons participate there will be thirty-seven navigators, four from the United States, in the race. They represent nine nations.

Representing the United States will be C. H. Kendall and H. T. Orville, in the balloon United States Navy, and G. Hineman and M. F. Vanik, whose craft is the Buffalo Courier-Express.

The navy aeronauts, anticipating a hard fought race to recapture the prize from Poland, arrived Sept. 12 to supervise the unloading of the bag and prepare themselves. Even earlier than the Americans were the Italians, F. Amoroso and A. Pirazzoli.

Tribute to Polish Balloonists.

Lieut. Kendall, a member of the American team that placed second last year, said that he considered the Polish balloonists "the most serious competitors."

"I have much respect for the Poles," he said. "The fact that Capt. Burzynski and Capt. Hynek, who won last year's race in one balloon, are now piloting separate craft makes our situation more dangerous.

"Instead of one serious contender, the Poles now have two. We have strong chances for success, however."

WOMAN'S DEATH HELD SUICIDE.

A verdict of suicide was returned yesterday by a coroner's jury in the death of Miss Helen Ziemba, 34 years old, 1744 Washington boulevard, a nursemaid, who died early yesterday in the Washington Boulevard hospital after she slashed her throat with a razor.

EXHIBIT SHOWS WAYS TO HEAT YET SAVE COAL

City's Smoke Department Backs Fair Display.

By means of motion pictures and electrical "scenes-in-action," lessons in the proper methods of stoking furnaces are being given daily at A Century of Progress Exposition. They are supplementary to the work of Chicago's smoke abatement department in ridding the city's atmosphere of pollution and have, according to the sponsors, a dollars and cents value to home owners and industries.

The exhibit, which stands in the General Exhibits building, was promoted by Frank A. Chambers, head of the city department, and 27 business firms and organizations. Under the direction of H. D. Blackwell, managing engineer, its slogan of "Smoke is waste" recurs frequently. It stresses the point that the elimination of smoke means a saving in fuel and other bills, and pays a dividend in better health.

Facts Are Vividly Set Forth.

Never before, Mr. Blackwell says, have the disadvantages of air pollution and the benefits of eradicating its cause been so completely portrayed in one exhibit. So far over two millions have been attracted to the display, and have studied or observed the charts, graphs, equipment, and mechanical devices.

These people have seen among other things a hand operated model of a mechanical coal stoker, scenes showing methods of firing high and low volatile coals, slides portraying how fires should be built and refueled, photo-electric smoke indicators, and methods of trapping dust in the air and giving it a scrubbing.

A unique method of projecting moving pictures out through the fire door of a 2,000 pound heating boiler educates the visitor to the need of a smoke abatement department.

Lungs Depict the Issue.

These pictures cover the Chicago industrial and domestic smoke problem, the work of the department in abating smoke, and the special sources of air pollution such as street sweepings, sand and coal piles, gravel roofs, and destructive conflagrations.

As vivid evidence as any in this exhibit is the displayed comparison of the lungs of a man who lived and died in the country and those of a city dweller. The lungs of the rural resident are grayish in color, but those of the city inhabitant are almost jet black with an accumulation of carbon and dirt breathed into them from the city air.

Simple lessons are given by the slides and realistically lighted furnace fires, and by following the instructions that are alongside smoke can be abolished and fuel bills curbed, according to Mr. Blackwell, if the heating equipment is in good mechanical condition.

Cites Comparative Data.

Some of the facts quoted by Mr. Blackwell were gained in the city-wide survey of smoke conditions carried on as a Civil Works administration project last winter under the direction of Mr. Chambers. The data assembled then have been compared with the survey of 1911, and they show the need of educating the home owner and the apartment building janitor in proper firing methods.

Locomotives	43.0	2.8
Homes including four flats	2.0	20.4
Large apartment buildings	2.5	43.0
Power and industrial	30.0	25.0
Metallurgical	12.5	2.4
Marine group	4.0	0.9

The city smoke department has held each winter a school for janitors. This work could be aided, according to Mr. Blackwell, by the establishment of a smoke abatement institute. Few people realize, he said, that a fire should burn downward—always being started at the top—so that the smoke and gases are consumed in the flames.

PHYSICIANS FIGHT FEDERAL HEALTH INSURANCE MOVE

Draft Own Plan; Call British System Failure.

Opposition to the socialization of medicine through the passage of a proposed health insurance law by congress was voiced by physicians from all parts of the United States yesterday in the closing meeting of the conference of secretaries of state medical associations held in the Palmer house under the auspices of the American Medical association.

A committee appointed by President Roosevelt now is investigating the health insurance plan. The physicians say the medical profession in order to preserve its ethical principles must hasten to form an alternative plan to lay before the governmental committees.

Call British Plan Failure.

The discussion followed the reading of an exhaustive study of the health insurance plan followed by Great Britain in which its author, Dr. R. G. Leland, director of the American Medical association's bureau of medical economics, produced evidence to show that while the British system may have helped physicians somewhat, it had failed in providing general medical service to the public, which was its aim.

Dr. A. T. McCormack of Louisville, editor of the Kentucky Medical Journal, assailed "this proposition by which the medical profession is to be exploited under the control of social workers."

Urge Counter Proposal.

"Unless we lay a concrete proposal for legislation before the governmental committee and congress," he continued, "the bill which meets the approval of the President will be passed by special rule like all the rest of these revolutionary acts under the guise of an emergency.

"That is what we are up against. I believe in the medical organization and that physicians should control health departments. The medical organization of the United States should control medical service in accordance with traditional principles.

Oppose State Control.

"I am opposed to state control in any form in the practice of medicine. We may have to accept some compromise, but let's get busy and see that we are not destroyed as was the medical association in Great Britain.

"Let us go before congress with an alternative plan which can be enacted and made effective, giving the medical profession the controling influence in medical service. Let us not fool ourselves as the British have done, that health insurance is a means of improving health."

BOGAN URGES SPECIAL KINDNESS TO PROBLEM CHILD IN CITY SCHOOLS

A plea for special attention to the problem children of the Chicago schools was issued yesterday by William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools, in his annual address before all of the principals of the system at Fullerton hall in the Art institute.

"Principals and teachers minimize the value of education when they abandon hope for this type of pupil," Mr. Bogan declared. "I should have them come to school day after day and year after year though they learn nothing from textbooks, because the influence of a teacher, a good teacher, is worth more than that of all the formal lessons that may be taught.

"Such children should not be shunned because of their peculiarities, but rather should receive sympathy and help."

More than 400 principals attended the gathering, held annually to outline procedure for the school year. Included were 138 principals recently restored to schools by the board of education.

MARTIN INSULL TRIAL EXPECTED TO BE DELAYED

Seek to Avoid Conflict with Sam's Case.

The embezzlement trial of Martin Insull, set for tomorrow, probably will be postponed until after the conclusion of the mail fraud trial of his brother, Samuel Insull, and 15 co-debendants, which is to begin in federal court on Oct. 2, according to an announcement by State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney yesterday.

The announcement followed a conference of the state's attorney with United States Attorney Dwight H. Green. Several witnesses will be necessary to both cases, and District Attorney Green asked that the government case be given preference, Courtney said, since there are 16 defendants in the federal case and only one in the state court. Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan of the Criminal court will be asked to continue the Martin Insull case.

First Assistant States' Attorney Crowley denied applicability of the law that allows a defendant a discharge if he demands trial in 4 successive months without getting it.

Martin Insull is charged with embezzling $378,000 from the Middle West Utilities company, of which he was president.

Objections to the allowance of a $10,000 fee to Attorney Henry I. Green of Urbana, Ill., for representing Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley in the famous "town meeting" were filed yesterday with Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson by Attorney Samuel A. Ettelson.

Yesterday also attorneys for Clarence W. Sills, one of 15 co-defendants of Samuel Insull in the mail fraud case, notified the prosecution of intention to file a petition for a separate trial before Judge Wilkerson.

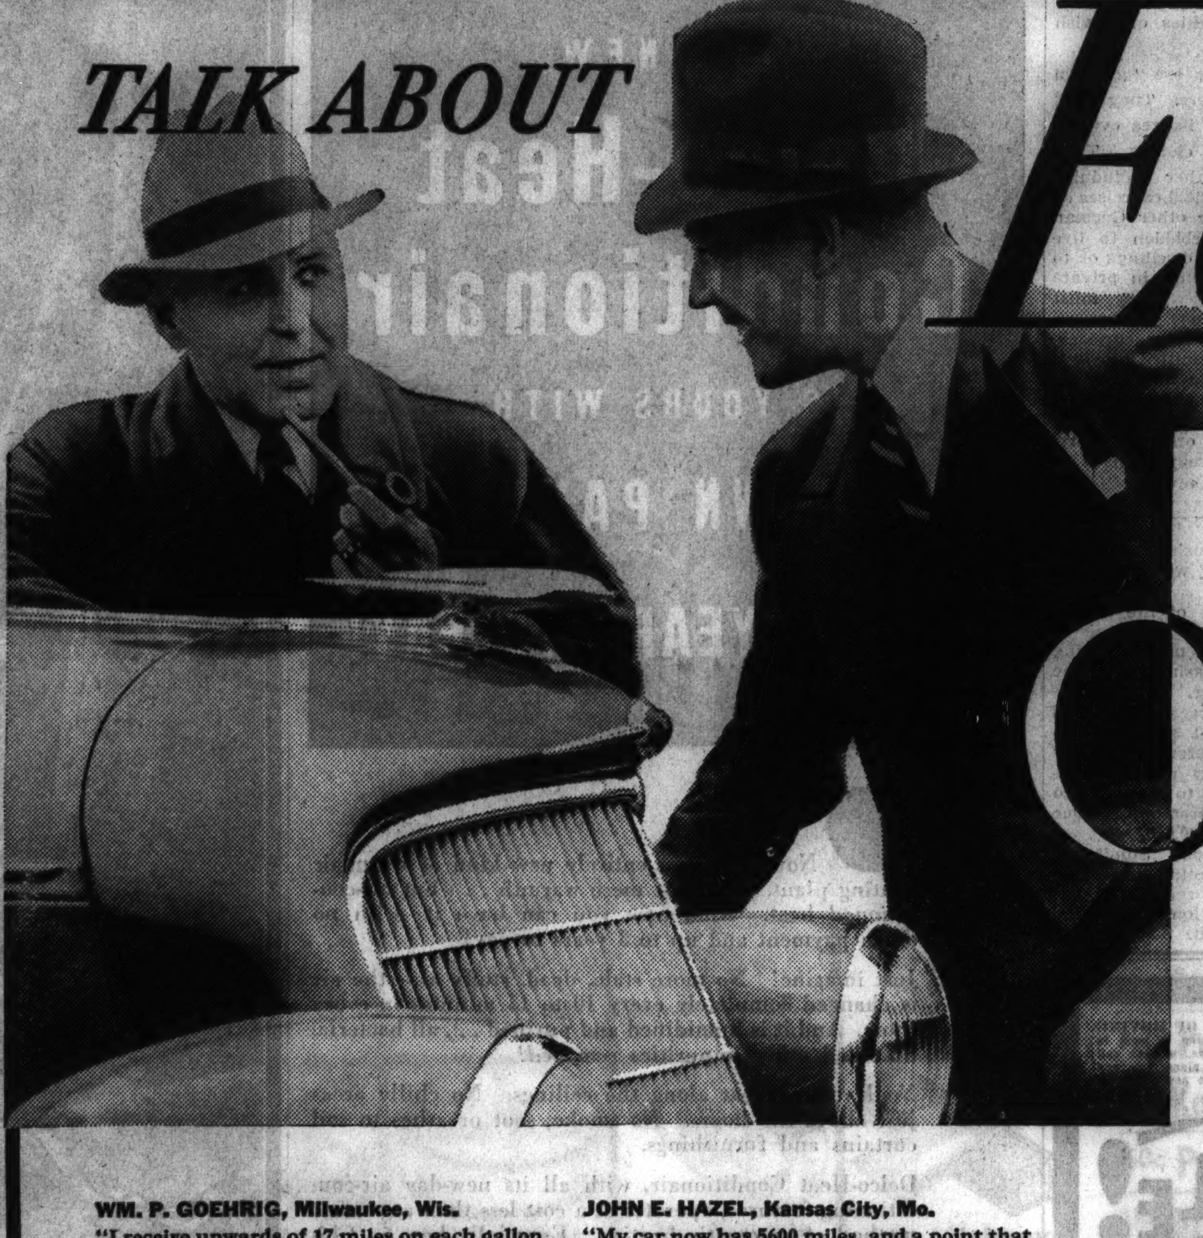
TALK ABOUT ECONOMY!



read what OLDSMOBILE owners say

Here is conclusive evidence that Oldsmobile is a really economical car to own, not only from the standpoint of low first cost and famous time-proved dependability, but also from the standpoint of day after day operating economy. Here is the evidence—direct from owners themselves—taken from only a few of the hundreds of letters received from satisfied owners everywhere. Read what they say. Then drive this car, and you'll know why Oldsmobile has already doubled its sales this year . . . and why this remarkable car has the highest owner loyalty of any car in America!

WM. P. GOEHRIG, Milwaukee, Wis.
"I receive upwards of 17 miles on each gallon of gasoline and the oil consumption is so low that no oil need be added between the regular oil changes. The safety features of this car, namely the hydraulic brakes, are a great comfort, and in appearance I consider the Oldsmobile the best looking car on the road."

E. L. OPPENHEIM, Fresno, Calif.
"Being a traveling man and having my car loaded with samples I get 17 miles to the gallon. Knee-Action I believe to be the most marvelous improvement in modern motor transportation . . . Oldsmobile is a car you can depend on every day in the week."

RUSSELL STROUSE, Pottsville, Pa.
"I have driven my car over 15,000 miles and have never averaged less than 17 miles per gallon of gasoline. It is the smoothest performing, easiest riding and easiest controlled car I have ever owned . . ."

L. H. VAN RIPER, Atlanta, Ga.
"Three times I have checked the gas consumption per mile on the highway, and to get between 18 and 19 miles per gallon is something I had not anticipated. On long trips one does not have that tired feeling at the end of the journey . . . the 1934 Oldsmobile has reached a high mark in dependability and smooth performance."

JOHN E. HAZEL, Kansas City, Mo.
"My car now has 5600 miles, and a point that is particularly satisfactory to me is the gas mileage of better than 18 miles per gallon. The hydraulic brakes have not needed any adjustment during this period, which is a new experience for me."

A. T. FORSYTH, Buffalo, N. Y.
"The kind of Knee-Action Oldsmobile has makes riding a pleasure over any kinds of roads. And what a motor—smooth, fast and powerful—and I am getting better than 17 miles to the gallon."

G. I. DRENNAN, Field Supt. Walla Walla, Wash.
"Operating expenses of Oldsmobiles we use are under 3c per mile. Operating expenses include gas, oil, tires, repairs, licenses and insurance—in fact, everything that pertains to operating cost with the exception of depreciation. To be exact, this cost is $0.0289. In comparison with other similar equipment we find this to be very favorable to Oldsmobile."

N. J. VERSTEEG, Des Moines, Ia.
"I have just completed an 1100-mile trip which I believe is a fair test . . . at an average speed of 55 miles per hour my gas average was 18.7 miles per gallon. And as to oil I used one quart. On this trip I had four passengers and luggage weighing 750 pounds."

W. JACK THOMAS, Pittsburgh, Pa.
"I drive in excess of 30,000 miles a year, and at all times my Oldsmobiles have proven far more reasonable to operate than the theoretically more economical cars. . . . The 1934 Oldsmobile excels them all for driving and riding qualities . . . hydraulic brakes are a very much appreciated feature also."

W. F. DEETH, San Antonio, Tex.
"A point which has surprised me as much as anything about the car is the economy of operation, averaging 17 miles per gallon, and which is indeed most satisfactory. I am particularly impressed with the much improved riding of the car resulting from the independent front wheel suspension."

Your old car will be worth less next year . . . why wait to turn it in when Oldsmobile gives you every advanced feature now.

15 STATES FREE DAIRY HERDS OF TUBERCULOSIS

Chicago Center of Huge Pure Milk Area.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Back in 1917 a nation-wide campaign was launched to get rid of cattle infected with tuberculosis. Veterinarians and others have hammered away at their task until today fifteen states are on what is known as the accredited list. Illinois is the fifteenth state to be added to the list of states in which the tuberculin test has been applied to all breeding and dairy cattle, and the number reacting on the last test was below a half of one per cent of the total tested in each county.

R. B. SMITH.

The modified states in order of accreditation are: North Carolina, Maine, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin, North Dakota, Idaho, Utah, Nevada, New Hampshire, Kentucky, West Virginia, Washington, and Illinois.

Three Million Infected.

Out of more than 115 million head of cattle tested approximately 3 million reacted to the test, indicating they were infected with tuberculosis. Chicago is in the center of the largest accredited area in the world. All of the states in the city's milk producing area—Illinois, Wisconsin, Indiana, and Michigan—are among the accredited states.

The effect of this eradication work in removing tuberculosis animals has been pronounced in reducing the percentage of market classes of cattle and hogs condemned as inedible, because they were found to be infected with tuberculosis. Several years ago many carcasses of meat animals were condemned for this disease. Official records show an extremely low percentage of condemned carcasses for the year ending June 30, 1934; in fact, the percentage of diseased carcasses is almost negligible.

Consumers Assured Safety.

"The consumers of meat can now be assured of a very wholesome product," according to H. R. Smith, live stock commissioner of the National Live Stock exchange.

Two more states will soon be added to the accredited list when Iowa and Minnesota tests are completed. All but six counties in Minnesota and fourteen in Iowa already are accredited.

According to Mr. Smith, the Chicago Live Stock exchange and other marketing interests of Chicago were first to urge the need of a national campaign of eradication. He said that in 1916 a committee representing these interests was appointed and a fund raised with which to do systematic educational work and to procure legislation to meet the needs of the situation. The various farm organizations, including the Illinois Agricultural association, the agricultural journals, and the city press have taken active part in promoting this program in coöperation with other agencies.

Government control of production and marketing of vegetables was severely condemned by members of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America in their convention held recently at Toronto, Canada. Delegates at the meeting passed a resolution asking for repeal of the agricultural adjustment act.

Growers Condemn AAA.

The association members believe that growers themselves as individuals or through their coöperative groups can better regulate their own business than any outside organization. It is their view that the marketing agreements of the AAA "are not feasible and are unsound in governmental coercion of minority growers. . . ."

The following is quoted from the association's resolution:

"Crop Control—We are opposed to governmental control of production and marketing of vegetables such as has been undertaken for basic commodities. We are convinced that growers themselves as individuals or as coöperative groups can better regulate their own business than any outside organization, considering the public interest as well as their own. We accordingly favor the repeal of the AAA act.

"Marketing Agreements—We favor the development of coöperative effort by growers for regulation from within of their own business and we believe that such coöperation can be of great use to the consumer and the producer.

"We believe that marketing agreements, however desirable the objectives, are not feasible and are unsound in governmental coercion of minority growers who are entitled to exercise their own best judgment in the conduct of their business."

5,000 to Gather 500 Pounds Apiece.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Seven hundred acres of relief gardens in 12 fields in Cook county are furnishing a supply of food for this fall and winter to more than 5,000 gardeners who have been tending the plots since they were planted last spring. In addition, more than 6,000 of the 7,557 home gardeners supplied with seeds from the Cook County Relief administration are harvesting fully as much produce from their individual plots.

J. F. Machotka, director, and P. J. O'Malley, supervisor of the 12 fields, estimated yesterday that the average harvest in the large gardens would be 500 to 600 pounds of vegetables per gardener. Heat and drouth reduced the normal yields of sweet corn, greens, radishes, carrots, beets, kohlrabi, turnips, tomatoes, cabbage, and other crops.

List of Fields in County.

The Cook county fields include the following number of acres and the number of plots: Speedway, 152 acres, 1,334 gardeners; Irving Park, two fields totaling 100 acres, 800 gardeners; Cermak field, 45 acres, 350 gardeners; Riverdale, 45 acres, 350 gardeners; Wolf road, two fields, 37 acres, 300 gardeners, and another two fields at Wolf road, 78 acres, 650 gardeners; McCook, 59 acres, 450 gardeners; Summit, 78 acres, 650 gardeners; Municipal airport, 65 acres, 450 gardeners.

Four shifts of unemployed are operating a canning center at Brookfield, where produce from all of the 12 fields is being transported for preserving in tin cans for winter consumption. Mr. Machotka estimates that the end of the harvest will have seen at least 250,000 cans of vegetables cooked and sealed. Under the work relief project, produce is taken from the gardeners who are given credit for the number of pounds of vegetables they turn in. The relief agency then retains one can in every five. This 20 per cent of the canned produce will be used this winter to feed additional unemployed at relief shelters.

Workers Formerly Wealthy.

Lawyers, preachers, laborers, and representatives of many trades are included in the gardeners who are completing their harvests. The average gardener has a family of five, according to Mr. O'Malley. These gardeners begin the season often in a sullen mood, but after working for a time in the open air, away from home, they change their attitudes, he finds.

Even a former United States senator, now about 80 years old and formerly worth hundreds of thousands of dollars, is among the relief client gardeners, according to O'Malley. This man is at the Irving Park field gardens.

The garden work, which is sponsored by the garden committee of the Cook County Relief administration, is a part of the Illinois Emergency Relief administration's program.

Cites Benefits To Morale.

Warner G. Baird, chairman of the garden committee, in surveying the work at the gardens yesterday, pointed out that more than a saving to the county and a supply of food for the unemployed are obtained. Even greater benefits result from keeping the unemployed healthy, building up their morale, and stimulating them to an outlook that will help them obtain employment if and when they can.

Baird attended a field day yesterday at the Speedway and McCook gardens for case workers and other employés of the Cook County Relief administration.

HORNER DESIGNATES OCTOBER 7 TO 13 AS FIRE PREVENTION WEEK

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Gov. Horner today designated Oct. 7 to 13 as fire prevention week in Illinois, reported that property valued at almost $20,000,000 burned in the state during the year ending June 30 and urged more strict fire ordinances and inspections along with a general clean-up of hazards.

The proclamation cited the Chicago stockyards fire, which caused a loss of more than $6,000,000 last May, as apparently having been caused by a cigaret.

"The toll exacted by fire is too great a price to pay for an evil so largely preventable," the governor said.

He said fire bells clanged somewhere in the state every 30 minutes with 18,537 fires reported during the year. Destroyed or damaged were 8,330 dwellings, 2,621 apartment houses, 1,007 stores, 279 factories, 1,082 garages, and 1,383 automobiles. Burns killed 124 and injured 464.

ARRESTED JUST BECAUSE FRIEND WRITES TO HIM

A letter writing friend in the Virginia state prison at Richmond made a deal of trouble yesterday for Philip Keller, 26 years old, 5827 Addison street.

The writer, Leonard Ewing, who once served a term in the Joliet penitentiary, stated in his letter that he was working on the Virginia roads and that he was having an unpleasant time.

"Come down and take me out," he added. "You'll only have to take one guard on the road and all you need is one pistol and one shotgun."

The letter was intercepted on its way out by the Virginia prison authorities and a copy forwarded to the detective bureau here. Detectives Edward Ganschow and Thomas McSweeney arrested Keller, who was released on parole from Joliet prison only four months ago, for questioning. Police records show that Keller and Ewing were arrested together on a charge of larceny in 1928.

TICKET BROKERS PUNCH ABLY BUT IN WRONG PLACE

A crowd of several hundred gathered last evening at Randolph and Dearborn streets and looked on with considerable interest while two ticket brokers punched with a right good will. The punches, however, penetrated no slips of pasteboard. Instead they impinged upon the person of an attorney.

The punchers were Solomon Ziv, 38 years old, and his brother Leo, 34, who operate the Couthoui agency at 53 West Randolph street, and Joseph Brennan, 42, of 1641 East 53d street. The odds against Lawyer Brennan's punching were too great and he was severely beaten.

When policemen from the Central station arrived the three punchers were all arrested and charged with disorderly conduct.

EQUINOX TODAY ENDS CHICAGO'S DRIEST SUMMER

Suffering Trails Drouth; Heat Records Set.

The autumnal equinox, the crossing of the equator by the sun on its southward journey, takes place at 12:46 p. m. today, marking the end of the driest summer in Chicago's history.

The summer was also characterized by periods of record breaking heat. On July 24 the temperature reached a new all time point for Chicago—105 degrees. An excessive share of sunshine, naturally a chief contributing factor to the dry spell, has been recorded.

C. A. Donnel, official in charge of the weather bureau here who has occupied a box seat at the shifting weather drama, yesterday reviewed Chicago's climate during the past nine months.

Equinox Itself Harmless.

First, however, he pointed out that the equinox does not exert any seasonable influence on weather conditions.

"Some persons believe," he said, "that the autumnal equinox is the cause of severe storms. The truth is that a storm occurs somewhere in the United States approximately every day, and while this might tend to substantiate the belief in sections where storms do occur today, it is merely a normal occurrence. Storms will be more frequent now, because we are going from a warm to a cold season."

The most serious economic reaction to this year's weather has been caused by the prolonged drouth. Chicago and vicinity received only half of its normal rainfall, while the farming and ranching sections to the west fared even worse. Farm crops have parched, cattle perished of thirst, and desolation has reigned over the great corn and wheat belt as a result.

January	1.90	0.84
February	2.14	0.52
March	2.58	1.21
April	2.78	1.32
May	3.54	0.67
June	3.30	2.24
July	3.33	0.42
August	3.21	3.41
September	2.25	[to date] 2.08
Total	25.03	12.71

Both May and July achieved the distinction in the files of the weather bureau of being the driest on record. August, as shown by the chart, is the only month so far this year to exceed the normal in rainfall.

Many Hot Periods.

In the matter of heat, Mr. Donnel said, the summer has been characterized by brief, intensively hot periods rather than consistently fervid temperatures. On an average, the summer has been two degrees above normal in temperature.

Over 100 Four Times.

"The lake certainly is a wonderful asset to the city," he declared. "We find that 42 per cent of the time, the year around, the wind blows off the lake. During the summer time more than half the prevailing winds come from the lake."

"Only nineteen times in the history of the weather bureau has Chicago's temperature reached 100 or higher," Mr. Donnel pointed out. "And it reached that mark four times this year."

Joseph B. McDonough, who died April 25 while serving as county treasurer, left an estate estimated at $16,000. This fact was revealed yesterday when his will was filed before George B. Weiss, assistant to the probate judge. Under the terms of the will, the estate is left to the widow, Mrs. Mae McDonough, who is also named as executrix.

Mr. McDonough, 45 years old, was a native of the south side and always kept his residence in the district north of the stockyards. He was noted for his generosity and philanthropy to the people living in his ward. He died in his home at 551 West 37th street, after a brief illness of pneumonia.

Thirsty Souls Knock, Ask for 'Joe'; Pastor Perplexed

Fort Worth, Tex., Sept. 22.—[U.P.]—Thirsty citizens seeking to buy anything from "a drink to a pint" repeatedly interrupted efforts of Dr. J. K. Thompson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, to prepare his sermon today. The minister, good-humored but perplexed, investigated. He found that a newspaper, in a drive against alleged liquor "joints" here, had mistakenly given the address of the church as one of the places.

GRANDDAUGHTER OF J. P. MORGAN BOWS TO SOCIETY

New York, Sept. 22.—(AP)—J. P. Morgan's eldest granddaughter, Louise Converse Morgan, made her official bow to society tonight, the first debutante to bear the Morgan name in years.

There were only two members of the Morgan family missing, J. P. Morgan who is in England, and Miss Morgan's great-aunt, white-haired Anne Morgan, who also is in Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan missed the fourth cup race between the Rainbow and the Endeavor today in order to prepare for the event. Their daughter has the same keen interest in yachting that is displayed by other members of the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan have two other children besides Louise, a son and another daughter. Louise is 18 and a graduate of Miss Chapin's school.

BY JUDITH CASS.

At a simple ceremony yesterday afternoon Miss Jeanette Peterkin, daughter of the Daniel Peterkins, became the bride of William O. Hunt, son of the Robert I. Hunts of Decatur, Ill. The Rev. Harrison Ray Anderson of the Fourth Presbyterian church read the service at 4:30 o'clock in the presence of the immediate families, and Mr. Hunt and his bride left soon afterwards for a motor trip east.

The bride wore a gown of white satin and velvet. Over a skirt of satin fell a tunic of velvet which swept out into a train. She wore the veil of her sister-in-law, the junior Mrs. Daniel Peterkin, and carried a muff of gardenias. The bridal couple was unattended. They will be at home after Nov. 1 on East Elm street.

MacComas-Corwine Wedding.

At 8:30 o'clock in St. Chrysostom's church last evening, Miss Eugenia MacComas, daughter of Mrs. Will Hartwell Lyford, became the bride of John Brooks Corwine in a ceremony patterned after the wedding of Mrs. Lyford to the late Mr. MacComas which took place 30 years ago in Washington, D. C. The bride wore her mother's gown of heavy ivory satin trimmed with duchesse and rose point lace. The veil was held in place by a coronet of lace. Orange blossoms trimmed the train and she carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies that duplicated her mother's.

Attended by Sister.

Mrs. Sidney F. Moody of Evanston was her sister's only attendant, and Mr. Moody gave the bride away. During the service, which was read by the Rev. Dudley Stark, Miss Ruth Braun sang "O Promise Me."

William Earl Cason served Mr. Corwine as best man, and ushering were Earl H. Mullin, Raymond B. Harrington, and Homer Clifton Morrison. After a reception at the bride's home, 222 East Chestnut street, Mr. and Mrs. Corwine left on a wedding trip east and south by motor. They will be at home after Nov. 1 at 916 Reba place, Evanston.

DRUNKEN TRUCK DRIVER HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

Lester Herling, 32 years old, 3221 North Central Park avenue, testified at a coroner's inquest yesterday that he and his two companions had been drinking for several hours before the truck he was driving struck and killed Mrs. Mamie Jones, 45 years old, 4520 Nevada street, at Kilbourn and Fullerton avenues Friday morning. The coroner's jury held him to the grand jury on a charge of manslaughter.

Deputy Coroner Eugene Ingles, who conducted the inquest in the Pederson undertaking rooms, 4332 Fullerton avenue, said after the verdict was brought in that it was "the most open and shut case of manslaughter I have ever heard."

Severe Penalties Ahead.

"Herling and his companions admitted they had been drinking," the coroner declared, "and he was unable to control his truck. Drunken drivers must be dealt with severely; it is fortunate they have not caused more fatalities."

Assistant State's Attorney William Lancaster, who attended the inquest, said that Herling would be prosecuted "to the full extent of the law."

"Such a fragrant violation of the law forbidding driving while intoxicated must be heavily punished," said the prosecutor.

Dr. Lewis Eastman, 1615 North Kostner avenue, testified that he examined the three men several hours after the accident and found that Herling was still intoxicated, while Schwenn was partially intoxicated and his son was nearly sober.

Crowd Prevent Escape.

With Herling in the truck were Walter Schwenn, 48 years old, 3643 Paris avenue, and his son, Curtis Schwenn, 24 years old, 3712 Pittsburgh avenue.

After the accident the three men tried to drive away, according to the police, but were threatened and restrained by an angry crowd. They were taken to the Cragin police station. Herling did not awaken until yesterday morning.

"I don't think it was my fault," he muttered, "I've been asleep most of the time."

At the inquest, however, he remembered the events ending in the death of Mrs. Jones. He had come out of his daze and told his story in a low voice.

Whisky and Beer; No Sleep.

"The Schwenns and I had made a round of taverns," Herling said, "and we drank a few beers in each one. In one tavern we had several whiskies. We had no sleep. Driving east on Fullerton avenue I seemed to lose control of the wheel about 50 feet from the safety island at Kilbourn avenue. I couldn't right the truck and it turned over on the safety island."

Mrs. Jones was crushed when the machine overturned. The Schwenns corroborated Herling's story. They were held by the Cragin police on charge of disorderly conduct.

Mrs. Jones' husband, William, appeared at the inquest. Afterward, Herling was taken back to the Cragin station. Deputy Coroner Ingles said that he would be removed to the county jail.

Herling is married and has three children. His wife, Dora, attended the inquest, but did not testify.

O'Connell in the Safety court yesterday on a charge of leaving the scene of an accident. Shaw's automobile collided with one driven by Abraham Charrow, 2236 West Jackson boulevard, at Arthington street and Francisco avenue, early yesterday.

Convicted of reckless driving, Stanley Berger, 19 years old, 1402 East 57th street, was deprived of the right to drive an automobile for six months by Judge Frank M. Padden in the South Chicago court. An automobile driven by Berger struck John Owens, 60 years old, 7835 South Green street, at Stony Island avenue and 79th street on Aug. 30. Owens has recovered.

BETTER BRAKES DRIVE SPURRED BY SAFETY LANE

Tribune Tests React on Car Builders.

BY HAL FOUST.

The nation-wide increase in trafic fatalities combined with the results of THE TRIBUNE's free automobile inspection has aroused motor manufacturers to the need for improved engineering and bettered maintenance of the safety equipment of gasoline vehicles. Part of the outcome doubtless will be more efficient brakes on 1935 models to be announced early this winter.

THE TRIBUNE's inspection service, operated daily except Sunday at 401 East Ontario street, has tested 8,297 automobiles, finding 44 per cent with faulty brakes. There were 387 without proper lights and 577 with wheels out of alignment. This information regarding the condition of their cars was furnished to the owners without charge.

Better Class Reports.

These motorists who have driven to the safety lane represent the better element of the motor owning public. They do not include any of the class who drive the streets and highways indifferent to whether their vehicles are fit to meet emergencies. So it is presumed that automobiles as a whole are in worse shape than those that were tested.

The automobile manufacturers are aware of the trend in public sentiment. One large volume producer is reported to have junked his current brake equipment for an entirely different design on 1935 models. One of its research engineers has requested permission to make a detailed study this week of the records at THE TRIBUNE's safety lane.

Asks to Advertise.

Another manufacturer, with a comparatively good showing in the brake tests, has asked permission to advertise statistics gathered by THE TRIBUNE's mechanics.

Not only have the research and engineering departments been aroused to the need for better brakes, but the service branch of the automobile industry likewise has been spurred. Of 3,286 motorists who drove over THE TRIBUNE's safety lane and were refused o.k. stickers for their windshields, 1,432 returned for a second test after adjustment or repairs had been made at shops of their own selection. Of this 1,432 there were 863 who received the stickers, but there were still serious defects in the equipment of 569.

EX-POSTMAN GETS 35 YEARS IN SLAYING OF WIFE

Taylorville, Ill., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Hollis Butterfield, 26, former mail carrier of Christian county, was convicted by a jury today and sentenced to 35 years in prison for the slaying of his wife, Selma, 23, an expectant mother, who was shot to death Oct. 28 as she lay on the bed in her room. The gun was placed so as to make the act appear a suicide.

On March 3, Butterfield, after submitting to lie detector tests, confessed to the killing of his wife but later repudiated his confession.

Butterfield took the stand in his own defense yesterday afternoon and testified that he was "undergoing great physical pain when he made the March 3 confession." The defense rested yesterday afternoon and the case went to the jury at noon today.

ROB SALOONIST OF $750.

WISCONSIN TREASURY AGENT SLAIN DURING LIQUOR RAID ON HOME

Kenosha, Wis., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Matt Shumacher, 38 year old state treasury department agent, was shot to death in a liquor raid today. It was the first fatality in the department's campaign against post-repeal bootlegging.

Charles Melli, 20, was seized after the shooting. John M. Roach, chief investigator of the treasurer's office, who led the raid, said Melli fired on Shumacher. Melli, his brother, Anthony, 19; his sister, Agatha, 17, and mother, Mrs. Charles Melli, 45, were detained at the county jail for investigation.

Raid Follows Three Others.

Roach reported that he commanded 11 state and federal alcohol tax division agents who went to the Melli home early today on information illegal liquor was stored there. He said the agents knocked on the front door and shouted that officers demanded admittance.

Shumacher was stationed in the back yard. Roach said Charles Melli appeared at the back door of the house and opened fire with a revolver. Shumacher was struck in the heart. He died 45 minutes later.

Knock on Door.

The raid on the Melli home followed three others, in which two large stills, several thousand gallons of liquor, and seven persons were seized. The prisoners were taken to Milwaukee to face federal charges of violating the internal revenue law.

State Treasurer Robert K. Henry said the tax division of his department has discovered a widespread trafic in illicit liquor products, mainly moonshine whisky and bootleg alcohol. Division agents, operating in all parts of the state, have uncovered about 125 stills in recent months and have made more than 500 arrests.

RAID STICKNEY RESORT; DRIVE OUT 200 PATRONS

A squad of detectives from the state's attorney's office last night raided the Silver Slipper roadhouse at 4010 Harlem avenue, Stickney, drove out about 200 patrons and arrested the manager, Tony Melchoir, 40 years old, former prize fighter. Melchoir was locked up in the Oak Park police station. The raiders said that they had orders to close the place. In a raid on the Silver Slipper last February it was alleged the place, ostensibly a dance hall, was connected with a disorderly house.

Auto Goes Over Curb; Victims in Hospital.

Two men were injured, one of them seriously, when they were struck by an automobile driven by Ira L. Couch, society man and prominent amateur golfer, at Rush street and Chicago avenue yesterday morning. The injured were A. Ripple, 32 years old, 1812 Larrabee street, and Thomas McGovern, 38 years old, 230 East Superior street, both taxicab drivers.

They were taken to St. Luke's hospital where it was learned that Ripple had suffered a posible fracture of the skull and McGovern's right leg was broken. They told police that they were standing at the curb when the car skidded on the wet pavement, careened across the curb and struck them.

Couch, who lives at 1350 North State parkway, and the occupants of his car waited until the men were taken to the hospital and then had the car towed to a garage.

Couch's attorney, Theodore Hardeen, appeared at the Chicago avenue station shortly after the accident and told the police that he was reporting it for his client.

Couch appeared in person an hour later and posted bonds totaling $300 on two charges of reckless driving and two charges of leaving the scene of an accident. He will appear in court tomorrow.

1 Dead, 5 Hurt in Collision.

One man was killed, five persons were injured and two escaped unhurt last night, when a car containing three World's Fair visitors from Utah was struck at 111th street and Cicero avenue by the automobile of Joseph Brayley, 21 years old, of 6552 Perry avenue.

The dead man was Otha Simpson, 19 years old, of 303 Marquette road, a passenger in Brayley's car. Witnesses said Brayley's machine had failed to stop for a trafic light, and he was held for the inquest. The other car was driven by Dr. H. E. Nelson of Midvale, Utah, and his passengers, all from the same town, were Mrs. John Nelson and Mrs. J. Remington. All suffered minor cuts and bruises.

Others injured were John Smith, 21 years old, of 6907 Harvard avenue, who physicians say may die; Miss Margaret Vocker, 18 years old, of 7251 Yale avenue, and Corinne Brayley, sister of the driver of the car.

Killed by Hit and Run Car.

Struck by a hit and run driver and run over by a second automobile, Paul L. Busian, 33 years old, 3325 West Adams street, a musician, was injured fatally yesterday in front of 2901 Washington boulevard. Victor Kranz, 28 years old, 2940 Wilcox street, a clerk in the state's attorney's office, told the police that he was driving west on Washington boulevard when his car struck an object in the street.

He then saw Busian lying on the pavement. At first he believed he had struck Busian down but a west park police squad discovered particles of a broken headlight from another automobile near the body. Charles Smith, 2854 Washington boulevard, told the police that he was approaching his home when he saw another automobile strike Busian and drive on just before Kranz came by.

Busian was taken to the County hospital, where he was pronounced dead. Kranz was released after he was identified by Deputy Coroner John J. Butler.

James Gallagher, 7 years old, 944 North Wells street, was injured fatally last evening when he was struck near his home by an automobile driven by Frank Estranffy, 4942 South Wells street. The boy died soon afterward at the Henrotin hospital.

The deaths of Simpson, Busian and Gallagher increased the Cook county motor toll since Jan. 1 to 870.

RAINBOW TIES CUP SERIES; BRITISH PROTEST

PIRATES DEFEAT CUBS TWICE, 2 TO 1 AND 11 TO 7; SOX LOSE

Willett Boger of the varsity plunges through the freshmen in the first football game of the season at Northwestern university yesterday. The varsity won, 41 to 6, in a battle in which sophomores were outstanding. Bob Swisher, sophomore back, scored three of the varsity touchdowns while Hugh Duval added two and Bill Henderson one. The varsity made five of their six tries for points after touchdowns. Coach Dick Hanley is at the extreme right watching to see if the varsity players carry out their assignments correctly. Northwestern opens its schedule against Marquette next Saturday. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

The freshmen crash over for a touchdown. Fred Vanzo, 200 pound full back (in the center under No. 25), scores after a plunge from the two yard line. Vanzo was the outstanding performer for the first year men. His touchdown followed a 60 yard run by Heap.

5 HURLERS FAIL IN SECOND GAME; LEE IS BEATEN

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 22.—The poor old collapsible Cubs are getting their fall lickings even if their front office did call off the city series with the White Sox. Today they took two trimmings at the hands of the Pittsburgh Pirates, 2 to 1 and 11 to 7. It was the second double spanking the Cubs have received in a week, after previously having gone all season without dropping both ends of a double-header.

The Pirates, who were able to beat the Cubs only five out of 15 games before the Chicagoans became so tired of it all, popped into a fourth place tie with the Braves as a result of the multiple tanning accorded the weary Cubs.

Seven Out of Last Eight.

To get some idea of how the Cubs are fighting, recall that Mr. Wrigley's high priced and high salaried stalwarts now have lost seven of their last eight games against the Dodgers, Phillies, and Pirates.

The battlers from the shores of Lake Michigan did right well for their personal tabulations in the second game, despite the havoc wrought by a seven run sixth inning rally staged by the Pirates, who also had won the first game in the sixth. In the second game they outhit the enemy, 16 hits to 12, three-hit gents being Billy Herman, Cuyler, who had a single, a double and a triple, and Stainback.

In the first game each team made only five hits. The Pirates put three of their total together in the sixth to score the two runs which proved enough to give Bill Lee another tough loss.

FIRST GAME

A single by Roettger, which led off the Pirate attack and immediately was nullified by a double play, and a single by Billy Herman, with one out in the fourth, formed the total offensive for both teams in the first five innings. Only three men faced each pitcher in each of the first five innings, the total being held to the minimum by the fact that the Cubs executed two double plays. The excess caused by Billy Herman's hit was wiped out when Billy was forced by Cuyler and Ki was caught trying to steal second.

The sixth was something different. Stainback led off with a double to left. Jurges was given the home run instead of the sacrifice signal, but fell short by fouling to Padden. Lee grounded out to Thevenow, Stainback taking third, whence he scored on Hack's single to right center. Hack [illegible] second, then Billy Herman [illegible]opped to Thevenow.

Pirates Get 'Em Back.

In their half of the sixth the Pirates also had two out before they counted; then they rang up two scores. Thevenow opened with an infield hit. Padden lined a single to left, putting Thevenow on third, and took second when Stephenson tried to throw to third. Lee seemed on the verge of getting out of the woods when he threw out Birkofer and Roettger while the runners held on. Jensen, however, dropped a single in front of

Two Run Lead Fades in 8th; Sox Lose, 9 to 8

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The White Sox would have done right well for themselves against the third place Cleveland Indians yesterday if George Earnshaw had been equal to an assignment as relief man. Big George was put to work at the start of the eighth just after the tail-enders had done a handsome job of scoring four times for a 7 to 5 lead. The Indians promptly turned out an equally handsome job against big George, scoring four runs to win, 9 to 8.

Earnshaw had one consolation, which was that he wasn't much worse than a number of other fellows who tried to pitch. The first failure was Cousin Hugo Klaerner, one of the Sox freshmen. He was erased in less than two innings with a total of five runs against his record. Three of these were caused by Hal Trosky's 34th homer of the year. Another failure was the usually capable Oral Hildebrand, who started for the Indians and hung on until flattened by the blast which gave the Sox their momentary lead in the seventh. Various other pitchers were only half bad.

Batting Averages Go Up.

Although losing, the Sox at least had a little fun with their bats, thus nourishing averages which the owner will scan closely when figuring contracts for the future. Zeke Bonura, the large sized Italian, was especially industrious. He hit homer No. 27, walked twice, and singled once off Hildebrand. He singled again off Clint Brown, who pitched the last two innings. Freshman Marshall Mauldin also was in rare form. He noticed nothing deceptive about the throwing of Hildebrand, so peeled off a homer, his first as a major leaguer; one single, which helped in the scoring in the sixth, and a double, which assisted in the splurge in the seventh.

The excitement at Klaerner's expense in the first inning began when Galatzer, the Chicago Jewish boy who leads off for the Indians, slapped a single to center. Klaerner walked Averill, which was a good way in which to prevent him from winning another $400 bonus for a homer. Mr. Trosky, who receives no extra awards for heroic deeds, then banged homer No. 34 against the front of the right field deck.

Galatzer Carries On.

Galatzer also had the pleasure of inaugurating the second inning eruption that blew Klaerner into the dugout. Galatzer doubled to left with one out. Averill walked for the second time. Trosky clouted a single to right to score Galatzer, and away went Klaerner. Gallivan assumed the burden and the first happening under the new régime was a single to left by Vosmik, scoring Averill.

The first peep out of the Sox batters was heard in the home second. Bonura led off with his 27th homer, the ball dropping into the left field seats. The next hit by the locals was a homer by Mauldin into the same seats at the start of the fourth.

Another Rally Fails.

The fadeout after a fine start in the fourth was duplicated by the Sox in the sixth. Mauldin led off with a single to center and moved to third on Simmons' double to right. A pass to Bonura filled the bases with none out. Then the painful decline set in. Appling flied to Galatzer, but Mauldin made no attempt to score. Radcliff flied to Averill and this was deep enough to furnish Mauldin time to reach the plate.

The rush of business that put the

[This is the first of a series of sketches on members of the Detroit Tigers who will battle the New York Giants in the impending world series.]

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

For years the two New York major league clubs have been searching the far corners of the country for a good Jewish ball player who could intrigue the cash customers. They had the wanted article right under their thumbs but didn't know it until he turned up in another spot, and then it was too late. The lad is Henry [Bruggy] Greenberg, New York born, who has played a heavy hand in the successful 1934 pennant quest of the Tigers.

HANK GREENBERG.

It wasn't by accident, at least not so far as he was concerned, that the jovial, aggressive Hank passed up his own home town. He was just smart about the whole thing and picked his spot. The Yankees knew about the lanky Jewish youngster and dispatched a scout to trail him, but Hank didn't jump at the opportunity. He knew there was a fellow named Lou Gehrig playing first base for the Yanks and that Lou was a long way from the end of his career. Hank just waited until another offer came along and when it came he bit. It was a pretty good bite. The Detroit club gave him $6,000 to sign a contract and $3,000 when he reported. Pretty good for a lad of 19 years!

Takes Dancing Lessons to Help Fielding.

Hank always was conscious of his ungainly actions, but he wanted to be a ball player instead of his dad's partner in the dyeing and shrinkage business in New York, so he figured out a scheme that might correct what he regarded a physical handicap. He took up tap dancing and waltzing while he was a student at New York university. Whether this developed any grace in a pair of legs entirely too unruly for high class first base play isn't known. He's still a bit awkward in his fielding, but apparently effective.

Hank played baseball, football and basketball in high school, but during his short career as a collegian didn't bother about the diamond sport. There was a reason for this. Hank was quietly playing semi-pro baseball on the side and didn't want to become involved in any eligibility disputes. It was the semi-pro endeavor that led him to bigger things. He played with Quincy, Mass., in an industrial league and one fine day who turned up but Jean Dubuc, ex-Tiger pitcher who had heard of Greenberg in New York.

That afternoon Hank hit a pair of homers. That was all Dubuc wanted to see. He wired to Detroit for instructions and a deal was closed, much to the discomfort of Paul Kritchell, a Yankee scout who had been trailing the prospect.

Travels to the Sticks and Back Again.

Hank reported to the Tigers in the spring of 1930 and Manager Bucky Harris, after seeing the "find" spike himself a few times trying to move his feet around first base, decided to act. Hank was shipped to Hartford, Conn.; Evansville, Ind., and lastly to Beaumont, Tex., to see whether he could improve himself. He finally did at Beaumont in 1932 so he was called up for 1933 and promptly installed himself as the regular first baseman.

The theory of rival clubs is that he is a sucker for a curve ball, but if that's true there must be a flock of bum curve ball pitchers operating in the American league. He's close to the top in the matter of driving in runs. Hank used one of the largest mitts in the game and needs it, not for protection, but because it takes a lot of leather to cover his ham-sized paws.

Iowa Football Player Is Ill with Meningitis

Iowa City, Ia., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Max Tuinstra, University of Iowa football lineman, is confined to the university isolation hospital here with spinal meningitis it was learned tonight. Tuinstra reported for practice Sept. 15 and was stricken the following day. Physicians said that he was out of danger and had suffered no complications.

Hawks Settle Rental Fight with Stadium

New York, Sept. 22.—(AP)—The National Hockey league's board of governors, meeting in semi-annual session today successfully settled the stadium difficulties in Chicago and Boston, adopted a 48 game schedule, approved the penalty shot, and reduced the salary limits, preparatory to the opening of the season on Nov. 8.

After wrestling for nearly 10 hours with the problem that threatened to keep hocky out of Chicago and Boston, President Frank Calder finally announced Maj. Frederic McLaughlin of the Blackhawks, and C. F. Adams of the Bruins, had come to an agreement with the owners of the Chicago Stadium and Boston Garden, respectively, on the matter of rental. The terms of the agreements were not made public.

Adopt Penalty Shot.

The penalty shot was adopted without much opposition. In use on the Pacific coast, the rule gives the attacking team a free shot 38 feet from the net whenever a player is fouled while shooting what the referee considers a "sure shot." The shot will be made from a circle, 10 feet in diameter, by any player not in the penalty box.

The player, making the shot, may do so either from a stationary position or from a running start. The only defense will be furnished by the opposing goal tender.

Reduce Salary Limits.

The schedule adopted will open the season Nov. 8 with Chicago at St. Louis and Boston at Toronto. The other opening dates are, Boston at Detroit, Nov. 11; Chicago at Maroons and Toronto at Americans, Nov. 15; Detroit at Canadiens, Toronto at Chicago and Detroit at Boston, Nov. 17, and St. Louis at the Rangers, Nov. 18.

Under the salary revision the club limit was reduced from $65,000 to $62,500 and individual salaries from $7,500 to $7,000.

Tigers Take Double Header From Browns

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 22.—(AP)—The Detroit Tigers defeated the St. Louis Browns in both games of a double-header today and moved closer to the American league pennant. Scores were 8 to 3 and 15 to 1. Detroit now has a lead of 6½ games over the New York Yankees and have only seven games to play. Should the Yanks win all remaining games, the Tigers need only two more victories to clinch the pennant.

The Tigers went on a rampage in the seventh inning of the second contest, scoring 11 runs. They started the outburst on Dick Coffman and continued against McAffee. Darkness halted the slaughter after the seventh. Scores:

U. S. YACHT HAS EDGE OF MINUTE AND 15 SECONDS

Newport, R. I., Sept. 22.—(AP)—One sensation piled on another today as, soundly beaten in the fourth race for the America's cup, T. O. M. Sopwith, skipper of the British challenger Endeavour, protested the victory that pulled Harold S. Vanderbilt's defending Rainbow up on even terms with the English challenger at two victories each.

It was the first protest filed in an America's cup contest since C. Oliver Iselin broke out a red flag in the series of 1895 between Defender and Lord Dunraven's British challenger Valkyrie III., a protest that brought disqualification of the British boat and almost caused international complications.

The challenger's official protest was placed in the hands of the race committee tonight by Sir Ralph Gore, British observer on Rainbow.

Objects On Two Counts?

Edmund Lang, the committee chairman, said an "international document" had been received, the nature of which would not be revealed until tomorrow.

Although the challenger's communication was not made public, it was learned that Sopwith had filed either two protests or a protest on two counts. One was based on the allegation that Rainbow failed to meet Endeavor's luff after turning the first mark. The other was based on the alleged failure of the defender to respect the challenger's right of way before the start. As each alleged infraction involved a different racing rule, Sopwith's action probably will be considered by the race committee as two distinct protests.

If Sopwith's protest against Vanderbilt, known throughout American yachting as a stickler and a quick protester himself, is upheld by the committee, the challenging Endeavour will lead 3 to 1 in the best four out of seven series and will be within one victory of lifting the cup the United States has held since it was won off England in 1851.

Rainbow Wins By 1:15.

Apparently Sopwith based his principal claim of foul on the allegation that Vanderbilt failed to meet his luff, a highly technical situation, shortly after the British sloop rounded the first mark of today's 30 mile race over a triangular course 23 seconds ahead of Rainbow.

Racing in a swift breeze and boisterous sea, the Rainbow gained on both the second and third legs in the 11 to 12 miles an hour wind to cross the finish line one minute fifteen seconds ahead of Endeavour, the second straight victory for Rainbow after losing the first two races.

Committee Mum on Infraction.

While committee members after the race claimed not to have noticed any infraction of the rules, the question of a foul arose instantly among the experts aboard the coast guard cutter Argo, closest to the situation, shortly after the sloops started on the second leg, a broad reach with the wind blowing smartly from the east.

Endeavour was close on her course as she came up to the mark in the beat out from the starting line toward the Vineyard Sound lightship. Rainbow had failed to fetch the mark

BEARS TO BATTLE GREEN BAY TODAY IN LEAGUE START

Fear Laws, Schwammel, New Packer Stars.

Green Bay, Wis., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The Chicago Bears will open the defense of their National Professional Football league title against the Green Bay Packers tomorrow afternoon. Advance ticket sales indicate a capacity crowd will pack City stadium. It will be the Packers' second league game of the season. Last Sunday they defeated Philadelphia, 19 to 6.

Strengthened by the acquisition of several outstanding college players of last year, notably Joe Laws of Iowa and Ade Schwammel of Oregon State, the Packers have hopes of handing the Bears their first defeat since the early part of last season. The Bears have had three games thus far, playing a scoreless tie with the College All-Stars in Chicago, overwhelming the Chicago Tigers, 41 to 0, and beating La Crosse, Wis., 25 to 0.

Few Changes in Lineup.

The Bears arrived in Green Bay tonight. Coach George Halas plans to send the squad through a short workout tomorrow morning. With the exception of Beattie Feathers, new half back from the University of Tennessee, Walter Kiesling, veteran guard, and Al Kawal, center, the same lineup that started most of the Bears' games last season will be used against the Packers.

The starting lineups:

CARDS VS. CINCINNATI

The reorganized Chicago Cardinals will play their first National Professional Football league game at Dayton, O., this afternoon against the Cincinnati eleven.

In acquiring new backfield strength, Owner Charles W. Bidwill and Coach Paul Schissler have imported Mike Mikulak, full back of the University of Oregon team last year, and two accomplished ex-Big Ten stars, Paul Pardonner of Purdue and Dave Cook of Illinois.

Then the Cardinals last week added another ace to the pack—Homer Griffith, the ex-University of Southern California star.

Two more recruits were released yesterday. Schissler sent Johnny Sexton, former De Paul guard, to St. Louis of the American league, and Henry Cronkite, Kansas State end, to Brooklyn of the National circuit.

The lineups:

Logan Squares Meet Florals; Honor Ex-Cubs

Games Today

Logan Square vs. Duffy Florals at Logan Square park, Kedzie and Elston avenues, 1:30 p. m.

Laporte, Ind., Coalers vs. Mills at Mills stadium, Kilpatrick avenue and Lake street, 1:30 p. m. [2 games].

Spencer Coals vs. Joe Green Chicago Giants at Spencer field, Central and Berteau avenues, 1:30 p. m. [2 games].

Chicago Firemen at Chesterton, Ind.

The Duffy Florals and the Logan Squares, two of the leading clubs in the Wisconsin-Illinois Baseball league, will meet in a game today as part of the Mordecai Brown-Jimmy Archer celebration in honor of the two former Cub stars at Logan Square park, Kedzie and Elston avenues. A softball contest between two girl teams—the John S. Clarks and the T. J. Bowlers—will precede the baseball game, starting at 1:30 p. m.

The main contest will feature two other old time big leaguers in Jim Vaughn and Jack Quinn. Jim, pitching for the Squares, has been beaten but twice this season, while Jack has lost the same number. One of the contests lost by Vaughn was a 2 to 0 affair in which Quinn was the victor.

At Mills stadium the Mills will take on the Laporte, Ind., Coalers, one of the toughest of the travelers which have played in Chicago this year. Laporte has split three double headers this season with the Duffy Florals and one with the Logan Squares. The Laporte pitchers are Lefty Veller and Mike Yarros. Sullivan and Haas, the Mills' two southpaw aces, are ready.

Joe Green's Chicago Giants, strengthened by the return of some stars who have been playing in South Dakota, will meet the Spencer Coals at Spencer field in a double header. Mitchell, Clay and Moreheart are the Giant hurlers, while the Spencers are expected to use Sally Gliato, who just returned after helping to pitch Dallas into the playoffs in the Texas league, and Summerfield or Carlson.

Sheridan's Willow Springs team and Ald. Robinson's Ten Bruins clash today at Grand and Kostner avenues in the second of their three game series for the Midwest Baseball league championship. Willow Springs is one up and can cinch the title with another victory.

The contest will start at 3 o'clock. Bartulis, who hurled the Springs nine to a 3 to 0 victory in the series opener, again will oppose Miller on the mound.

In another Midwest league encounter St. Cyril will be at Niles Center, while at Chicago Heights a tournament will be held with Chicago Heights playing the Raab Tailors at 1 p. m., Birk's Goldecks meeting the Cragins in the second game and the two winners meeting in a third contest.

SCHOOLBOY? HE'S PROFESSOR OF PITCHING

Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe of the Detroit Tigers, who tied American league record for consecutive victories with 16, is back in best form after a defeat by the Philadelphia Athletics and expects to pitch against Carl Hubbell in the opening game of the world series between Detroit and the New York Giants Oct. 3.

Rowe and his fiancee, Edna Skinner of Eldorado, Ark.

Rowe and Mickey Cochrane, one of the greatest batteries in baseball. Cochrane, in his first year as manager of the Tigers, has lifted the team to first place and now will send them after world series honors.

Pirates Beat Cubs Twice, 2-1 and 11-7

Stephenson, scoring Thevenow and Padden. He was out trying to reach second, Stephenson to Hartnett to Billy Herman.

The only threats in the remainder of the game were slight ones by the Cubs in the eighth and ninth. With two out in the eighth Lee singled, and went to second on a passed ball. The inning ended when Padden, skidding on the vast array of bats which the Cubs carry just as a blind, caught Hack's foul, then dived into the Cub dugout.

Billy Herman led off the ninth with a single. Cuyler then flied to Jensen and Stevie tapped into a double play.

SECOND GAME

Somebody told the Cubs about the sacrifice play in the first inning and use of it helped get a run home. Hack led off with a single to left, went to second on Billy Herman's bunt and scored on Cuyler's single to right. Klein flied to Jensen and, after Babe Herman walked, O'Farrell lined to Roettger.

With one out in the third Billy Herman doubled to right center, then Cuyler again came through with a run-producing hit, this one a triple to the left field score board. French relieved Harris, and fanned Klein and made Babe Herman pop to Thevenow.

French Takes Thumping.

The Chicagoans touched up French in the fifth. Billy Herman led off with a single. Cuyler popped to Grace, but Klein singled to right, Billy Herman stopping at second. Babe Herman forced Billy Herman, Vaughan to Traynor. O'Farrell singled to left, scoring Klein, and Stainback singled to left, scoring Babe Herman. Jurges then forced Stainback.

The three hits the Pirates made in the third were the only ones they got in the first five innings, but they teed off with great severity at the outset of the sixth, tying the score before Tinning was replaced by Bush. Jensen opened the sixth with a single to center and scored on Paul Waner's double to left. Vaughan followed with a double off the right field screen, which scored P. Waner and Arky scored himself on Traynor's triple to the center field fence.

It was at this juncture that Bush was called in. Suhr walked, then Thevenow shot a grounder to Jurges, who was playing in. Jurges' throw to O'Farrell was high, enabling Traynor to score, but the play was scored as a fielder's choice and not an error. Grace singled to right, scoring Suhr and putting Thevenow on third. Padden batted for Smith and sent a grounder to Jurges, who made a low throw to the plate.

It Turns Out O. K.

Thevenow, however, pulled up, giving O'Farrell time to recover the ball and start a successful run down play, nailing the second baseman. Roettger forced Padden, but Jensen came through with his second hit of the inning, a single to right which scored Grace. When the ball got past Klein, Roettger also scored, but Jensen was out at the plate, Klein to Billy Herman to O'Farrell.

Paul Waner's second double, a couple of passes off Weidemeyer, or Wiedemeyer, or Weedemyer, and a single by Grace off Root were good for three runs in the seventh.

The Cubs rallied valiantly in the ninth, making three runs on Billy Herman's single, a double by Cuyler, a single by Klein, and a pinch triple by Phelps.

American Indian Dies After Singapore Bout

SINGAPORE, Sept. 22.—[U. P.]—Joseph Thunderface, American Indian boxer, died today after being knocked out in a prize fight by Frank Weber.

Two Run Lead Fades in 8th; Sox Lose, 9 to 8

Sox out in front in the seventh began with a double to right center by Haas, who batted for Shea. Uhlir ran for Haas. Swanson batted for Gallivan and survived on a fumble by Hale. Conlan was disposed of on a pop up. Mauldin broke loose for the third time by doubling along the left field line, Uhlir scoring and Swanson halting at third. Simmons was purposely passed, and this wasn't such a good idea. Bonura upset the strategy by singling over short, Swanson scoring. Hudlin dashed to Hildebrand's rescue and Appling greeted him with a single on which Mauldin and Simmons scored. Radcliff then bounced into a double play.

Rescuer Is Pushover.

Rescuer Earnshaw retired one Indian in the eighth before getting tangled up in a mess of base hits on which the Indians scored four runs for a 9 to 7 lead. Burnett, batting for Hudlin, singled, and so did Galatzer. So did Averill, scoring Burnett. Trosky was purposely passed and this also proved bum strategy. Vosmik singled, sending home Galatzer and Averill. After Hale had fouled out Kamm doubled to left to score Trosky with the last run of the rally.

The Sox picked up a run in their half of the eighth off C. Brown on an infield single by Madjeski, an infield out, and a single to center by Conlan.

The at-home season for the White Sox will end this afternoon in a double-header with the Indians. Kennedy and Tietje will be the Sox starting pitchers. Hudlin and Pearson may be the Indian starters.

BRAVES TRIUMPH OVER GIANTS IN 11 INNINGS, 3 TO 2

Schumacher Walks Mallon with Bases Full.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Hal Schumacher, Giant pitcher, tired toward the end of an eleven inning game today and walked in a run to give the Braves a 3 to 2 triumph over the league leaders. The Boston victory cut New York's lead over St. Louis to 2½ games.

Schumacher and the veteran Flint Rhem fought it out on even terms for ten innings, but Rhem proved to have better staying powers.

Schumacher Falls in 11th.

Two were out in the eleventh when Schumacher suddenly weakened. Randy Moore singled to right. Bill Urbanski followed with another hit and Pinky Whitney beat out a bounder to fill the bases. Schumacher worked the count on Mallon to three and two. He then threw one high to end the game with a pass that forced Moore home.

The Giants scored in the third inning on Vergez' double, Ryan's sacrifice and Schumacher's single. They tied it in the eighth on a single by Joe Moore, Critz's sacrifice and Ott's two base hit.

Braves Score in 4th and 7th.

Boston scored in the fourth on singles by Jordan, Berger and Moore, and collected a second run in the seventh when Urbanski singled, went to third on Whitney's hit and scored after Mallon's fly. Score:

N. U. SOPHOMORES LEAD VARSITY TO 41 TO 6 VICTORY

Bob Swisher Runs Through Freshmen.

Bob Swisher, half back from St. John's Military academy, led the varsity, scoring three touchdowns. Midway in the first quarter he romped around right end for 60 yards for the first touchdown of the game. He scored again in the second period on a 20 yard run after he and Wally Cruice had advanced the ball the length of the field on a series of off tackle plays. In the third quarter he took a 20 yard pass from Elno Hayskar, left handed sophomore half back, and ran 15 yards to the goal.

Senn End Scores.

Bill Henderson, sophomore end, who prepped at Senn High school, received a pass from Ollie Adelman, first year quarter back, and ran 20 yards for another varsity score in the third quarter. The last two varsity touchdowns were made on plunges from the five yard line by Hugh Duval, chunky junior full back.

The freshmen scored in the second quarter when Don Heaps, speedy half back from Evanston High school, broke through right tackle and ran 60 yards to the two yard line. On the next play 200 pound Freddy Vanzo full back from Clinton, Ind., plunged over.

NOTRE DAME NEEDS WORK.

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The Notre Dame varsity had its first scrimmage today, and the coaches learned the amount of work which remains to be done before the opener with Texas on Oct. 6.

The first eleven managed to punch across two touchdowns in approximately an hour's play against the fourth team. George Melinkovich, recently shifted to right half back from full back, made one of them on a 50 yard run early in the session. The other came near the end when Andy Pilney passed to Wayne Millner.

HAWKEYES HOLD SCRIMMAGE.

Iowa City, Ia., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Coach Ossie Solem finished the first full week of football drill at the University of Iowa today with an hour of scrimmage, the hardest of the season thus far.

The coach juggled the lineups of both teams, giving every man on the squad a chance to play. The starting first string back field included Dwight Hoover, blocking half back, who has been out most of the week with a bruised back. In the same ball carrying combination was Capt. Russ Fisher, Dick Crayne, and Oze Simmons.

Corney Walker, Denver, Col., sophomore end, was the latest addition to the injured list with a bruised hip and side. Walker attended the practice in civilian clothes.

Champaign, Ill., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The Illinois varsity overwhelmed the freshmen, 46 to 0, in their annual game today, scoring seven touchdowns and holding the first year squad safely throughout.

The varsity blocked well and the pass receiving of Bob Wright, end, was outstanding.

Starting with a sophomore line, the varsity soon scored when Carson plunged over. Theodore and Bradley led in the advance for the next touchdown by Froschauer. Beynon passed to Wright for another. Steve Steib half back, received a kickoff and ran 80 yards for a touchdown. After Theodore plunged for a touchdown Wright intercepted a freshman pass and sent a lateral pass to Froschauer for a score. Nelson fell on the ball after a kickoff for the final touchdown.

MICHIGAN WHIPS RESERVES.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 22.—[Special.—Working without their first and second string full backs and No. 1 quarter back, the Michigan regulars romped over a team of second stringers in scrimmage today. Team play was vastly improved over that shown in scrimmage three days ago, and the offense was much more potent.

John Regeczi and Steve Remias, full backs, and Bill Renner, quarter back, saw most of the workout from the bench, and what they looked at may have suggested that some of the backfield jobs are still a toss up.

Howard Triplehorn, 160 pound half back, for example, ripped around and through the reserve team, and gave the stands every reason to believe he will be Michigan's running back. Triplehorn climaxed his efforts with a 31 yard sprint through a broken field for a touchdown. Russ Oliver, veteran full back, ran the team in Renner's absence.

Coach Kipke was so well satisfied that he hinted Oliver will be Michigan's alternate quarter back this season.

GOPHER END INJURED.

Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Bob Tenner, veteran end, was added to the list of Minnesota football casuals today when it was discovered that he had suffered torn ligaments around the ankle in yesterday's workout. It is expected that he will be ready to face the North Dakota Aggies here next Saturday.

Art Clarkson continued to be favored at right half back, but it is thought that Coach Bierman simply wants to acquaint the newcomer with first string duty and that he has not taken the post away from the veteran Julie Alfonse.

BADGER SOPHOMORES STRONG.

Madison, Wis., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Two weeks of practice for the Badger football team, which ended this afternoon, left the battle for half the positions wide open. Little has been done in developing the passing game, but Coach Spears plans to begin work on pass plays early next week. The Marquette game, which opens the Badger schedule, is Oct. 6.

Sophomores Russ Callahan and Bob Null, ends; Jim Nellen and Ed Christiansen, tackles; Dock Lubinsky, George Klein, and Walter Windecker, guards; Bill Parrott, quarter back; Eddie Jankowski, full back, and Emmett Mortell and Stan Ferris, half backs, continue to threaten the 1933 regulars' positions.

Jankowski, hard driving full back, returned to scrimmage this afternoon after being on the sidelines most of the week with injuries.

PURDUE TESTS NEW SHIFT.

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Purdue's football squad received its first taste of actual game scrimmage here this afternoon in an extended, spirited session.

The Boilermaker combinations gave the new cross-shift a thorough tryout in combination with the standard shift, and the coaching staf expressed itself as being satisfied with its operation.

No attempt was made to keep score, and the game was frequently stopped to point out weaknesses on both offense and defense, but Carter, Purvis, Dailey, and Basker all turned in some neat ball carrying performances. Capt. Carl Heldt and Ed Skoronski were outstanding in the line on defense.

OHIO VARSITY WINS, 22-0.

Columbus, O., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Ohio State's varsity and second teams had the first real taste of actual competition today when the two engaged in a full time game. The varsity won, 22 to 0.

Outstanding in the day's performance were Stan Pincura and Dick Beltz in the back field, the former at quarter back and the latter at half back, where he relieved Dick Heekin.

Capt. Regis Monahan, regular guard, still was out of the city because of the death of his brother in Pittsburgh, and Merle Wendt, outstanding right end candidate, was on the sidelines with a leg injury.

British Protest Rainbow's Second Victory in Cup Series

When the American boat straightened out it was astern of the Endeavour, but the margin was slim. The rules of racing say that the overtaking boat has no rights at all on the sea, and must make way always for the boat ahead, no matter where it wants to go.

Vanderbilt seemed to bear in on the Sopwith sloop, which was all right, apparently, under the rules, unless Sopwith made a move in the American's direction. At about that time, Sopwith decided to luff, which means he tried to sail his boat closer to the wind, a move that turned him in Vanderbilt's direction. The boats then weren't many yards apart.

Fear Yachts Will Collide.

Instead of giving way to the luff, as the rules call for, inasmuch as Sopwith still was leading, Vanderbilt seemed to hold Rainbow straight on the course he had chosen and for a moment there was the danger of a collision. Sopwith had to fall off and slacken his sails. When he straightened away again, the American was off to a lead that never again was relinquished.

The experts aboard the Argo let out a concerted roar and immediately looked for Endeavour to break out with a protest flag. It was not however, until the sloops were tearing for the finish line, over an hour later, that the protest flag was discernable. The committee boat Wilhelmina immediately signalled that the protest had been received and the arguments were ready to start.

Rainbow Sails Surprise Race.

The race itself was astonishing enough without the protest and completely upset the conclusions the experts have reached as to both craft on the basis of past performances.

In a fairly heavy breeze, the kind Endeavour likes best, Rainbow, supposedly only a light air sailor, beat the invader at her own game in startling fashion. Always in the race on the first leg, a beat, Rainbow picked up the 23 second deficit there, and added a full minute's lead at the second mark. Then the Rainbow tacked on 15 more seconds on the final broad reach to the finish line. Rainbow's elapsed time was 3:15:38, Endeavour's, 3:16:53. The American's time was fairly close to the new record for a triangular course Endeavour set at 3:09:01 Tuesday.

Endeavour First on Course.

Endeavour was first to leave its moorings, and first to make sail on reaching the course. It slid gracefully along under full canvas as Rainbow hoisted only its main sail. The sea was moderate, but a brisk 14 knot northeasterly breeze was blowing.

The spectator fleet was late in arriving and was smaller than for any other day thus far.

Three minutes before setting the signals the race committee megaphoned to the tug that sets the marks that the first leg of the 30 mile triangular course would be the eastward. The signals went up on the Wilhelmina at 10:15 setting the course as 10 miles east, 10 miles southwest, and thence back to the starting point. The wind had hauled around to the east, making the first leg a beat, and the second and third broad reaches.

Breeze Steadily Lightens.

The breeze was steadily lightening as the starting time approached and at 10:35 had dropped away to about 8 knots from 14 a few minutes before.

The starting signal was given at 10:40 a. m. [Chicago daylight saving time]. Both yachts were tardy crossing the line, but Rainbow was the first over and leading by three lengths. The American boat crossed 25 seconds after the signal, with Endeavor following 20 seconds later.

Five minutes after the start Rainbow had increased its lead to five boat lengths and working to weather off the challenger. The defender worked so rapidly to weather that at 10:55 it held what appeared to be at least 300 yards' advantage over Endeavour.

Settle Down to Long Beat.

Endeavour began to foot faster as they settled down for the long beat, and at 11:10 appeared to be holding Rainbow to its early gained lead. The British boat went over on the port tack at 11:12 and Rainbow immediately came about to keep Endeavour covered. They did not hold on the port tack long, Rainbow going about at 11:17, to be followed a few seconds later by Endeavour.

At 11:40, an hour after the start, the two boats were approximately two miles from the ten mile turning mark and making excellent time. Rainbow broke out its Genoa jib at 11:44, apparently because Endeavour appeared to be overhauling the defender.

Hoyt Takes Rainbow's Helm.

As the boats approached the turning buoy at the end of the first 10 mile leg, C. Sherman Hoyt, who generally handles Rainbow to windoward, was at the helm. With the two boats about a mile away from the mark at 11:55, Endeavour was coming up so fast it appeared doubtful Rainbow would have room to cross the Britisher's bow in making the turn.

Endeavour had wiped away Rainbow's lead and they were bow to bow, with the British boat in the windward berth, as they bore down on the 10 mile mark.

The Sopwith boat set its new Genoa jib as they began the second 10 mile leg, a broad reach.

Five minutes after the turn Endeavour was about two boat lengths ahead.

At 12:25 Vanderbilt took Rainbow off to the southeast, apparently looking for a favorable slant of air, while Sopwith held Endeavour to the course. The British boat was carrying a staysail in addition to her new Genoa.

Rainbow Sails Ahead.

After working well to weather of the course Rainbow began to bear down on Endeavour. At 12:45 Rainbow had wiped out most of the Britisher's lead and there was little to choose between them. Three minutes later Rainbow had definitly passed the invader, although slightly to weather of a true course to the second marker. The wind was freshening and a sea was kicking up.

At 12:55 Rainbow had extended its lead to several boat lengths, with the 20 mile mark less than two miles away.

John Parkinson had held the helm on Rainbow through most of the second 10 miles, but Vanderbilt took it back as Rainbow headed back for home.

The breeze had freshened to 12 knots. Rainbow was riding along easily. Endeavour, however, did not seem to like the weather and was pitching and plunging. The British boat seemed to be going faster, though, and closing the gap on Rainbow.

Endeavor Works Up.

Endeavour still trailed by several boat lengths at 1:30, but appeared to be working up to weather of the defender. It was apparent Sopwith was endeavoring to do the same thing to Vanderbilt the latter had done to him on the second leg.

Rainbow was leading by 300 yards at 1:35, but Endeavour had cut 100 yards from the previous lead in 10 minutes. At 1:45 it was estimated the two racing sloops had about three miles to go to the finish. Rainbow's margin there was figured as about 275 yards. Endeavour was gaining with every minute.

Five minutes later Rainbow appeared to be holding its lead as they bore down on the finish line. Both were making excellent time, but already were past the hour at which a new record could be set.

YACHT RACES ARE BOON TO GOUGERS OF OLD NEWPORT

Hotels, Bars Join Happy Holdup of Fans.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Newport, R. I., Sept. 22.—The sporting world luminaries of New York, themselves versed in the gentle art of separating the public from its money, are groaning and gesticulating about the dextrous manner in which the simple New Englanders of Newport are cashing in on the international yachting races in this port.

While the Endeavour, the British challenger for the America's Cup, and the Rainbow, the defender, are maneuvering out in the Atlantic, the hotel and boarding house proprietors, the shopkeepers and the tavern owners are grimly engaged in a race to determine which can dig the deepest into the pockets of the thousands of visitors in town.

Florida Next Stop.

And what a job they perform on the city's guests! Many a local merchant may winter in Florida on the profits collected during the comparatively short period of the cup races.

The New York customers who comprise the main body of yachting enthusiasts, are noted more for their ability to take than to give. But their piteous pleadings for a lowering of prices are unheeded. Perhaps some of the Rhode Island boys remember what had happened to them when they last visited the nation's metropolis. If it was revenge that prompts them, they are proving themselves bloodthirsty, indeed.

$5 for Corridor Cot.

The hotel men assumed the lead in the gouging contest. Cots in hotel corridors are $5 a night and rooms that will go begging in a few weeks for $8 a week, car be had for $10 a night.

Bell boys stare scornfully at quarter tips. Dinners in the hotels range from $2 up. Food prices are correspondingly high throughout the community. Restaurants charging only a quarter for a ham sandwich are regarded as unpatriotic.

The minimum fare in a taxi cab is 50 cents and that means half a dollar for each passenger. In bitter protest against this schedule, the visitors refuse to ride two in a cab inasmuch as the same price was charged as for two persons in two cabs. Newport does not indulge in metered cabs and the fare usually is up to the driver's conscience. There is not discernible a percentage of worried consciences.

Liquor Prices Sky High.

"This town has taken in nearly as much in the first week of the cup races as it has taken from the navy all summer," one cab driver observed to this writer with a note of satisfaction. "This is one of the best spending crowds I have ever seen."

It may be unnecessary to state that a large part of the spending is done in the town's saloons and hotel bars. Here also, the usual liquor prices have been boosted. The cheapest drink of poor grade whisky in the lowest dive is 35 cents and lofty prohibition prices prevail in the better taverns. In the liquor stores there has been an average increase of 50 per cent in prices. A yachting crowd, it may be said, is a hard drinking aggregation and the saloonkeepers benefit vastly from the monopoly they hold on supplies. They put on a genuine NRA price fixing show.

The most conservative estimate places the amount which will be poured into the Newport coffers during the cup races at more than one million dollars. This estimate based on a calculation that each of the 10,000 persons present for the opening race will spend $100 before theey leave town. The crowd has dwindled during the several delays, but those who remained certainly made up, by their expenditures, for those whose average was less than $100 when they went back home.

Fred Wacker's class R sloop Gypsy won the Chicago Yacht club's Sheldon Clark trophy regatta yesterday held over a 13 mile course off Belmont harbor. It was the club's closing race of the season. In defeating the mixed fleet by six minutes Gypsy won the Universal time prize. Bob Benedict's schooner, Bagheera, of the Jackson Park Yacht club, won in the cruising division.

Twenty-five boats sailed before fresh north winds and in rough water around the triangular course. Gypsy's elapsed time was 2:31.55. Bagheera covered the course in 2:48.12.

Several sloops were disabled in the heavy sailing. The R boat, Gossoon II., owned by Mal Vail and Sterling Morton lost its mast at the first buoy when a spreader snapped and the 50 foot spar crashed to the deck.

Aquila Leads S Boats.

R and S sloops, Universal yawls, and schooners competed on time allowance handicaps for the Universal time prize. The first among the four S boats in corrected time was Aquila, owned by George Getz Jr. The Aquila finished in 2:54.46. The second R boat, which also was second in the Clark trophy race, was E. E. Sheridan's Ariel. Lincoln Harris' Ishtar was the second S sloop.

Clarence P. Clark's S sloop Falcon broke its lower stay and was forced to quit. Gus Nyland's Springtime led the Seawanhaka sloops. It was timed in 2:46:48.

Gossoon II. R Class Champion.

The C. Y. C. regatta committee announced that Gossoon II. is season champion in the R class. This 39 foot 9 inch sloop entered eleven of the twelve races. The Vail-Morton syndicate yacht's placing percentage of .868 gave it a total of 69¼ points.

Gypsy, with 66½ points, had an average only .034 less than that of Gossoon. Skipper Wacker.

The cruising yawl Comet, owned and sailed by Dr. William E. Redlich, and the cutter Valkyrie will sail off a tie today at 2:30, off Belmont harbor. The victor will be awarded the C. Y. C. Commodore's cup.

Suburban high school football teams went into action for the first time yesterday in preparation for the opening of the 1934 season, Oct. 6. More than 20 teams participated in their first practice games of the year.

Oak Park and Proviso, members of the Suburban league, came through with the outstanding victories of the day. Oak Park, perennial threat in the league race, overwhelmed Georgetown, Ill., 27 to 0, at the Oak Park stadium. Proviso, aided by a safety in the second period, scored an 8 to 7 triumph over Downers Grove at Maywood.

La Grange Beats Morton, 20-6.

Led by Stewart and Moore, La Grange swamped Morton, 20 to 6, on the latter's field. Moore accounted for two of La Grange's touchdowns, while Stewart scored the other. Morton made its only touchdown in the last quarter, when Furdik, left half back, plunged over from the 3 yard line.

A touchdown in the final minutes enabled New Trier to defeat Bloom, 6 to 0. New Trier marched to the Bloom 3 yard line, and Foslund then carried the ball over on a plunge through center.

At Michigan City, Loyola of the Chicago Catholic High School league, suffered its first defeat, 25 to 7. It was Loyola's second game of the season. Loyola scored in the first quarter on a long run by Warner, but the score was tied in the second period. Michigan City then came through in the third and fourth quarters to triumph.

Froebel and De La Salle Tie.

De La Salle, also of the Chicago Catholic league, played a scoreless tie with Froebel at Gary, Ind. Geneva's lightweight and heavyweight teams had no difficulty defeating West Chicago's squads at Geneva. The heavyweights won, 34 to 0, and the lightweights, 20 to 0.

LEO PLAYS ST. MEL

Leo High school, which has hopes of gaining the Chicago Catholic High School league football championship, will open its season with a practice game against St. Mel at Shewbridge field, 74th and Aberdeen streets, this afternoon. Three other practice games will be played today.

In the other contests Joliet will meet St. Ignatius at St. Philip field, Van Buren and Albany streets; St. Michael will play Marmion at Aurora, and St. Patrick and De Paul will battle at De Paul field, Webster and Sheffield avenues.

A heavy veteran line and a fast back field have boosted Leo's hopes for a championship. Ten letter men were among the players who reported to Coach Whitey Cronin. However, Tom Woods, 225 pound veteran tackle, was lost to the team for several weeks when he suffered a broken shoulder in practice.

Tom Gallagher, 190 pound sophomore, probably will replace Woods in the regular lineup. The players who will start against St. Mel will be Capt. Tommy Byrne and Tom Brennan, ends; Frank Ernst and Gallagher, tackles; Bunny Weeneman and Jim Fitzgerald, guards; Chris Hoy, center; Bill Hinckley and Hal Bowen, half backs; Sis Mulcahy, quarter back, and Larry Prosek, full back.

GREY STREAK IS HANDY WINNER IN JUVENILE STAKE

Epernay Runs Second and Irksome Third.

Chicago 2 year old thoroughbreds put on a fine entertainment for 7,500 racegoers at Lincoln Fields yesterday afternoon when they dominated the running of the Fort Thomas handicap. Romping home in first place was Grey Streak, a son of Pompey-Jezebel which carried the cardinal and gold jacket of Mrs. John Marsch of Chicago.

Finishing second was Epernay, a fast stepping but weak hearted son of Epinard-Washoe Belle with the cardinal and green jacket of Mrs. Marsch's husband, John. They ran as an entry because John McPherson trains both of them.

And in third place came Irksome, a daughter of Diavolo-Percussion, which races for the Milky Way farms owned by Mrs. F. C. Mars of Chicago.

It's a Shutout.

It was a shutout the Chicago youngsters scored with Dancing Doll, the favorite from the Audley Farm stable of Virginia, fourth and Board Trade, another Chicago colt from Alderman Coughlin's barn fifth. Clientelle from New Orleans finished last.

Just what Mr. and Mrs. Marsch said to one another when they met at the dinner table last night after Mrs. Marsch's horse had given her husband's steed a sound trimming is their own business. At any rate Mrs. Marsch was rooting in very stout tones for Grey Streak and her husband John was whooping it up for Epernay.

They both won their bets because the two leaders ran as an entry. Yet there might have been a bit of a debate as to whether Mrs. Marsch's colt Grey Streak is a better horse than her husband John's Epernay.

Grey Streak Shows Class.

The race would indicate that Mrs. Marsch's horse is much the better and might possibly be a real turf hero when he becomes a 3 year old next season and runs in such distance events as the Kentucky Derby, Preakness, American Derby and Classic. Just where Epernay will be in these route affairs is something to guess about.

When the barrier lifted Epernay flew out into a lead of three lengths with Board Trade running second, Dancing Doll third, Grey Streak fourth and Clientelle fifth. Irksome was far back in last place.

Epernay, showing all of his old daddy Epinard's speed, soon raced out into a lead of five lengths and appeared to be having fun while maintaining it around the turn into the home stretch.

Epernay Relinquishes Lead.

Maybe he knew that Grey Streak was moving up fast and would take up the running if he weakened. Or maybe his legs just got tired from moving so swiftly. At any rate his stride shortened and he was in great distress about the time Grey Streak moved past Board Trade and Dancing Doll and rushed up into second place.

Epernay didn't seem to mind it when Grey Streak rushed up and sailed past him and went into the lead. Epernay started running a bit faster then and easily held Irksome safe, beating her out of third money by a margin of three lengths.

Grey Streak showed the finest speed of the day over the dull track when he negotiated the 5½ furlongs in 1:07 which is only a couple of seconds off the track record. He was ridden by Jocky McCown. It was the third victory for this downstate kid.

Winning Entry Pays $7.00.

In the mutuel betting the entry of Mrs. Marsch and her husband John paid $7.00 to win, $6.20 to place, and $4.46 to show. Irksome paid $6.92 to show.

The Washington Heights handicap was another high spot on the program and it brought a thrilling finish when Noah's Pride, ridden by Paul Keester and at 6 to 1 in the betting, charged up on the outside to beat Cloud D'Or by three-quarters of a length. Fanfern, on which there had been a terrific last minute plunge, ran gallantly but could do no better than third.

Old Siskin, who seems to be slipping down the ladder, was seventh in the eight horse race. He failed to display any of his usual speed, which apparently has been dulled by his many recent efforts. It may be that his brittle legs are beginning to hurt him again.

FIRST RACE AT LINCOLN FIELDS DECIDED BY A NECK

Canteron, ridden by Jocky D. McCown, takes the opening event of the eight race program at Lincoln Fields yesterday by a neck from Dutchy, a long shot. Joe Macaw was third, a length behind the first two horses. Jocky McCown came back to win the second race on Brilliant Queen and the fifth race an Grey Streak to take riding honors for the day. Rosemont, at $21.20, Wins Eastern Shore

Havre de Grace, Md., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Rosemont, the little colt that weakened in the final furlong after setting the early pace in the $100,000 futurity at Belmont Park, today whirled over six furlongs in 1:11 1-5 to whip 13 other 2 year olds in the Eastern Shore handicap.

Carrying the colors of William du Pont's Foxcatcher farms, the son of The Porter coasted to a four length victory to earn the purse of $11,225 and pay the long odds of $21.20 for a $2 win ticket. The Calumet farm's Nellie Flag nosed out George D. Widener's Go Quick, a rank outsider, for the place.

Balladier Is Scratched.

Much of the interest was taken from the event by the withdrawal of E. R. Bradley's Balladier, the prerace favorite. The Kentucky colt suffered an injured leg in his stall last night and Trainer Dick Thompson said he would be retired for the season.

Plat Eye and Sailor Beware, representing Mrs. Payne Whitney's stable, were installed the favorites at slightly longer odds than 3 to 2, but neither was a serious threat. Plat Eye, considered the star of the stable, wound up next to last while Sailor Beware finished a distant fourth after showing brief early foot.

Takes Lead at Start.

Johnny Gilbert shot Rosemont to the front at the rise of the barrier. At the half mile post he was three lengths to the good and held that advantage to the head of the stretch. Gilbert then let his mount out a notch and Rosemont breezed home. The time was three-fifths of a second off the new track record, hung up by Mrs. F. A. Carreaud's 3 year old Time Supply in taking the third race from four high class sprinters.

COEQUEL WINS

New York, Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Another added starter, this time the gray filly Coequel, became a stake winner when she led from end to end of the mile and sixteenth Aqueduct handicap today to score in a driving finish.

At the end Coequel staved off the strong challenge of Indian Runner. Allen Tipton, rider of this son of Dis Donc, lodged a claim of foul against Eddie Litzenberger, rider of Coequel, but it was not allowed. Indian Runner was half a length before Catawba stable's Good Advice, which closed the 13 to 5 favorite.

Following the finish the stewards made the following announcement concerning the race:

"Jocky Litzenberger is fined $100 for attempting unfair tactics and is warned that a repetition will result in a serious suspension.

Coequel bore the Maemere farm colors and was coupled in the betting with Somebody. George Phillips, trainer of the Maemere farm, withdrew Flint Shot and added Coequel in his place. The entry was held at 18 to 5 and was the joint second choice with William Woodward's Faireno.

Massera Beats Dudas in Eight Round Bout

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Charley Massera, Pittsburgh heavyweight, outpointed Steve Dudas, Edgewater, N. J., in an eight round bout tonight. Massera won the first seven rounds, but was floored in the eighth for a count of nine and had trouble weathering Dudas' late rally. Massera weighed 186½ pounds; Dudas, 183½.

CANTERON, well up from the start and lightly restrained for five-eighths, came around the leaders gradually and weakened near end, but stalled off DUTCHY. ALEXA STIRLING WINS CANADIAN OPEN GOLF TITLE

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Mrs. Alexa Stirling Fraser of Ottawa, won the Canadian women's open golf championship, defeating Miss Ada Mackenzie of Toronto, the defending champion, 1 up on the 38th hole.

It was the first extra hole match in the tournament since the finals were extended to 36 holes in 1920. Mrs. Fraser, as the former Alexa Stirling of Atlanta, first won the open in 1920. She has also won the United States women's title three times.

Louis-Wiater Fight Best on Week's Card

A 10 round bout between Adolph Wiater, Green Bay, Wis., heavyweight, and Joe Louis of Detroit, Mich., at Arcadia Gardens, Wednesday, will head this week's Chicago boxing schedule, which will include three other professional shows and two amateur cards.

Promoter Maurice Rivkin has matched Billy Celebron, Rockford, Ill., 147 pounder, against Billy Miller of Milwaukee, Wis., in the eight round topliner at Marigold Gardens tomorrow. Another show tomorrow will be offered at the Midway arena with Johnny Stanton, Minneapolis, and Joey Kleko, Chicago, booked to meet for eight rounds in the windup. On Tuesday Bob La Monte and Patrick Henry, Chicago fighters, will clash in the eight round main event at Western stadium.

Going to the Top?

The Miller-Celebron encounter brings together two of the most promising boxers in the welterweight division. Both are Golden Gloves graduates. In addition to winning an international Golden Glove, Celebron won the 1933 National A. A. U. championship. He has won his 17 pro fights. Miller is undefeated in his last five combats. He whipped Dick Sisk and Jim McFarland and knocked out Iowa Joe Rivers, Joey Kaufman, and Jimmy King.

Louis, 1934 Golden Glove and National A. A. U. light heavyweight champion, will be facing his toughest assignment since he turned pro last July 4 against Wiater, also a Golden Gloves alumnus. Although the Detroit Negro has been victorious in his six professional appearances, none of his pro opponents, with the possible exception of Buck Everett, can measure up to Wiater in ability.

The Green Bay mauler, who has lost only one scrap in 19, is a methodical, consistent warrior with considerable stamina and strength. His most noted accomplishment is an unofficial triumph over Johnny Risko, the old Cleveland, O., spoiler, at Green Bay, Aug. 18. In the middle of the fifth round of that bout, when Adolph appeared a certain winner, a thunderstorm broke and the bout was halted. Several attempts to rematch the two have been unsuccessful.

Mrs. Lena Levy still directs boxing activities of her heavyweight brother, King Levinsky, contrary to published reports in other newspapers that they had severed all business connections. . . . In addition to managing the Kingfish, Mrs. Levy has taken over the direction of his fan dancer wife, Roxanne Glickman. . . . Earl Mastro, who grossed approximately $100,000 in the time he was a featherweight headliner, will present the first of a series of amateur shows tomorrow night at Community Recreation center, formerly known as West Side Knights of Columbus clubhouse. . . .

Bouts on this week's schedule include:

Monday.

At Marigold Gardens—Billy Celebron vs. Billy Miller [8], welterweights; Frank Mirabal vs. Freddy Cravelle [6], featherweights; Willie Dudlak vs. Sammy Guidara, bantamweights; Bud Ginter vs. Young Kid Chocolate, featherweights, and Tony Mandell vs. Cy Babbler, welterweights, each four rounds.

CLASSIC LEAGUE BOWLERS SEND TOTALS HIGHER

Four Boost Averages to 200 Mark.

BY HOWARD MARTIN.

Scores of more respectable proportions are beginning to appear in the Classic Bowling league, with the result that four men now are sporting averages of 200 or better. Those who have been coaxing the pins to fall more readily are Louie Levine, whose current 680 series boosted his average to 203; Eli Marcich and Joe Wilman with 202, and Ad Carlson with 200.

As the bowlers are reaching their best form and the pins and alleys are becoming more suitable for lofty counts, higher scores are expected tonight when the eight teams gather for another series of matches at the Idle Hour Recreation, 3118 North Ashland avenue, home of the Monarchs.

The Monarchs, now stumbling along with 11 victories and 10 defeats, hope to lead the bombardment tonight, since they think they are fully acquainted with the home drives. They are paired with the Classic team.

Budweiser, now in second place with 13 won and 8 lost, will oppose Edelweiss, which has the same record as the Classics, 8 victories and 13 setbacks. Vrba Motors, who have won 12 and lost 9, will meet the Baby Ruths, a team which has bettered its standing to the extent of 10 victories and 11 defeats. The leading Pabst Blue Ribbons, possessors of 16 triumphs as against five losses, will take on the last place La Salle-Windsors, who have won six games out of 21.

Randolph League Tougher.

The Goldammer Milfords, among others, have served notice they are going to give the champion Mineralites a race for the Randolph league championship, which will go into its second stage Thursday evening. While the Mineralites were winning a pair from Live Stock Press, the Milfords blasted out a 3,081 total that brought three victories over Arlington Country club. Four of the Milfords were over the 600 mark: Butler, 651; Gratz, 634, which included a 276 game; Kraft, 625, and Krause, 625. The Lee Hiles, Rebholz Gardens, and Curtiss Buy Jiminy also started the race with three victories, though their scores were not so impressive. Thursday's schedule:

9 O'CLOCK—Butterfingers vs. Greyhound Lines; Mineralites vs. Curtiss Buy Jiminy; Live Stock Press vs. Burlington Route; Rebholz Gardens vs. Mary Ann Bread.

Windy City League.

The Lauterbach Coals will carry a record of six straight victories into the third week of competition in the Windy City Major league tomorrow night. Their ability to maintain a perfect record will be put to a test against the Curtiss Buy Jiminy squad, one of the four teams tied for third place with four won and two lost. Ted Svoma's 207 pace has been a major factor in the success of the Lauterbachs, but his average is not high enough to top the individuals, Bobby Rusch of the Mineralites being the No. 1 man with a 215 average. Tomorrow's schedule:

Curtiss Buy Jiminy-Lauterbach Coals; Pilsen Olympia-Vogel Brothers; Denby Cigars-Vrba Motors; Betinis Boosters-Mineralites; Bender Dairy-J. M. Kralovec & Sons; Muggsie McGraw-Blazek Tailors; Mayor Cerny-O'Keefe Coals; Soper Brothers-Pinkert & Sons.

Get Going at Woodlawn.

Paced by the Brucks who collected a 3,002 series, the teams in the Woodlawn Major league helped themselves to good scores. Howard Darling of the Whalens knocked off a 698 total that proved his broken right arm now is in good shape. Fitzgerald of the Woodlawns shot high game of 268. Among the 600 shooters were Garvey, 612; Hile, 618; Plunge, 634; Skovie, 624; Gordon, 622; Kortas, 619; Halgren, 632, and Bernhardt, 601. Tommy McGlone became president of the 400 club with 485, his second consecutive series of this sort. The Miller High Lifes, Bloom Florists, and Brucks share first place with five won and one lost. Tomorrow's schedule:

Crest Recreation vs. Brucks; James Whalens vs. American Brakeblocks; Bloom Florists vs. Woodlawns; Oofondaliers vs. Miller High Life.

Where the Pins Fall.

The sharpshooters in the North End Traveling league are blazing away with such accuracy that the circuit claims the biggest total in the city thus far, a magnificent 3,233 count by the Milfords, which nevertheless was good for only two victories over the Fox's De Luxe, who did right well themselves with 3,120. Pacemaker in the 3,233 effort was Pete Petersen, who included a 278 game in his 726 series. Not far behind was Joe Gratz's 706. Petersen's big count hoisted him atop the individual standing with a 217 average.

A number of good scores were registered in the other matches. The Birk Brothers toppled 3,117 with the aid of 713 and 276 by Joe Traubenick; the Superbs lost two to the Birks with 3,054. The Miller High Lifes stopped the Michelobs in two games with 3,079 against 3,001; the Westers gained first place with a sweep over the Butterfingers and the Samuelsons took the odd game from the Idle Hours. Tomorrow night's schedule:

Milfords vs. Birk Superbs at Willow, 7 p. m.; Idle Hours vs. Birk Brothers at Lincoln Square, 7 p. m.; Samuelsons vs. Michelobs at North Town, 7 p. m.; Westers vs. Fox De Luxe at Kaadland, 9 p. m.; Miller High Life vs. Butterfingers at Gold Coast, 9 p. m.

About the Women.

Dorothy Burmeister set a record for a sanctioned women's league when she shot games of 235, 246, and 220 for a 701 series in the Congress Ladies' league. Not an open frame in her three games! Expert bowling was contagious, as witness: Mary Gordon, 593; Celia Grob, 588; Marie Warmbier, 577; Clara Braun, 570; Fritzi Trettin, 555, and Kathleen Kalmes, 552. And 200 games! Look 'em over: Mary Gordon, 234; Carrie Enders, 225; Ann Unhoch, 220; Clara Braun, 214; Kathleen Kalmes, 213; Laura Stellmacher, 212; Elaine Peters, 211; Fritzi Trettin, 207; Gertrude Ritchie, 206; Helen Brussow, 206; Celia Grob, 205; Ethel Kelly, 202, and Marie Warmbier, 201. Perhaps Wednesday's round will break the first place tie between the Alberti Jewelers and the Birk's Superbs, who have won eight out of nine.

H. Miller, 511; B. Brown, 507, and I. Wirt, 501, were the leading shooters in the Monte Cristo Women's league, which is led by the Quaker Girls and Neponsets, each with six straight victories. . . . Helen Foell is president of the Woodlawn Women's Afternoon league and G. Weisenfell serves in a similar capacity for the Evening league. Both circuits have been bowling for two weeks. . . . Thirty teams with six in each lineup have started the season in the Northtown Ladies' Evening league, which is headed by Margaret Kartheiser. . . . Lillian Jung is president of both the West Ridge Tuesday and Thursday leagues.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Russell Martin of Flossmoor, not content with having run off with low gross honors in the Frolic at his club on Thursday, yesterday shot a 76, the best golf of the Glen View club's 26th annual Twa Days, one of the venerables of Chicago district invitational tournaments. Russ, who went to the fifth round in the national amateur at Brookline, was out in 40, four over par, but went to work and matched the incoming card with a 36. His score brought him the only gross prize in a handsome collection of 24, the Laigh and Lang trophy.

Martin's nearest rivals for the Laigh and Lang trophy were John D. Ames of Glen View, former Princeton captain, Henry C. Bartholomay of Indian Hill, secretary of the Western Golf association, and Hunter Hicks, Bob o'Link, each with 77, and Kenneth Burns, former Glen View champion, competing unattached, with a 78. Martin's winning card follows:

Par—Out	434	445	354—36
Par—In	434	535	444—36—72
Martin—Out	535	447	354—40
Martin—In	344	535	444—36—76

Russ was short at the first and then missed a 4 foot putt. He three putted the third and on the 547 yard sixth hooked his tee shot back of a tree playing out safely and taking three putts again. He was on the 431 yard 10th in two and dropped a 20 footer for a birdie. He took 3 from off the edge of the 11th, but followed par perfectly from there to the finish.

The prize list follows:

THOMAS MESSITT, FORMER GIANT CATCHER, DIES

Thomas Messitt, 65 years old, once a catcher for the New York Giants Baseball club and for the last twenty-seven years a conductor on the elevated lines, dropped dead yesterday of a heart attack as his train reached the elevated station at Randolph and Wells streets.

The body was removed to undertaking rooms at 226 West Randolph street after Dr. E. E. Holmblad, 20 West Jackson boulevard, had pronounced Messitt dead.

The widow, Mrs. Julia Messitt, declared her husband had played professional ball for several years and was at one time a battery mate of Jack Quinn, for many years one of the leading pitchers of the major leagues.

Messitt, who lived at 1103 South Humphrey avenue, Oak Park, is survived by his widow, one son, John, and one daughter, Mrs. Rose Gubbins.

Star Pros to Play Goodman, Little Today

The Indian Hill club in Winnetka this afternoon will be the scene of an exhibition golf match the like of which, for reputation and talent, has not been seen in the Chicago district in a decade. It brings together Lawson Little of San Francisco, holder of the American and British amateur championships, and Johnny Goodman of Omaha, winner of last year's United States open, against Tommy Armour of Medinah, Canadian open champion, and Harry Cooper of Glen Oak, western open title holder.

LAWSON LITTLE.

The entire proceeds of the match, tickets for which are $1, will be turned over to the caddy scholarship fund of the Western Golf association, which is sponsoring the event. The match will start at 2:30 p. m.

Little Greatest Amateur.

None of the four players involved needs an introduction, for each is a star in his own right. Little is unquestionably the world's greatest amateur, demonstrating that at Brookline recently when he added the United States title to the British crown he had won at Prestwick, Scotland, in the spring.

Goodman is the only amateur since Bobby Jones' retirement to wrest the open championship from professionals. This year he and Little comprised the prize twosome of the American Walker cup team, defeating Cyril Tolley and Roger Wethered, who previously had never lost a foursome match, by 8 to 6, the most decisive score of the series.

Armour Wins 'Em All.

Armour has held every major championship a professional can win, including the British and American opens and the national P. G. A. This year he won the Canadian open for the third time. Cooper, in coming from nowhere to place third in the national open, started the hottest scoring streak of the season. He came home to win the Illinois open and Illinois P. G. A. titles, climaxing these with a victory in the western open, in which he was 25 under par for 108 holes played.

LITTLE ESCAPES FIRE.

GALT, Ont., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Three United States golf stars, Lawson Little, holder of the amateur title, Johnny Goodman, former open champion, and Chick Evans of Chicago, escaped injury early today when the car in which they were driving caught fire after striking a high tension electric pole near here.

The three players were en route from Guelph, where they played yesterday on a course donated to the city by Arthur W. Cutten of Chicago. They planned to board a train here for Detroit.

The car went into the ditch as the driver veered too far off the road to avoid colliding with another automobile. Sandy Somerville, veteran Canadian golfer who played with the Americans in the exhibition match, was close behind in his own car and helped pull the trio from the overturned machine.

C. Y. O. BASEBALL TEAMS PLAY FOR CITY TITLE TODAY

St. Hyacinth, defending titleholder, and St. Adrian will meet this afternoon at Normal park for the Catholic Youth organization baseball championship of Chicago. The game is called for 3:30 o'clock and will be preceded by a series of three softball games which will decide C. Y. O. titles in the junior, girls' and senior divisions.

St. Hyacinth and St. Adrian will be playing for the right to engage the C. Y. O. champion of Louisville, Ky., in an intercity contest at Louisville next Sunday. Either Tony Slowinski or Wenceslaus Walkowicz will pitch for St. Hyacinth, while St. Adrian will rely upon Ray [Lefty] Owens, southpaw star. Last year Owens was declared the most valuable player in the national C. Y. O. tournament and hurled St. Adrian to the first national title.

Both Chicago teams reached the semi-final round of the national C. Y. O. tournament which concluded at Wrigley field last Sunday. St. Adrian lost to Holy Assumption of Milwaukee, Wis., eventual winners, while St. Hyacinth was defeated by St. Mary's of Alton, Ill.

MOTOR TOURING UP 20 PER CENT, SURVEY REVEALS

Figures Show 1934 Best Year Since 1928.

The 1934 touring season, drawing to a close except for the winter trek to the south, has been attended by more recreation travel than in any year since 1928. The American Automobile association estimates that there has been a 20 per cent increase in pleasure tours over 1933 and a 25 per cent increase in per capita expenditures.

A Century of Progress, as in 1933, was the nation's leading tourist attraction, drawing more than a quarter of a million automobiles to Chicago. Last year other resort sections felt they had lost business to the World's Fair, but this year all catering to the motor travel enjoyed an increase in trade.

Expenditures Up.

"If the current trend holds for the remainder of the year, and indications are that it will, motor expenditures for 1934 will amount to close to $3,125,000,000, or $625,000,000 more than the expenditures for 1933," the A. A. A. said. The average tour this year covered longer distances and consumed more time.

"There was much less shopping around for cheap accommodations in 1934, with the result that the better resorts and the better hotels got more of the business. There was a distinctive increase in the individual outlay on the road and at vacation points. Only three A. A. A. clubs, out of scores reporting from the key cities of the country, failed to show an increase over last year, while some clubs reported more than a 50 per cent gain. Along with a material gain in long distance touring there went a considerable increase in short, week-end tours.

"Despite the advent of prohibition repeal in the United States, Canada, and particularly the maritime provinces, continued a major attraction for United States tourists. There was also a definite increase in touring interest in Mexico, as shown by the records of A. A. A. motor clubs at border points.

West Coast Benefited.

"The northwest and northern and central California had one of the best summers in many years, from the standpoint of tourist patronage. The California State Automobile association reported that through August 349,000 out of state cars had come into northern and central California, as compared with 276,000 cars for the same period last year.

"There was a 60 per cent increase in the number of cars entering Yellowstone, which is usually an index of travel conditions as regards the other national parks, national forests, and reservations.

"New England, New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Minnesota, and Wisconsin got their share of the increased motor travel. The middle western areas were definitly affected by the drouth condition, and this also caused fewer transcontinental tours than would otherwise have been the case."

2d East-West Polo Match Is Postponed

New York, Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Polo players and officials have been unable to shake the jinx of rain which has pursued the East-West championship series for the last three weeks and which once again has forced a postponement. The second game of the series, which was to have been played today, has been postponed until Tuesday or Wednesday, whichever is the first day conditions are possible. The decision will be made Monday and will be governed by the weather over the week-end and the prospects held out by weather bureau officials.

A heavy downpour just before noon today ended all chances of play this afternoon and prospects of continued rain made it impossible to hope for a field dry enough to play on tomorrow.

All of the officials and players were present this morning at the conference which resulted in the postponement. All the players are able to stay over for the following week. Some of the Westerners, however, were forced to change their plans in order to stay over.

CECIL SMITH TO WED.

Westbury, N. Y., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Cecil Smith, 10 goal handicap star of the West polo team, will be married to Miss Mary Mulford Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Miller of Wading River, N. Y., it was announced today.

The marriage will take place on Long Island, Tuesday, Oct. 2, but complete details have not yet been announced.

Miss Miller and Smith became engaged last June. She is 20. They met here last summer through Miss Miller's uncle, Thomas Mather, a polo-playing associate of Smith.

One of the country's three 10 goal poloists, Smith is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney C. Smith of San Antonio, Tex. The couple will reside on the Smith ranch at Llano, Tex.

DE PAUL VARSITY ELEVEN DEFEATS FRESHMEN, 26-0

Coaches Jim Kelly and Ben Connors were pleased with the work of the ends and guards, the line being the big question mark this season.

The work of John Reid and Norman Mertes stood out. Joe Wosik, a reserve last season, revealed great possibilities. He weighs only 158 pounds but is expected to develop into a star before the season is far advanced.

Sparkling in the backfield were two stars of last year, Bill Oldani and Walt Loess, and Willie Phillips, newcomer.

A COMEDIAN'S CAR

If you don't like the appearance of this car you might laugh at it. It was designed and built by Ralph Cook, vaudeville comedian, for his own use.

NEWS AND VIEWS

THE TRIBUNE'S free automobile inspection service was lauded last week by C. Moss, manager of Buick retail service in Chicago. He drove his personal car over the safety lane at 401 East Ontario street to receive an o.k. sticker on his windshield.

"The gratis service is a valuable contribution to Chicago's efforts to reduce its accident toll," Mr. Moss said. "The thousands who have patronized the lane have received expert advice on the condition of their vehicles. The publicity has called the attention of hundreds of thousands of car owners to the maintenance requirements for safety."

The practically unanimous opinion that September deliveries of passenger cars and trucks by Dodge dealers will exceed the sales figures of August, and that October business will outstrip sales recorded for July, pervaded a two day conference held at Detroit and attended by factory executives and by managers of the twelve geographical regions composing the Dodge Brothers' field organization.

An average of 22.4 miles per gallon over a 3,000 mile run is the record claimed by Ted Ellis, a veteran long distance driver, who piloted a Chevrolet knee action sedan over a several hundred mile course between Coalinga and Sequoia national park, in California. The total oil consumption is reported as two and one-half quarters.

Approximately ninety star salesmen, from various parts of the United States, visited Chicago and A Century of Progress last week as guests of the Lincoln Motor Car company. W. C. Cowling, general sales manager of the Ford Motor company, addressed them at a breakfast in the Palmer house on Tuesday.

Word has just been received by Chester G. Abbott, general sales manager of the Hudson Motor Car company, that a Terraplane, driven by R. L. Richardson, won the Premier Glacier cup in the recent Alpine trial. Another Terraplane, driven by H. J. Davids, tied the winning score as well as a number of others, and also was awarded a duplicate Glacier cup.

Marco Polo, seasoned traveler though he was, would have had a hard time matching the mileage record set almost every year by Harold M. Salisbury, export salesmanager for Nash. In his official capacity, he covers an average of nearly 100,000 miles yearly. Few corners of the globe remain that have not been visited by Mr. Salisbury at one time or another and he numbers among his friends the members of many different races.

Louis Unser, driving Glen Shultz's record holding Stutz Special, set a new record in the open class in the annual Pike's peak hill climb on Labor day. His time of sixteen minutes one and eight-tenths seconds exceeded the old record by nearly a full minute.

Three stock Ford V-8s all took turns breaking the existing stock car records, the best time being turned in by Hammond, who made the climb in nineteen minutes twenty-five and seven-tenths seconds. Champion spark plugs were used in every car in both open and stock car classes.

Chevrolet, at a luncheon for 500 of its salesmen last week in the Hotel Sherman, presented $7,500 bonuses. G. I. Smith, regional manager, and Walter C. Hill, zone manager, distributed the awards.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

THANKS POLICEMEN.

Chicago, Ill., Sept. 4.—May I, through the medium of your newspaper, voice my sincere thanks to Officer Tom Kane and his partner, who came to the rescue of a lady in distress at 2 a. m. Friday, Aug. 24?

The writer was returning to Chicago via South Halsted street and Vincennes avenue. It was raining so hard that I could not see beyond ten or twelve feet ahead, so did not observe that the viaduct at 84th and Vincennes was flooded. I was driving very slow, but when I went under the viaduct it was like running into a tidal wave. The water sprayed up over the top of my coupé and, although I proceeded at a snail's pace, the damage was done and at 82d and Vincennes the car stalled.

Nothing I could do would coax it to budge and the few motorists passing heeded me not. At that hour in the morning there was no place I could even telephone for help and the rain continued unabated.

I sat marooned in the car for perhaps 45 minutes when Officer Kane and his partner came to my rescue in a police car. They pushed me to a garage several blocks away only to find that the night watchman on duty knew nothing about the trouble, but the officers were undaunted. After moving one or two other cars they manually pushed my car to a point where the compressed air was available. In about a half hour they had dried out the wires and I was able to proceed under my own power.

My offer of a monetary reward was refused. MRS. F. C. TAMS.

HITCH RIDERS.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 19.—I have just read your article in THE TRIBUNE regarding hitch hikers and think it rather timely.

I have often wondered just what you could do regarding boys hanging on the rear of autos and street cars.

Living here on 67th street where the street cars are run by one man it's not uncommon to see as many as six boys on the rear of a street car and on ractically every car during the day. I hope that during your tours through the city you will have a chance to look into this and try if you can to arouse some one before too many of those kids get killed or lose arms or legs.

I know it's a problem, but you've helped solve others and here's hoping. NINA R. GUNN.

PARKING BLOCKADES.

Chicago, Sept. 10.—Some day when you have time, drive to 1512 North Halsted street and note how the sidewalk and street for most a block are filled with cars and trucks. It wouldn't hurt to take a picture and put it in your paper. Police have been notified, but I guess they don't care, for nothing has been done about it. In driving south past this place you cannot pass a street car or any other vehicle for that matter.

Another place where the street is generally obstructed is in the 1400 block of West Randolph street, both sides of the street. JAS. T. THORNTON.

CURFEW FOR AUTO HORNS.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—Do you realize that 97 per cent of the times auto horns are blown it is unnecessary? Years ago piano playing in homes was silenced at 10 or 10:30 p. m. Why not silence auto horns from 10:30 p. m. until 8 a. m. in the city limits? Living on a boulevard or close to the stop signals auto horns annoy citizens all through the night. GEORGE V. ORAM.

"I GOTTA DRAG" PRESIDENT.

Chicago, Sept. 1.—Did some one mention the "I Gotta Drag" club? Today, the 1st of September, 1934, I saw a Buick parked in Grant park, in the Monroe street space, bearing license tag 1,227,308—1932. The owner must be the president of the club. What do you think? ACME.

TETTERTON AND SCHNEIDER DUEL ON TRACK TODAY

A match race between Jimmy Schneider of Indianapolis and Ted Tetterton, North Chicago, heads a five event program of auto racing today at the Evanston Motor Speedway, Lincoln and Devon avenues, starting at 3 p. m.

The match event will be at five laps, with the remainder of the card made up of two 20 lap events and two at 10 laps.

Schneider will have a new car today; a V-8 powered machine designed by Lou Madis of Chicago. His old car was burned out last week.

Other drivers on the program are Ernie Carlson and Charley Tegtmeier of Chicago who ran second and third to Tetterton twice last Sunday and Shorty Sorenson, Aurora, Ill.

EXPERIMENT IN LEFT TURNS IS PROVING SUCCESS

BY HAL FOUST.

"By this new method," said Leslie Sorenson, city trafic engineer, "an additional lane is provided for moving trafic. It is as much benefit to the motorists as if the pavement had been widened eight feet. Such a widening would have cost hundreds of thousands of dollars where property values are so high."

Jurisdiction Limited.

The city's jurisdiction in Michigan avenue is limited to the strip between the Chicago river bridge and Randolph street. South of Randolph street, in the south park jurisdiction, and north of the bridge, in the Lincoln park bailiwick, left turns are still directed to the right of safety islands.

In the south park jurisdiction the safety islands would have to be redesigned and rebuilt on different locations so that all the left turn lanes would be in the same center lane of the pavement. This would cost about $450 per island and there are fifteen or sixteen islands needing this treatment between Randolph street and Roosevelt road.

Cost Would be $7,200.

The total cost of such an innovation between Randolph street and Roosevelt road would be approximately $7,200. At "T" intersections, the benefit would be the same as eight feet of widening, but at cross streets the benefit would be two additional lanes. At present, with left turns in two directions, one lane is blocked by the island and one lane on each side of the island is used by the turners, a total of three lanes that could be moved onto one with the left turns routed from behind the safety zones.

North of the Michigan avenue bridge the safety islands are small and the left turns could be made from behind them without any expense for reconstruction.

Monroe and Michigan.

The heaviest left turn movement on the boulevard is at Monroe street where south bound drivers leave Michigan avenue to get on the outer drive. A double lane for this turning would accommodate twice as many cars, or the present number in half the time.

These are improvements that are being advocated as a new progressive stop and go system is about to be inaugurated in Michigan avenue. The new system, saving an average of two minutes for 75,000 automobiles a day, will be turned on in about two weeks.

STOCK CARS TO RACE TODAY AT ROBY SPEEDWAY

Stock car racing returns to Chicago today with two 50 mile events for this class of competition making up the program at the Roby-Chicago speedway, 108th street and Indianapolis boulevard. The program will start at 3 p. m.

Absent from Chicago tracks for several seasons, today's stock events have drawn several former stars of the sport, notably Emil Johnson of Gary, and L. L. Whitaker of Whiting, Ind.

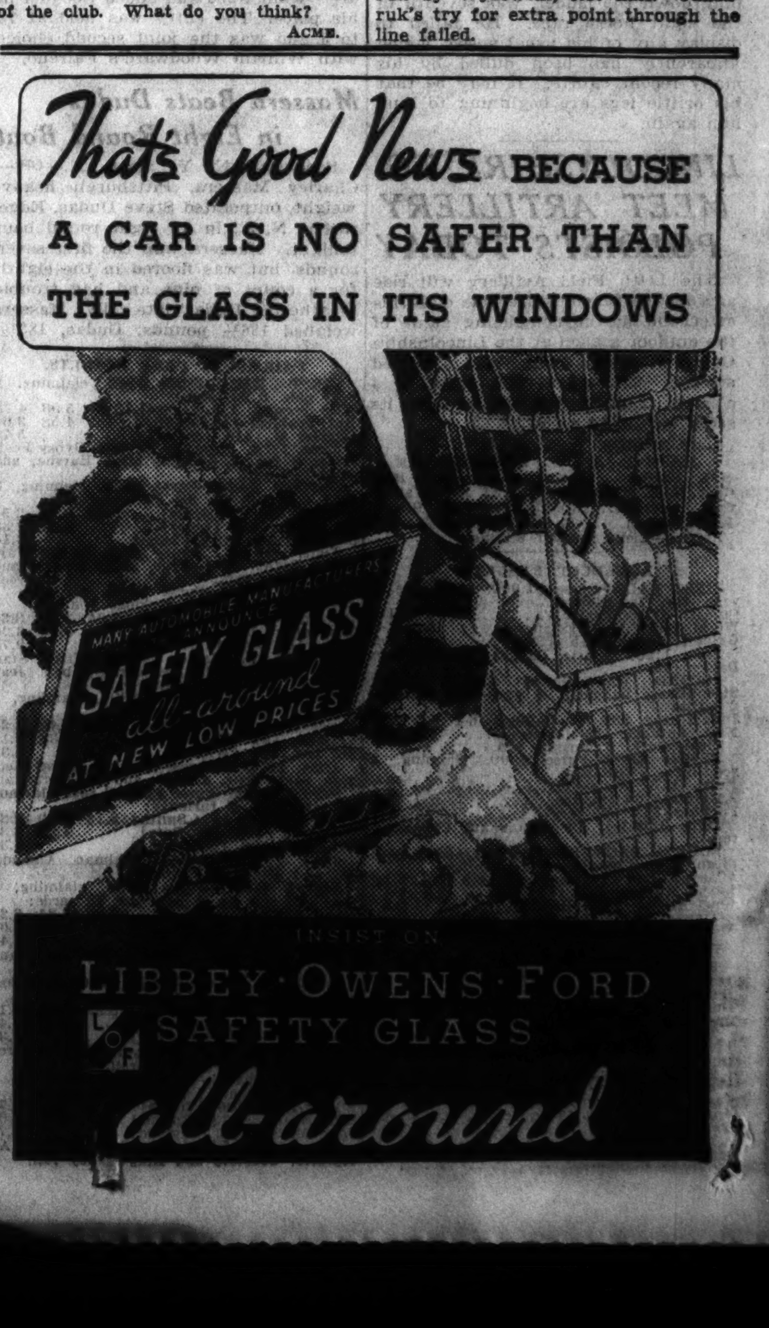
Riley Preps Defeat La Porte Eleven, 7-6

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Riley High school defeated La Porte, 7 to 6, tonight in the opening game of the Northern Indiana High school conference. Andy Kotzenmacher, Riley right half, scored on a 36 yard run and then drop-kicked the extra point in the first quarter. La Porte's touchdown came on a 39 yard run by Wyzowski, left half. Janzaruk's try for extra point through the line failed.



JUNK NRA, CUT FEDERAL POWER, PLEA OF TRADE

Commerce Group Urges Changes.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—Junking of the NRA when its law expires next June was recommended today by the United States Chamber of Commerce committee studying the recovery administration.

The National Industrial Recovery act should not be reënacted or extended, the committee advised the chamber, adding that any new legislation should vest in the government only power to veto trade practices agreed on by industry.

Clarification of all labor provisions to show clearly that section 7A allows minority groups of workers and individuals as well as the majority group to bargain with the employers was also asked by the committee.

Committee Presents Conclusions.

In what it called its tentative report, the committee said it is reaching the following conclusions:

"The National Industrial Recovery act should not be reënacted or extended. In any new legislation that may be considered to take effect after the present law has been allowed to expire there should be provisions under which the benefits of the National Industrial Recovery act may be obtained and developed in the public interest, and the disadvantages may be avoided.

"New legislation should be limited in its application to businesses engaged in, or affecting competition in, interstate commerce.

"Definite exemptions should be given from any existing legislation, including anti-trust laws, which might be considered in conflict with the new legislation.

"New legislation should permit each industry to formulate and to put into effect rules of fair competition and fair trade practices which receive governmental approval.

Wants U. S. Power Limited.

"The governmental agency should have only the power of approval or of veto.

"Rules of fair competition and trade practices formulated and approved as above should be enforceable against all concerns in the industry.

"There should also be opportunity for members of an industry to enter into an agreement as to fair competition and trade practices, with governmental approval as above, to be enforceable only against members of the industry that becomes parties to the agreement.

"The new legislation should give an express right to an industry, or to the parties in an industry to an agreement, to terminate an approved code or agreement upon reasonable notice to the governmental authority and a corresponding right for the governmental authority to terminate upon reasonable notice."

Study Wage Bargaining.

The committee promised further consideration of labor's collective bargaining guarantees as "matters of crucial importance." In favoring minority representation in collective bargaining the committee went counter not only to the labor board but also to the American Federation of Labor.

The committee reported to the chamber that its final recommendation on NRA would be made in October. It did not discuss the more immediate reorganization plans under consideration by President Roosevelt nor detail what agency it would have take NRA's place.

The committee's views were made public as Hugh S. Johnson returned to the capital after a seashore vacation. Johnson remained at home during the day, however, and declined to be interviewed.

BY HOWARD WOOD.

The growing political agitation for the government's taking over the federal reserve banks, although dressed up with a lot of false whiskers, is purely a political move to fill up the wasting pork barrel.

Those who advocate this move seek to give the public the impression that it is a "reform" measure. It is not hard to give this impression because the functions of the federal reserve system are so little known to the general public.

The federal reserve system is not especially in need of reform. All of the twelve federal reserve banks came through the depression in excellent condition, due to their conservative management and the sound manner in which they were set up. Any ordinary commercial or savings bank weathering hard times as well as the Federal Reserve bank of Chicago, for example, could well be proud of its record.

The closest approach to trouble occurred just before the moratorium when hard presed New York banks kept draining the Federal Reserve bank of New York until its reserve ratio was below the legal minimum of 40 per cent. At that time, however, the Chicago reserve bank, which was in much stronger position, came to the rescue and helped the New York institution over the bad spot.

No officer of a federal reserve bank has been indicted or even exposed to public disapproval by the senate banking committee. No federal reserve bank has had to sell preferred stock to the Reconstruction Finance corporation. No federal reserve bank has ever closed or been unable to pay on the line.

Why, then, this political clamor for "reform" of the federal reserve system?

The crux of the matter is that the ownership or control of the twelve federal reserve banks would give the politicians at Washington enormous additional powers over the entire banking structure of the nation, plus complete control of the issuance of money.

At present the reserve banks are subject to strict regulation by the politically appointed federal reserve board at Washington, but they are owned by their member banks and have, within certain limits, the power to determine their own investment policies.

Under existing laws if the government could get control of the reserve banks it could follow a program of almost limitless currency inflation without either printing "greenbacks" or further debasing the dollar. The job could be done by selling government bonds to the reserve banks and then printing federal reserve bank notes against these government bonds.

This would be "greenbackism." Ultimately it would have exactly the same effect as the printing of greenbacks, because there is no essential difference between printing paper money secured by government bonds and printing paper money backed only by the government's promise to pay.

Thus, the foundation is already laid for a limitless paper money inflation. Laws passed since March 4, 1933, have paved the way—federal reserve bank notes—is already in circulation, and more can be printed on a moment's notice.

Up to the present, probably the biggest deterrent to the exploitation of the federal reserve banks as the agency for bringing about inflation has been the resistance of the federal reserve banks themselves. They have gone a long way, it is true. Nine-tenths of their outstanding credit is now tied up in their holdings of government bonds. But for several months they have not bought additional government bonds. They have sought to stop before it is too late.

At present the treasury is again having trouble selling its bonds. It has offered a higher interest rate and other concessions, but still the subscriptions are slow coming in.

In December another billion of bonds will have to be sold to meet a maturity. And with billions of dollars of new allocations being made to this and that alphabetical bureau, the treasury will have to be in the market frequently with additional bond offerings, because most of these New Deal projects are to be financed with borrowed money.

Thus, it is only natural that the administration should yearn for sufficient control over the twelve federal reserve banks to be able to make them buy more and still more new government bonds. Once it got this control, political pressure would probably insure its continued exercise. You can't give Johnny the key to the jam cupboard and expect him to take just one spoonful.

Realizing the dangers inherent in this program bankers and business men throughout the country are warming up for a strenuous protest. Already rumblings of this oposition are reported to have caused the New Dealers to decide not to try to make the reserve banks simply treasury branches, but to demand only the power to appoint the head of each reserve bank and the power to direct each reserve bank's bond buying operations. That, of course, would mean getting complete control of the reserve banks, but wouldn't sound so drastic.

How the Price of U. S. Steel Common Has Fluctuated During the Past Three Years

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—(AP)—The Bankhead cotton control act went on trial "for its life" today and the verdict was "acquittal."

"The act will not be suspended," said Chester C. Davis, AAA administrator, after a conference in which Secretary Wallace and congressmen from the cotton states participated. Wallace said virtually the same thing. To help small farmers, who complained against the measure, their allotments under it will be increased 10 per cent.

The Bankhead law, passed largely through the efforts of Senator Bankhead [Dem., La.], who participated in the discussion today, places a tax of 5½ cents a lint pound on all cotton sold from this year's crop in excess of 10,460,251 bales.

First Compulsory Plan.

The measure was the first compulsory crop control legislation and President Roosevelt had to approve it publicly before it was passed by congress.

Primarily, because of drouth, the production of cotton this year is estimated at only 9,252,000 bales, more than a million bales below the Bankhead quota. Nevertheless, many farmers east of the Mississippi river and some elsewhere will have to pay the levy. Their production has exceeded, or will exceed, the allotment assigned them under the measure. This, combined with delay and administrative difficulties, led to an outcry for outright suspension of the law. The idea was abandoned so far as the farm administration is concerned, at today's conference.

Reserve 10 Per Cent Allotment.

Wallace pointed out that the county allotments thus far are only 90 per cent of the final allotment each county will receive. "In other words," he said, "we reserved 10 per cent of the allotment to handle cases where there may be injustices and inequities. But I think this fact has not been generally recognized and that this 10 per cent will take care of the situation."

The delegation which visited Secretary Wallace was divided on suspension of the control measure. Most of the group from west of the Mississippi, among them being Chairman Jones of the house agriculture committee, opposed suspension because, in their view, it would be an injustice to farmers who do not raise the allotment given them.

U. S. IS NIGGARD WITH BENEFITS, ILLINOIS CLAIMS

Pays Most Processing Tax, Gets Little Back.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—(AP)—The department of agriculture is having considerable difficulty convincing citizens of Illinois that they are receiving all the benefit payments coming to them.

The task, officials say, is made a Herculean one because internal revenue collection statements for the fiscal year of 1934 show that Illinois paid $53,353,080 into the treasury as processing taxes, more by $14,000,000 than any other state, and yet has received comparatively small returns.

Their problem grew all the more complicated, they said, when the Agricultural Adjustment administration issued a summary as of July 31—the same date as the revenue bureau's—showing that $34,747,729 has been disbursed through Illinois.

Get Less Than Authorized.

The rub came, they admitted, when a "breakdown" of that total showed that Illinois' citizens actually received at least $21,056,018 less than the total disbursed. In other words, only about $14,000,000 drifted into the pockets of Illinois farmers by that date. Those in charge of furnishing information from the department shy from inquiries concerning Illinois because, they say, "it takes a long time to explain what they're all about."

Chicago is the world's capital stockyards city. Inasmuch as hogs from throughout the nation are slaughtered there, the processing tax is collected at that point instead of at the hogs' origin. Therefore the collection shows up in the Illinois column, although the tax is really paid by every consumer who purchases Chicago slaughtered meat.

Distribute from Chicago.

By the same method, officials explain, Chicago is a principal AAA disbursing unit. Of the $32,627,831 spent through the office for the removal of surplus crops, only a little more than $3,150,000 actually stuck to the fingers of Illinois farmers.

Illinois' friend at court in its drive to speed up corn-hog payments is the Peoria-born director, A. G. Black.

"Being a native of that state," he says, "makes me all the more anxious that payments on contracts for Illinois be made as rapidly as possible."

In June, 1933, Black became acting director of the corn-hog program section. The following December he was made permanent director.

Chicago Area Progresses as Finance Center

Growing recognition accorded the midwest in financial circles is emphasized by three developments in the federal reserve organization.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau selected the Chicago reserve district as the most representative sector in which to learn the reasons for lack of credit to promote industrial recovery. It offered urban, rural, industrial, big business, small business, and intermediate business problems for the study of financial economists.

Chicagoans Head Groups.

In Washington last week, Chicagoans were chosen to lead in solving matters confronting bank examiners. C. S. Young, assistant federal reserve agent here, was named chairman of the conference of assistant federal reserve agents and chief examiners of the 12 reserve banks. It was the first time that such a meeting ever had been held, although representatives of a few of the districts have held powwows from time to time.

While the agents and chief examiners were meeting, a separate gathering of all trust section examiners was in session for the first time. Again a Chicago man, W. H. A. Johnson, trust examiner for the local district, was chosen chairman of the group.

In addition to these more recent developments, Eugene M. Stevens, Chicago federal reserve agent and ex officio chairman of the board of directors here, is chairman of the agents' conference of the twelve reserve banks.

Complete Field Works This Week.

The treasury credit survey, results of which are to be reported from Washington in late October or early November, is to be ended in its present scope this week. A dozen of the sixty field workers, however, will be retained another week to pick up loose ends.

Dr. C. O. Hardy, loaned for the survey by the Brookings institution, said that partial reports have been received here on all but half a dozen of the cities of 10,000 or more population in the local reserve district which includes parts of Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, and Indiana.

All reports are being subjected to a preliminary check for "obvious errors" and other matters at headquarters on the University of Chicago campus. As soon as the inquiry is completed Dr. Hardy will return to Washington, where he will assist in the tabulation and interpretation of material. Dr. Jacob M. Vinor, University of Chicago economics professor on leave as special adviser to Secretary Morgenthau, is in charge of the survey.

STOCKS EDGE UP JUST ENOUGH TO CHEER TRADERS

Big Operators Timid Over U. S. Attitude.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 22.—Enough plus signs were written into the record of today's dealings on the stock exchange to advertise the fact that Wall street speculative sentiment continues bullish, but that just about completes the chronicle. The market as a whole made no appreciable progress and the few gains of a point or more chalked up were generally in secondary or less active issues.

Activity was even at a little slower tempo than it has been on other recent Saturdays when prices were drifting to lower levels. Many traders were absent from the financial district and the majority of those on hand apparently did not consider the prospects clear enough to justify making extensive commitments.

Fear Federal Rulings.

Incidentally, an interesting tidbit of gossip going the commission house rounds had it that most of the "big fellows" of the speculative fraternity were holding aloof from the market for the time being, not so much because of their unwillingness to chance anything on the much discussed autumn pickup, which is still very much in the nebulous stage, but out of fear that the new securities exchange commission might misconstrue any activity they might undertake as pool operations.

With the commission due to go to bat very shortly these big timers feel, it was explained, that it might be just as well to lay off and leave the market to its own until the atmosphere begins to clear around some of the problems figuring in brokerage house worries at the moment.

Probably the nearest approach to a feature in today's dealings was the strength and activity of the utilities. Demand was quite impressive in some of the more prominent issues of the group and gains of a point or so were registered by American Water Works, Peoples Gas, and the first preferred of Electric Power and Light.

Court Decision Helps Group.

One of the chief reasons for the changed attitude toward the once lowly power and light issues is the recent decision of the federal district court at Kansas City holding that the Public Works administration lacks authority to make loans and grants to municipalities to set them up in business competition with private utility companies.

Retail store shares took a breathing spell after their exertions on the up side yesterday. Macy and Spiegel-May-Stern ranged a point higher, but Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Penney, and others prominent on the flurry were content to hold their newly won territory. Railroad shares, which also have been in strong favor since the current movement got under way last Tuesday, were quiet and little inclined to change in either direction.

The motors held around last night's closing levels, and most of the standard industrials did likewise. J. I. Case was a strong spot in the farm implement group. The liquor and chemical descriptions did little of moment.

Urge Second Trustee for Middle West

The name of a second candidate for trustee of Middle West Utilities company will be presented to Federal Judge Wilkerson tomorrow morning by Orville J. Taylor, counsel for the common stock holders' committee. At the same time, Samuel Ettleson, former corporation counsel and self-appointed protector of common stock holder rights, will file a petition asking that he intervene in reorganization proceedings.

Bankers and noteholders will present their completed plan for reorganization of the broken holding company and ask the selection of Daniel C. Green, president of Middle West, as permanent trustee. Mr. Green now is temporary trustee.

Acts on Principle.

Taylor was careful to explain his personal high regard for the ability and integrity of both Green and Charles A. McCulloch, former receiver, who installed Green as president. His opposition to sole appointment of Green is based entirely on principle, he said—that if he is opposing the plan offered by creditors he can't acquiesce to the Green selection by parties which he is fighting.

Taylor said he was unable to announce the name of his candidate for co-trustee, but promised that he would be "a utility man of unquestioned ability and integrity, who will be able to contribute a great deal in the determination of values of the company."

The present phase of the marathon case growing out of the Insull collapse revolves entirely about the question of valuations.

Cause of Solvency Fight.

In attempting to put through a reorganization in which they take all stock of the new company, creditors can overcome common stockholder opposition only by ruling them out of the picture by proving the company insolvent. Their whole case will be outlined in the reorganization plan to be presented tomorrow.

It is considered probable that Judge Wilkerson will be able to do little more than set a date for hearing arguments on the contention of insolvency, which will be contested "to the limit" by Taylor.

The peculiar position of the preferred stockholders will not be clearly defined until tomorrow afternoon, following the hearing. At that time the preferred committee will meet with its counsel, Donald F. McPherson, to determine its future course. This group has been placed in the position of favoring the "warant plan" of the creditors, while being totally opposed to the contention of insolvency.

Ettelson also filed yesterday his objections to claims of Attorney Henry I. Green of Urbana, Ill., for fees as friend of the court in the recent "town meeting" investigation of receivership appointees, held before Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley. Ettelson said there was no need for Green's services.

HAWAII IS NO 'PART' OF U. S., SAYS WALLACE

Tries to Beat Fight on Sugar Quotas.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace today argued that the Hawaiian Islands are not an "integral part" of the United States.

The amazing statement denying that the Hawaiian Islands ever "became an organized or incorporated territory of the United States or an integral part thereof" was made on Wallace's behalf in a brief filed by the department of justice in the Supreme Court of the United States.

The brief was drawn by Walter L. Rice, department of justice lawyer, to defend Wallace against an attack on the constitutionality of the AAA sugar program as applied to the Hawaiian Islands. A group of island sugar producers are attacking the quota program.

Doesn't "Drop" Islands.

Wallace's defense, as drafted by Rice, evidently does not propose to go so far as to split the Hawaiian Islands away from the United States. The government's brief in one point admits that a joint resolution of congress approved July 7, 1898, "provided for the annexation of the Hawaiian Islands to the United States, and that the sovereignty of the republic of Hawaii over the Hawaiian Islands was formally transferred to the United States of America on Aug. 12, 1898."

In their fine spun legal argument, however, Wallace and Rice attempt to show that although the United States annexed Hawaii, the islands never became an "integral part" of the United States.

They make this argument in an attempt to deny that the constitution covers Hawaii and thus to cut the ground out from under the island sugar producers and to strip them of the protection afforded other citizens of the United States by the constitution.

Denies Constitutional Rights.

A flat denial "that the constitution and laws of the United States were forever extended to and made applicable to the territory of Hawaii and its citizens and their properties and rights as elsewhere in the United States" was contained in the Wallace brief.

The republic of Hawaii, according to the arguments advanced by Wallace and Rice, adopted and ratified a treaty providing that Hawaii should be taken over as an integral part of the United States. Wallace today insisted that this treaty, although signed, was never ratified by the United States senate and therefore went into the discard.

Instead annexation of the islands was accomplished by the joint resolution passed in 1898 and this resolution, the brief insisted, made no provision for Hawaii being incorporated as an "integral part" of the United States.

INDICES REVEAL LITTLE CHANGE IN WEEK'S TRADE

New York, Sept. 22.—Statistics appearing during the last week indicated relatively little change in business activity, according to Moody's index figures for freight car loadings, electric power production, and steel ingot output. SILVER TRADERS PLAN TO SUPPORT TORONTO MARKET

TORONTO, Ont., Sept. 22.—[U. P.]—J. C. Cuppia, vice president of the New York Commodity exchange speaking before members of the Toronto Stock exchange, said that he and his associates had allied themselves with the Toronto Stock exchange in the establishment of a silver trading department to fill the gap caused by suspension of trading on the New York exchange.

Mr. Cuppia said the discontinuance of trading in silver futures in New York had necessitated the establishment of a silver market to provide hedging privileges against capital movements and commodities on this continent.

He said the Toronto exchange was the logical medium to assure preservation of this necessity.

He advised that some 400 brokerage firms in the United States had been approached in connection with supplying industrial and mining quotations on the tickers used by the Toronto exchange which carry silver prices from the new department.

Julius Baer, counsel for the New York Commodity exchange, in a brief address, advised that the silver trading unit would be $10,000 unit lots with a margin of 10 per cent required from traders.

Reichsbank Won't Pay Oct. 3 Dividend; No Exchange

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—(AP)—New evidence of Germany's precarious foreign exchange position was seen today in an announcement by the reichsbank that it would not pay its interim dividend Oct. 3 because of the impossibility of transferring the dividend to foreign stockholders.

MOST COMMODITIES REGISTER MODERATE GAINS DURING WEEK

Prices of most of the leading commodities registered moderate improvement last week. Slight gains were chalked up for all grain futures with the exception of barley. Cotton, lard, and butter also rose slightly, but eggs, sugar, and coffee showed price recessions. The following table gives yesterday's prices on a representative list of commodities compared with the preceding Saturday and the high and low quotations for the season:

STANDARD (N. J.) OPPOSES OIL CONTROL BY U. S.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—(AP)—The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey today placed itself in opposition to the administration's request for federal oil production control legislation.

Testifying before a house committee which is endeavoring to determine whether legislation is necessary, W. S. Farish, chairman of the board of Standard, opposed such control and recommended instead an interstate compact to curb overproduction.

He said the oil code had not been effective in halting overproduction and added he would not favor its continuance beyond the next June expiration date.

Questioned by Representative Pettengill [Dem., Ind.], Farish said that his company's earnings had increased since the code went into effect. He ascribed this improvement however, to what he called "coöperative efforts" to maintain price structure.

TRADE MEASURED BY CHECKS GAINS IN CHICAGO AREA

An increase of 7.7 per cent in business activity was recorded in the Chicago reserve area last week, measured by the value of checks drawn against individual accounts. Debits for the week ended Sept. 19 by 154 banks in 40 leading clearing house cities totaled $865,775,000 against $804,123,000 a week previous.

Excluding Clinton, Ia., and Manitowoc, Wis., for which comparable figures are not shown, debits in the 38 cities were $863,619,000 compared with $792,700,000 in 1933, a rise of 8.9 per cent.

Increases were shown in all leading centers. Chicago's total was $538,783,000 against $513,751,000; Des Moines, $17,391,000 against $13,035,000; Detroit, $122,283,000 against $107,853,000; Indianapolis, $31,090,000 against $27,309,000; and Milwaukee, $46,832,000 against $44,242,000.

GOLD CURRENCIES SLIGHTLY HIGHER AGAINST DOLLAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 22.—Foreign gold currencies gained slightly against the dollar in quiet trading here today. The French franc rose ⅛ point to close at 6.67½ cents while remaining unchanged at 6.67 cents in Paris. The pound remained at $4.99⅝ here, but was ¼ cent higher in London at $4.99 7-16.

The gold value of the dollar in terms of the franc was 58.69 cents, compared with 58.71 yesterday. The Canadian dollar was 9⅜ points higher at $1.0334⅜. The Italian lira gained ¼ point to close at 8.68½ cents. The German mark moved up 1 point to 40.45 cents, the Swiss franc 1 to 33.05 cents, and the Dutch florin 4 points to 68.65 cents.

In London bar gold dipped 1½ pence to 140 shillings 10 pence a fine ounce, equivalent to $35.17. Metal valued at $521,565 was traded.

Today's gold exports statement of the New York Federal Reserve bank showed no exports of gold and no change in the monetary stocks held under earmark for foreign account.

Production of Cigarets Sets August High Record

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—(AP)—Small cigaret production set a new high record for August, bureau of internal revenue figures showed today. The output in August was 11,809,522,453, while the figure for August, 1933, was 11,189,333,777. The last month showed an increase over July, when the total was 11,355,398,860.

Chicagoan Named Member of Oil Labor Policy Board

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—[U.P.]—Oil Administrator Harold L. Ickes today appointed Dr. John A. Lapp, Chicago, as a member of the petroleum labor policy board. Ickes also announced that Dr. George W. Stocking, Austin, Tex., had been made chairman of the board.

PRESSURE BY U. S. BOOSTS DIRECT INDUSTRY LOANS

[Copyright: 1934: By the Associated Press.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—Presidential and administration pressure has boosted by almost 100 per cent in half a month the flow of loans from the federal government's $580,000,000 reservoir for loans to industry.

Representative Hancock [Dem., N. C.] tonight gave this report of the situation, quoting figures just obtained from officials:

On Sept. 3 the RFC had authorized about $15,000,000 in loans to industries; last night the total authorizations and commitments were nearly $27,000,000. The loans in three weeks amounted to almost as much as those for more than three months.

Actual cash advanced on these loans by federal reserve banks increased from $1,281,000 on Sept. 12 to $1,494,000 on Sept. 19, the last day a tabulation was made.

The administration agrees with many industries that outright federal recovery expenditures must be cut sharply and soon, it was said. It feels, however, that these cannot be cut until business picks up enough to provide the necessary cash turnover. If industries have enough actual money in hand or available their tenseness with regard to the future will be eased.

GRAIN TRADING DULL AT SLIGHT PRICE CHANGES

Wheat from Northwest Competes in East.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Trading came to a near standstill in the grain market yesterday during the short week-end session and final quotations showed barely any change from Friday's last figures. The upward reaction in wheat prices in the Liverpool market, which had been under pressure of offerings from Argentina, was perhaps the most important influence in the market here.

Prices had advanced on the preceding day in the face of a decline in the English market, and yesterday there appeared little inclination on the part of traders to try and push the advance further. The normal urge of traders to even up their commitments over the week-end contributed to the dullness of the market.

Report New Competition.

Meanwhile the trade was arrested by the report that soft wheat from the Pacific northwest is being offered on the Atlantic seaboard at $1.06⅜ a bushel, which is considerably cheaper than No. 2 red wheat can be shipped from here to New York. It costs approximately 8 cents a bushel to lay down red wheat on the seaboard, which brings the total cost to about $1.13 a bushel, or more than 6 cents a bushel above the figure at which Pacific coast wheat is being offered there. It was reported that Ohio is offering No. 1 red wheat equal to 2 cents under the Chicago September price f. o. b. New York.

Final quotations on wheat futures yesterday were ⅛ cent lower compared with Friday's last quotations. The December contract was quoted $1.04⅞, an eighth of a cent under the September delivery price.

Trading Dull in Week.

The character of the market yesterday was the same as it had been throughout the week. Trading has been dull for several days, and in the absence of domestic news of significance the market has fluctuated nervously in sympathy with the Liverpool market. In Winnipeg the market has displayed comparative steadiness, and the government was reported to have been a liberal buyer. This buoyed the market while the crop movement was under way.

Foreign buyers have shied away from Canada because of the steadiness in the market there and the weakness in Argentine wheat. Offering of the old Argentine wheat in Europe and hedging of the new crop in the Liverpool market were the cause of depressing the market there.

The trading in corn futures was equally featureless with prices closing ⅜ cent higher to ⅛ cent lower. Late reports on the condition of the crop were said to be disturbing, and the weekly weather forecast held out no prospect of warm weather, which is needed by the late corn.

TAX WARANTS

PRICE OF LARD APPROACHES COST FOR ENGLISH USERS

American users of lard were forced to pay practically as much for that product during the month of July as the English consumer, according to a report from the bureau of agricultural economics. In July American refined lard in Liverpool showed an average value of 7.46 cents per pound, while the price in Chicago, as near as can be determined, was around 7 cents. The small difference between the two markets was due to the processing tax of 2.47 cents per pound, which is levied on the American consumer while there is no tax on the exported product.

Cash interests absorbed the offerings of lard futures yesterday, presumably reflecting further shipping sales, and the close was unchanged to 2½ cents higher. Bellies were unchanged to 5 cents higher. Cash lard was quoted at $9.40, loose at $9.45, and leaf at $10.25, while bellies were held at $14.50. Prices follow:

FIELD GRASS SEEDS

PRICES OF COTTON FUTURES SHOW 6 TO 16 POINT LOSS

Increased southern hedging pressure and a belief a settlement of the textile strike had been discounted by the recent upturn in the cotton market resulted in a lower level of prices yesterday. There was also liquidation by holders of October contracts. Trade was somewhat larger. Closing trades were about the bottom with net losses of 6 to 11 points in Chicago, and 10 to 16 points in other markets. Spot cotton closed 10 to 15 points lower with New Orleans, 12.90 cents; Galveston and Houston, 12.85 cents, and New York, 12.95 cents per pound. Mills pay a processing tax of 4 cents per pound on cotton used domestically. Prices:

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Sept. 22.—The listed bond market gained ground during the brief trading period today. United States government long term issues were irregularly higher. The called series of fourth Liberty 4¼s, on which the privilege to convert into four year 2½ per cent notes will expire today, closed at 100 20-32ds, off 2-32ds point.

Domestic corporation bonds were in good demand, many rising a point or more. A number of issues edged close to their best prices for the year to date.

Utilities are Strongest.

Public utility bonds were the strongest, on the average, with the rails and industrials next in that order.

The apparent ending of the textile strike contributed much to the optimism of the session. President Roosevelt's friendly gesture toward the formation of the Association of American Railroads also was interpreted as bullish.

In the foreign group, South American issues were firm, following their sharp runup in prices during the week. German loans were generally higher, and United Kingdom and Italian government issues closed fractionally higher. Japanese bonds were steady in quiet dealings.

Turnover Is Larger.

The turnover for the day was $7,743,000, par value, as compared with $5,512,000 on the preceding Saturday.

Curb bonds were active for a Saturday. Domestic issues were strong with the principal gains ranging from 1 to 3 points. Foreign loans finished irregularly higher. Old imperial Russian government issues continued a gain, reflecting the resumption of official debt conversations between the United States and soviet governments.

Public Utilities.

The public utility companies are in the peculiar position today of doing more business and making less money. Commonwealth Edison, for instance, showed an increase in gross of almost two million dollars in the first half of 1934 over the corresponding 1933 period, yet net dropped $447,000 to $3,540,000. Peoples Gas, Light and Coke's gross in the second quarter of 1934 was 10 per cent ahead of the corresponding 1933 period, yet net dropped more than 50 per cent.

Consolidated Gas of New York's gross in the second quarter of this year dropped only a little more than 1 per cent, yet net was down 25 per cent. Northern States Power's gross for the first five months of this year increased about 4 per cent, yet net was down about 10 per cent.

The examples chosen are illustrative, typical of conditions generally.

The ailments of this "depression proof" industry are several in number. One of the greatest is the heavier tax load. Commonwealth Edison, for instance, paid $1,780,000 more taxes in the first half of this year than in the corresponding 1933 period, a difference of more than $1 a share. This looms large when compared with the $2.18 per share reported as earned.

Second is substantial rate reductions. Municipalities have a potent weapon in their fights for lower rates—they can threaten to build municipal plants to be financed partly with government funds.

Higher labor costs because of compliance with national recovery act legislation have eaten substantially into earnings. In addition utilities have had to pay higher prices for material, especially coal.

The hydroelectric companies have had to put their reserve steam generating plants into operation because of the drouth.

The conclusion seems to be that only an unprecedented increase in general business activity can, under present conditions, restore the utilities as a whole to their formerly high investment ratings. Of course, general statements with regard to utilities should not be applied indiscriminately to all units in the industry. Analyses of individual issues, however, should take into account the various factors present that might adversely affect those issues.

The last year has witnessed an intensive drive on the part of utilities to distribute their appliances in order to boost sales. This was especially evident in the gas industry. It has resulted in increased volume output and a slight increase in dollar volume of sales. The only effect on earnings, however, has been to check the downward trend.

INSURANCE FIRM GETS LOAN; RFC TAKES CONTROL

Names Chief Officers for Maryland Casualty.

How the federal government's helping hand may take a strangle hold on the management of private business through loans by the Reconstruction Finance corporation is illustrated in tracing the course of the Maryland Casualty company of Baltimore, Md., according to insurance experts.

The RFC has made available to the casualty company $17,500,000, and in return has instaled men of its choice to the two places of president and vice president and general counsel. It holds all first convertible preferred stock and almost total voting strength.

Early in 1933, before negotiations leading up to the advance of $10,000,000, just completed, Moody's report stated: "The RFC has voting control and, accordingly, if it so desires, may during the period of the loan elect a majority of the board of directors."

Consolidate Loans in Stock.

Earlier loans, dished out a little bit at a time, had reached such proportion toward the end of 1933 that they would throw the balance sheet out of line. Tentative agreement was reached in December to consolidate all obligations in a preferred stock purchase, loans aggregating $7,500,000 being represented by 1,000,000 shares of $2 par. Significant changes in management were announced at the time the purchase became effective on April 18, 1934.

The hand of James A. Farley, postmaster general and chief patronage dispenser of the administration, was seen in the election of Silliman Evans, fourth assistant postmaster general, as executive vice president of the Maryland Casualty company. Edward G. Lowry Jr. resigned as special assistant to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau to become vice president and general counsel. They were "to represent the interest acquired by the RFC." Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore and Howard Bruce, president of the Baltimore National bank, were named additional directors at the same time.

Evans Becomes President.

Mr. Evans became president when F. Highlands Burns resigned on June 11 to become chairman of the board, a new position created for the occasion. Burns' move was termed a "promotion," and local officials of the company assert that Mr. Evans, "a man of wide business experience, has turned out to be a real fellow in the job."

The company's difficulties arose from its practice of guaranteeing first mortgage real estate bonds. Approximately 80 million dollars were involved at one time, 97 per cent of the guarantees being for less than $3,800 apiece. Through regular means of refinancing and buying in, this amount was reduced to 51 millions at the time a refunding plan was announced in May, 1933, with RFC support promised.

The company had averted defaults, but was at the stage where continued liquidation would be ruinous. Banks and other holders naturally turned to guaranteed mortgage bonds to realize on frozen holdings, and insurance company guarantors were "put in a hole."

There being no real estate market, mortgages were marked off at a loss and turned over to the Eastern Mortgage and Security company, wholly owned Maryland subsidiary. The subsidiary, in turn, served as the agency through which this and the recent loan were obtained.

EGG FUTURES SHOW GAIN; BUTTER IS UNCHANGED

Egg futures gained ⅛ to ¼ cent on the Chicago Mercantile exchange yesterday, while butter was unchanged in dull trading.

Improved storage reports produced enough buying of eggs to advance prices slightly. The four markets reported 8,900 cases more out of storage than last year.

Butter storage figures were considerably better. The four markets moved out 190,000 pounds.

BANK OF ENGLAND PROFIT IS DULY SHOWN; SO WHAT?

Nobody Ever Knows About Its Real Earnings.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Sept. 22.—That semi-annual polite comedy, "the half-yearly general court of the proprietors of the Bank of England," was held this week without disclosing to the world a thing except that the bank reported profits for the six months ending Aug. 21 of 676,876 pounds [$3,384,380], compared with 655,914 pounds [$3,279,570] for the same period last year.

After a 6 per cent dividend less tax, the bank's "rest"—what Americans call "surplus and undivided profits"—stands at 3,024,182 pounds 9 shillings and 5 pence [about $15,120,912]. That 9 shillings 5 pence is part of the comedy, for it suggests immense precision in arriving at the bank's profits, although the truth is well known that the bank's disclosed profits are completely arbitrary, being disclosed only after various unrevealed provisions for all sorts of contingencies are made.

Real Earnings Unknown.

Nobody has ever succeeded in getting the slightest clue to the bank's real earnings. For example, during periods when interest rates have been high and one would naturally expect larger earnings, Gov. Montagu Norman of the bank has fooled the pundits by reporting—for reasons quite sufficient to him and his co-directors—greatly reduced earnings, only to show increased earnings during a period of low rates for money.

The Bank of England's century long reticence annoys a lot of people but it amuses even more. The only thing remotely resembling a balance sheet it ever publishes is the weekly report. And this weekly statement contains no item covering the vast property to the account of the bank—nothing reminds us that it owns extremely valuable premises in Threadneedle street.

It's a Pain to Accountants.

In the night schools of the city of London, where the brokers' clerks learn the mysteries of finance, lecturers in accountancy demur at this; they argue that even if the bank has written off out of profits an immense freehold and building, still it ought "by rights" carry them in weekly statement at say 1 pound [$5] just to remind up that the bank doesn't exist in the air.

But the British confidence in the high-mindedness of the Bank of England is so immense that nobody worries over the studied obscurantism of the weekly report.

GRAIN TRADERS

We look for a major advance to take place in corn and wheat futures in the next six months. Our bulletins of September 17 and 24 tell why we took a short position in corn and Chicago wheat on August 8 after taking 17 cents a bushel profit on the long side. Then we give our reason for taking profits on short corn on September 17 and taking our present long position in corn, wheat and rye.

On receipt of $1.00 we will send our bulletins of September 17 and 24 and our bulletin of October 1 when issued. We will also include with our compliments a large chart giving the daily price range of corn from 1922 and down to date. This corn chart is the largest grain chart that has ever been published, and is just off the press. If you desire a wheat chart, remit $2.00.

EXPECT CATTLE TO RISE AS U. S. REDUCES BUYING

Growers See Pressure on Packers Easing.

News that the government has drastically reduced its purchases of cattle and calves in the drouth regions is being construed as bullish by live stock sellers. Packers have been so busy killing cattle for the needy that at times commercial cattle have been neglected on the market, they point out, causing serious congestion in the trade as a result.

Because of improved pastures in the dry sections, buying by the Federal Surplus Relief corporation is expected to taper off from now on and end in about six weeks. Purchases of cattle and calves by agents of the corporation during the last three days averaged less than 50,000 head daily, whereas daily purchases earlier in the month averaged almost 90,000. The volume of cattle and calves being handled by the government now is at the lowest point since the middle of June.

Buy Nearly Six Million.

Up to Sept. 19 purchases of government cattle and calves amounted to 5,837,446. The government up to the same date had bought 158,967 sheep at $2 per head. Buying of these started only a few days ago and is said to exceed 40,000 daily now.

Price trends were more mixed than usual last week. The greatest price variation was found in the beef steers, with the spread between the high and low sales widest of the year and widest in five years for September.

While prime corn fed steers soared to a new four year high for September and equaled the August top of $10.90, the inside figure in the range for steers of beef merit went down to $3.75, or within 25 cents of the lowest since January. Prices spread out abruptly toward the end of the week, "fed" stock indicating a long corn feeding, closing unevenly 25 to 75 cents higher than a week ago, while grassy kinds finished mostly 25 cents lower.

Uneveness in lambs at the close of the week ranged from steady to as much as 40 cents higher compared with a week earlier. The general average for the six days at $6.15 was the same as for the preceding week due to the lower level of quotations early in the week.

Pork Prices Recover.

There was a recovery in the market for fresh pork during the week, but only 2 cents of the recent 10 cent reduction in pork loins has been replaced. Pork now compares more favorably as a seller in the meat price list, and it is being used as a leader in some stores for the first time in several weeks. Loins toward the end of the week sold within a range of 11 to 17 cents per pound, comparable to the kinds at 14½ to 25 cents less than three weeks ago and 9 to 15½ cents a year ago.

While loins are selling only about 2 cents per pound higher than a year ago, the live costs of the hogs to the packers are 4½ cents higher than in 1933. The week's average price at $9.10, tax included, compared with $4.60 a year ago and with $4.05 two years ago.

However, there was a good demand for the few hogs offered on the week-end session, buyers for most of the local houses coming on the market for packing sows, "lard types," as well as for top grades. A few of the latter cost up to $9.40, including $2.25 tax to the federal government, leaving $7.15 on the market as the farmer's returns.

WOOL MARKET

BOSTON, Mass., Sept. 22.—Business in the Boston market for domestic wools during the past week was almost entirely at a standstill as a result of the continued influence of the strike and the small amount of orders for goods received by mills in operation. Most of the extremely limited trading was on wools suitable for woolen manufacture and prices in these transactions were irregular. Prices:

GOVERNMENT BOOSTS FARM CORN LOANS TO 55 CENTS A BUSHEL

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—(AP)—A new corn loan program, providing for advances at 55 cents a bushel on 1933 and 1934 corn stored on farms in accordance with state warehousing requirements was announced today by the Agricultural Adjustment administration.

The administration announced the five principal points on the new program were:

A loan value of 55 cents, instead of 45, as in last year's program.

The maturity date of June 30, 1935.

That holders of the notes may, if they wish, call the loans while corn is at or above 85 cents on the Chicago market.

A requirement for the borrower to take out primary insurance covering fire, lightning, and windstorm.

Old corn stored in temporary or unsuitable cribs will not be accepted for loans.

In addition, the administration announced corn must be No. 4 ear corn or better, and said the standard of measurement would buy 2½ cubic feet per bushel, as last year.

the announced extension of 1933 loans to Jan. 1, 1935. No old loans will be extended beyond Oct. 15, the administration said, but borrowers may pay their old loans and repledge the corn under the new program.

Loans will be made in Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Ohio, and South Dakota from a commitment of $100,000,000 provided by the Commodity Credit corporation and the RFC. Producers after sealing their corn may apply for loans at local banks which will be authorized to make the loan and sell the warehouse receipts to the Commodity Credit corporation if they so desire.

WORK AND WAGES RISE IN ILLINOIS DURING AUGUST

Gains Are Less than Usual Increase.

Employment and pay rolls in Illinois moved slightly higher during August, although the upturn was below the usual seasonal rise, the Illinois department of labor revealed yesterday. Employment rose 1 per cent over July and pay rolls mounted 0.3 per cent against normal increases of 1.3 and 2.8 per cent.

Improvement in the Chicago metropolitan area was smaller than that for the state in employment, but greater in pay rolls, with respective gains of 0.3 and 0.7 per cent recorded. Chicago suburbs fared considerably better, employment increasing 1 per cent and pay rolls 7.3 per cent.

Reporting firms throughout the state, embracing 4,500 manufacturing and nonmanufacturing concerns, employed 453,211 wage earners in August and paid a total of $9,751,048 in wages.

Improvement Over Year Ago.

Compared with last year, employment was 5.4 per cent higher and also was 26.4 per cent over the 1932 level. Pay rolls were 10.5 per cent higher than a year ago and 35.4 per cent above August, 1932. Both employment and wages fell below levels prevailing in 1931.

Credit for the increases must go entirely to feminine workers. Employment of females advanced 3.5 per cent, while that of males dropped 0.1 per cent. Pay rolls likewise disclosed an increase to women workers of 4.4 per cent, while the amount paid male wage earners receded 0.7 per cent.

Of the nine principal manufacturing groups five attained increases in both jobs and wages. These were wood products, printing and paper goods, textiles, clothing and millinery, and foods. In each of these gains were sharper than seasonal expectations waranted, the labor survey says.

Groups Reverse Normal Trend.

Two groups—metals, machinery and conveyances and furs and lether goods—incurred losses in both jobs and wages contrary to increases ordinarily expected in August. Mixed trends were evidenced in the stone, clay and glass, and chemicals, oils, and paints groups.

Newspapers, periodicals, edition bookbinding, and job printing were main contributors to an increase of 3.8 per cent in employment and 3.7 in pay rolls in the printing and paper goods industry.

Weekly earnings throughout Illinois, for both sexes combined, averaged $21.52—$23.51 for males and $14.68 for females. For manufacturing industries the average was $20.34 and nonmanufacturing $23.42.

La Grange to Have English Type Industrial Housing Development

FOUR ROOM HOME UNITS TO RENT AT $17.50 EACH

Aluminum Firm Announces Big Project.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Bids are now being taken on the first unit of an industrial housing project along English "garden city" lines, in La Grange, which, it is predicted, may develop into one of the largest home groups erected in Chicagoland in several years. William A. Hastings, president of the Aluminum Products company, with two plants in La Grange and one in Lemont, and with the only aluminum rolling mill west of Pittsburgh, is originator and sponsor of the plan.

WM. A. HASTINGS.

"Terrace houses," comprising six units of four rooms each, similar to ones owned and operated by Mr. Hastings in England, will be built to rent for $17.50 a month. At present, he says, workers are not able to get satisfactory accommodations at anything lower than $27.50 to $30 per month in La Grange.

Applications Coming In.

With applications already coming in from city and governmental employés as well as other La Grange residents, for the new homes, Mr. Hastings stated that a second housing project will be started later in Lemont for employés of the plant there. Plans are now being drawn.

The La Grange project will occupy a 5½ acre site owned by the aluminum concern, bounded by East avenue on the east, Elm avenue on the north, Maple avenue on the south, and the Belt Line right of way on the west. The company also has several acres west of the tracks on which it has a plant. Its rolling mill is at the northwest corner of the housing site.

Plans by Newhouse & Bernham, Chicago architects, provide that each of the "terrace houses" will contain six two story four room homes, with separate front and rear entrances. Each unit will have a 15x12½ living room and a 15x8½ kitchen and dinette on the first floor. On the second floor there will be a 15.4x11 bedroom in the front over the living room, a 10½x10 bedroom in the rear, and a good sized bathroom. Both bedrooms will have closets.

Will Cost $2,000 Per Unit.

The buildings will have outside walls of common brick with colored mortar. Solid walls of brick and tile will separate the units. Each "terrace house" will have six half timbered gables. Red composition roofs will be used.

The buildings will be insulated and gas heating is contemplated at an estimated cost of $75 per season per home. Each "terrace house" containing six homes, it is estimated, will cost $12,000, or $2,000 per unit. In the center of the group of contemplated thirteen houses, with their total of seventy-eight homes, a community garden and children's playground is planned. The entire grounds are to be landscaped.

As inquiries already have been received by families who want an extra bedroom that may be rented and thus reduce the monthly rent bill, plans call for the addition of a first floor bedroom on the two end units if needed.

Future Newlyweds Interested.

"We have enough inquiries already to assure the success of several units," said Mr. Hastings. "Twelve young men and women who are contemplating getting married this fall have suggested that we reserve one entire unit of six homes for them. They are all old school friends and want to live in the same building. We also have received requests for space from postoffice and La Grange city employés.

"We expect to start work on the first unit in about two weeks and hope to have it completed in about four weeks. Work will start on four more terrace houses a few days after we get under way on the first one.

"As the charter of the Aluminum Products company won't permit it to go into housing, a separate corporation controled by it is to be formed to own and operate the entire project. The modern homes division of Sears, Roebuck & Co. will supply the major part of the materials used in the development.

Call High Rents Hardships.

"We believe that rent payments absorbing in excess of 22½ per cent of the monthly wage check are unsound and uneconomic. High rents for the low income class means unbalanced domestic budgets and unnecessary family hardships.

"The industrial prospect of shorter working hours and rising costs of the necessities of life should encourage and stimulate the demand for capital and work for numerous similar projects throughout the country. As a safe hedge against possible inflation nothing could be more satisfactory than this kind of housing program, we believe.

"Although we thought this project was a pioneer in 'terrace houses' we learned yesterday that in Los Angeles a housing development of 100 units, each to contain ten homes, is under way. One unit already is completed."

Mr. Hastings started in business in 1909. The Aluminum Products company was organized in 1911. It now operates three manufacturing plants and rolling mills, producing aluminum goods, stainless steel ware and other household products. Mr. Hastings lives at 121 8th avenue, La Grange.

MONROE STREET LEASE.

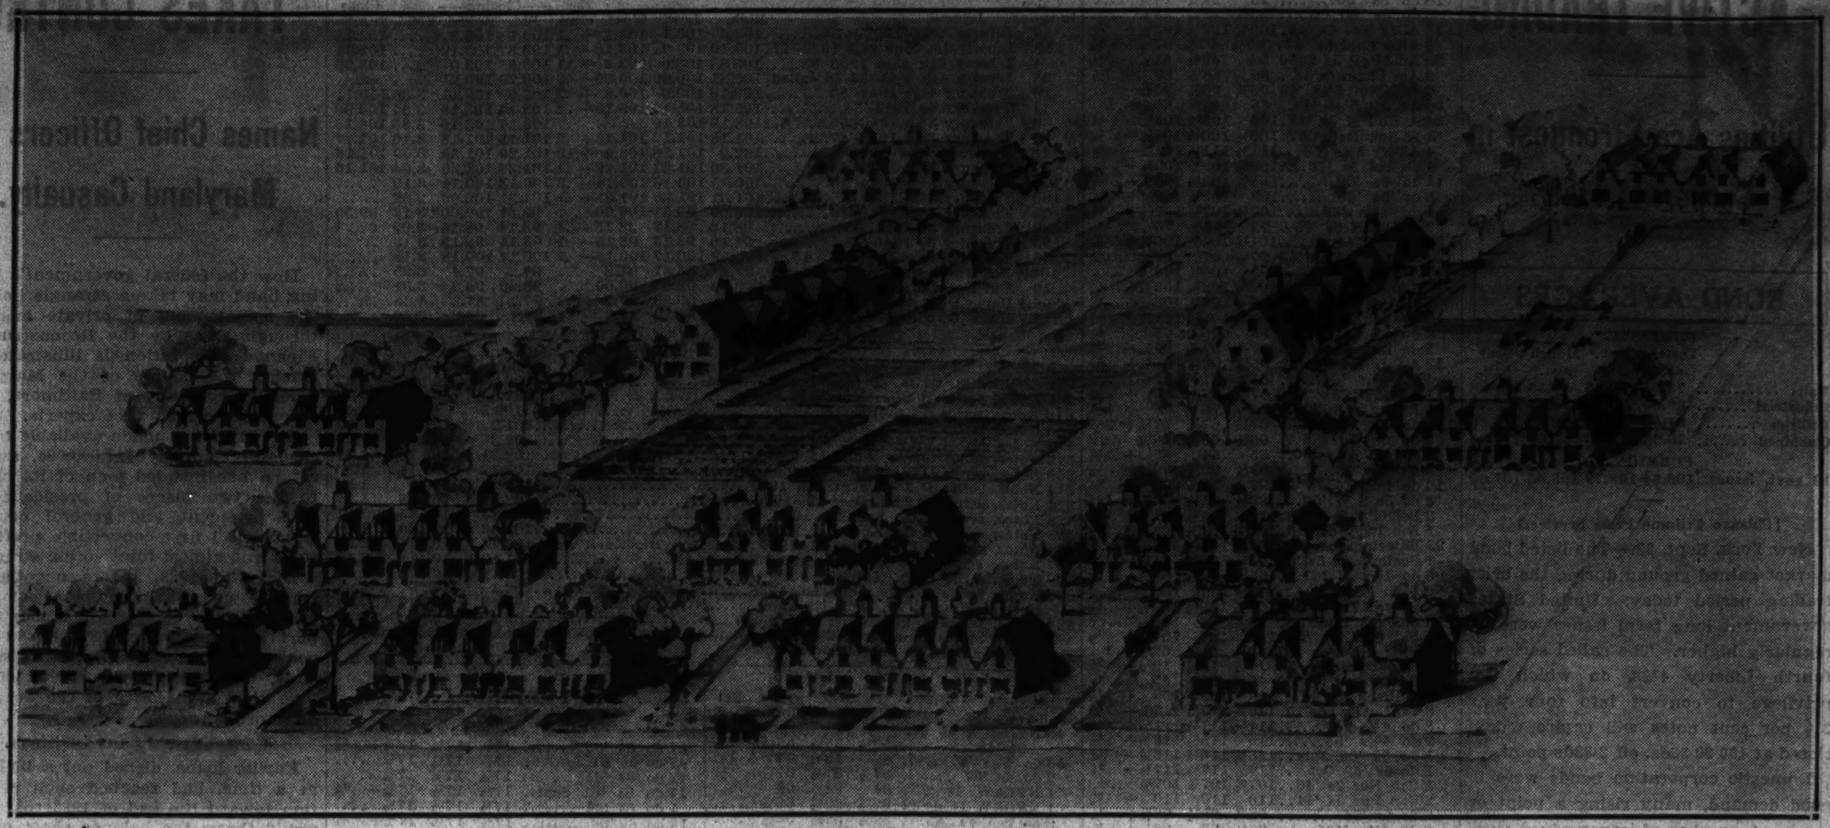
"GARDEN CITY" GROUP HOMES PLANNED FOR WESTERN SUBURB



Newhouse & Bernham, Chicago architects, planned the above English type "garden city" housing development, which is to be carried out by the Aluminum Products company adjoining its plant at La Grange. There are to be thirteen "terrace houses," each to contain six two story homes of four rooms and bath. In the center will be a community garden and playground. The site, owned by the Aluminum Products company, covers 5½ acres. East avenue is in the foreground; Elm avenue is on the right; Maple avenue bounds it in the south; the Belt line tracks are on the west. The above view is looking west.

EACH "TERRACE HOUSE" TO CONTAIN SIX HOMES

This is one of the "terrace houses" told about in the adjoining story of the new housing development contemplated for La Grange by the Aluminum Products company. Newhouse & Bernham of Chicago are the architects. Each of the thirteen houses contains six two story homes, with separate front and rear entrances and fire wall between. Each home will have four rooms and bath and will rent for $17.50 per month.

What Do I Have to Do to Get FHA Loan to Repair House?

"What do I have to do to get a Federal Housing administration loan to repair my house?"

That's the question that is being asked architects, builders, bankers, and others, and, strange to relate, few can answer it without getting themselves and their questioner tied up in a granny knot of nonunderstandable details. The questioner goes his way deciding it's altogether too complicated for him and so a good job for some contractor goes haywire.

Leaving out the red tape details, which probably won't be understood, no matter how much they're explained, here are some definite statements regarding the FHA modernization program and also a bit of warning:

We'll take it for granted you know that the National Housing act was passed for the benefit of people with incomes—this is no distress measure, such as the HOLC—and that you can borrow from $100 up to $2,000 (and in some cases up to $5,000) provided your yearly income is five times the amount you'll have to pay back each year.

Your roof leaks; you need a new one. Your first step is to find out what a new one will cost. Don't go to one contractor and accept his figure as final. Get figures from at least three; four or five is still better.

Get Several Bids.

Chiseling into the FHA already is being done by crooked contractors. Some make their prices so high that the home owner will be badly stung on the job. Some are working a new racket by having the home owner sign a paper that later he'll wish he hadn't.

Don't sign any papers until you've had contractors bid on the job. You can find plenty who'll be glad to bid. Then compare the bids and do a little checking on the integrity of the contractor. Just because he's lowest doesn't mean his job will be best done.

Naturally if one contractor is out of line, with an outrageously high price, throw his bid out. In a recent request for bids on a certain repair job a south side home owner got one from contractor "A" for $98; from "B" for $102, from "C" for $106, and from "D" $125. The "D" bid went out the window. He was a chiseler who was trying to chisel a few dollars from the home owner. The home owner investigated "A," "B," and "C," and "B" was found to be the best builder of the lot. He got the job. The $4 difference undoubtedly was more than offset by his better workmanship.

Financing Comes Last.

When you've got your estimate, go to your banker or building and loan association and explain what you want. They'll finish the transaction for you.

Remember this: The government is not lending a nickel through the FHA, despite the incorrect statements in the press to the contrary. It's altogether a matter between you and your bank or building and loan—or Sears, Roebuck & Co., the American Radiator company, and other big concerns which are making loans direct.

REPORTS GAIN IN FARM SALES AND INQUIRIES

Increased activity and inquiry in farm lands is reported by John B. Utley, manager of the farm and estates department of the Northwestern Realty and Building company of Evanston. During the last sixty days he has sold four farms northwest of Chicago and reports several other sales pending.

William B. Temple, interior decorator at 740 Rush street, bought a 140 acre dairy farm in McHenry county, two and a half miles east of Woodstock. He is making extensive alterations and improvements and plans to erect stables for his saddle horses.

Dr. Charles E. Pope of Evanston purchased a 120 acre dairy farm in McHenry county, adjoining the town of Union. He plans to open an office in Woodstock in conjunction with his Evanston office and is repairing the eight room house for part time residence.

W. W. Hale, consulting engineer, recently purchased 105 acres in Walworth county, Wisconsin, four miles east of Lake Geneva. The property is heavily wooded and contains a twelve acre private lake.

Contracts Awarded

Contracts awarded in Chicago the week of Sept. 14 to 20, according to figures supplied by the F. W. Dodge corporation, totaled 20, with a combined cost of $130,000. For the corresponding week last year there were 18 contracts totaling $495,300. From Jan. 1 to Sept. 20, 1934, the total was $17,950,510, or $2,986,086 ahead of the corresponding period last year, which was $14,964,424.

REJUVENATE OLD TIMER AND RENT IT BEFORE JOB'S DONE

What modernization can do to make a decrepit structure pay a good return is shown in a rejuvenation job now under way at 4033-39 Milwaukee avenue in the Portage Park district. A syndicate bought the building through Landau & Perlman. According to Elias R. Perlman, at the time of purchase the building was not bringing sufficient return to justify its investment.

A complete rehabilitation program at once was begun. The entire first and second floors have been leased by the Abrams Department Stores on a minimum guarantee and percentage basis, and about Nov. 1 the lessees will move their present store at 3968-72 Milwaukee avenue to the modernized quarters.

The store will have a frontage of approximately 75 feet and a depth of 125 feet. A new heating and ventilating system, and various new devices and arrangements for the convenience of the shopping public will be instaled. Sidney Finck is architect for building changes and Herbert B. Beidler of Store Consultants, Inc., is designing the store arrangements and decorative schemes.

The Abrams Department Stores have been established since 1908. Their first establishment was in the Lincoln-Belmont district. The original Milwaukee avenue store was opened eight years ago. Two years ago their third store in the Lincoln-Lawrence district was established.

HUNGARIAN CLUB RENTS SPACE AT 100 EAST OHIO

The Hungarian club, organized in 1922 for social and scientific research purposes, has leased space in the 100 East Ohio building for two years beginning Oct. 1 at an undisclosed rental. Miss Mellicent Martin represented the club and William J. Shea, manager of both the Michigan-Ohio and the 100 East Ohio building, represented the lessor.

A lounge, library, buffet, and secretary's offices will be equipped in modernistic design and provision made in the layout for a lecture room. The officers are Frank Schmidt, president; Victor Wasserman, vice president; Alois Mueller, secretary; Alexander Kremer, treasurer. The club includes in its membership Laszlo De Medgyesy, Hungarian consul general; Dr. Elmer Horwath, and Dr. Oscar Schnetzel.

Harris Bros. Plan Complete FHA Service

The Harris Brothers company tomorrow will place at the disposal of homeowners who are seeking FHA modernization loans, a complete service at its plant, 1349 West 35th street, at its loop branch, 170 West Washington street; at outlying branches, 4032 Lawrence avenue and 7534 North Clark street, and at its three suburban branches at Elmhurst, Berwyn, and Hammond, Ind.

According to an official of the company the prospective borrower can complete his negotiations for a loan in one trip and with one employé of the Harris Brothers company.

"We have expert estimators in all branches of engineering and architecture," he said, "who can figure the cost of any job accurately. All details will be taken out of the hands of the borrower; he won't even have to go to a bank. Some of the loans will be made through banks and some we'll finance ourselves.

"Anyway, the borrower won't have to worry any about details—all those will be cared for and the whole matter arranged at the one visit and by one person. Any one who needs a repair or modernization loan can, if he's eligible, get it put through at any of our branches."

MOVIES TO BE SHOWN IN FULLY LIGHTED CINEMA

Moving pictures shown with the auditorium of the theater brilliantly illuminated is a novelty announced by Architect Erwin G. Fredrick of 333 North Michigan avenue, for the Midway theater, at 6248 Cottage Grove avenue, which is to be completely modernized at a reported expense of $70,000. The old Woodlawn playhouse has been dark for six years.

Next spring an air conditioning plant is to be installed. Meanwhile new heating and ventilating systems are being put in and new seats, new wiring, new floor, complete redecoration and a new canopy also are being installed. The design will be modern throughout.

George Gallas, who operates the Ray theater, at 2638 East 75th street, has leased the Midway theater from the Walters estate, for a term of years. It seats 914. Completion is set for late in November.

THORN CREEK POLLUTION TO END

YOUNG PEOPLE MRS. FLAGLER'S GREAT PASSION

Devotes Her Life to Their Interest.

BY BETTY BROWNING.

"Young people interest me more than anything else in the world, I believe," Mrs. Holland Flagler observed with a wistful light in her intensely blue eyes.

MRS. HOLLAND FLAGLER. [Rayhuff-Richter Photo.]

"I was one of a family of nine, I have had three children of my own, and so I just can't help being interested in other people's children."

It was her explanation of the devotion to parent-teacher work that has kept her in active service for 15 years, carrying her from the presidency of the Vanderpoel association to the management of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers during three of the stormiest years in the history of the organization.

Son Led Her Into Work.

"What led me into this particular field in the first place was the ill health of my oldest boy," she disclosed. "He was delicate and had trouble with his school work. Of course, that created a problem for me, and I went into parent-teacher work to solve it. Fortunately, he soon overcame both difficulties."

Her own children were responsible, too, for the interest in the constructive use of leisure time which Mrs. Flagler has demonstrated as state president. She and her neighbors along Vanderpoel avenue in Beverly Hills worked out their own system of supervised play long before the parent-teacher associations advocated it, taking turns in offering each other's children both supervision and backyards for their play.

"We had all been neighbors for years, counted each other among our best friends, and so we were anxious to pass our friendships on to our children," Mrs. Flagler said.

Gang Become Friends.

"Well, it worked out even better than we had hoped. The gang have grown up to be friends—I've never known them to really quarrel—and they have developed all sorts of qualities, besides. Leadership, a spirit of

FEDERAL FUNDS TO HELP BUILD SEWAGE PLANT

Southern Suburbs Hail Victory.

Mayor Daniel P. Bergin of Chicago Heights, has received notification from the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works in Washington that a federal grant of $84,000 has been allowed the sanitary district of Bloom township, of which he is president. The grant is 30 per cent of the estimated cost of the labor and material to be used in the construction of a sewage plant.

MAYOR BERGIN.

Chicago Heights is located on the headwaters of Thorn creek. As a result of the inadequate treatment of the sewage, Thorn creek has been polluted for many years. Numerous law suits have been filed against the city by the owners of lands adjoining the creek below Chicago Heights. Scores of meetings of citizens and property owners have been held to urge the city to treat its sewage adequately.

Mayor Aware of Problem.

Mayor Bergin and other leading citizens of Chicago Heights for years have realized the importance of adequate treatment of the sewage of the city, but the city was handicapped because of financial difficulties.

In 1931 a bond proposition of $400,000 for the construction of a sewage plant was rejected by the voters in a hot fight. It was not until last year when the benevolence of the federal government, through the operations of the Federal Emergency Administration of Public Works, was looked upon by Mayor Bergin as a way out of the difficulties. A bond issue election was held on Oct. 24, 1933, for the purpose of issuing $300,000 in general obligation bonds of the sanitary district of Bloom township for the construction of a new sewage disposal plant. The voters felt they should have their share of the federal money being handed out and accordingly the proposition was carried by a substantial majority.

Grant Held in Abeyance.

Mrs. Helen Hill, 8043 South Kimbark avenue, announces the engagement of her daughter Mary Alice to Frank Martin, 1536 East 74th place. Miss Hill is a graduate of the Aquinas Dominican High school and a former student of the University of Chicago. The date of the wedding has not been made known.

South Side Girl Wins Law Award 2d Time at U. of I.

"A Daniel come to judgment" may be applied to another Portia one day, for among the future doctors of jurisprudence at the University of Illinois who resumed their studies Wednesday was Miss Bonita Matthews, 6449 Ingleside avenue.

Miss Matthews, who is five feet three inches tall, with curly hair and sparkling brown eyes, looks more fitted for dances than for degrees.

The college of law she attends, however, has found otherwise and is awarding her for the second time one of four full-tuition scholarships granted its leading scholars. Last June she made an "A" average in six courses, repeating her record of the year before.

Final Year at School.

In her final year at law school Miss Matthews will be a student editor of the case comment section of the Illinois Bar journal, and will be secretary of the Junior Bar association of the university.

She will also continue her work in the law library of the college, where she is the second girl ever to have held a position. The first, incidentally, is the present head librarian, Benita Matthews. After taking the state bar examination in July, 1935, Miss Matthews hopes to work into a position in the Juvenile court.

Her interest in law and civics Miss Matthews inherits from her parents. Her father, the late J. Scott Matthews, was chief examiner of titles of Cook county at the time of his death. He was eager to have his daughter follow in his footsteps and become a lawyer. Her mother is active in club work, notably in the Woodlawn League of Women Voters and the Woodlawn Mothers' Round table.

Wins History Honors.

Miss Matthews is a graduate of the Wadsworth school and Hyde Park High school, where she was associate editor of the school paper. She was graduated from the University of Illinois in 1933 with honors in history. In her last two years as an undergraduate she received the annual scholarship award given by the alumnae of her chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha sorority.

But for all her serious activities, "Bonnie," as her friends call her, is as fun loving as she looks. She left home a week before school opened to join in the "rush week" activities of her sorority. And any one who dropped in at her family's summer home at McHenry this summer might have found her painting her canoe, or swimming, or potting flowers out of her own garden to take back to school.

Engagement Party

An engagement party for Miss Dorothy Levy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Levy, 1444 East 74th place, who is to wed Edward Rosenthal, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rosenthal, 6227 Ellis avenue, will be held this evening at the home of Mrs. Harry B. Fridstein, 5211 South Cornell avenue.

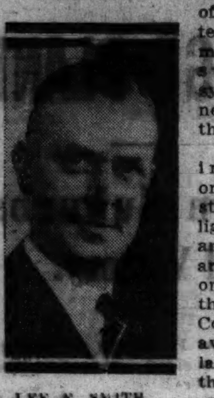
E. 47TH STREET IS SOON TO HAVE NEW 'WHITE WAY'

Woodlawn-63d Street Projects Advanced.

Construction is scheduled to start within the next three weeks on the first of a series of projected extensive improvements in the street lighting systems of business districts on the south side.



LEE F. SMITH.

The first of the improvements on East 47th street, where new lighting standards and lamps are to be installed on both sides of the street from Cottage Grove avenue to the lake, according to the Chicago bureau of streets and electricity. The cost of this project is estimated at more than $65,000.

In the meantime the Woodlawn Business Men's association, one of the largest and oldest organizations of its kind on the south side, voted last week to coöperate with the East 63d Street council in a movement to obtain new "white way" lighting systems for portions of 63d street and Cottage Grove avenue.

Sign Petition to City.

More than 300 signatures have been placed on a petition for the new systems. The document is being circulated by A. L. Blocker, executive secretary of the East 63d Street council, and is addressed to Mayor Kelly and the city council.

The petition says a new lighting system is badly needed on 63d street from Champlain avenue east to Stony Island avenue, and on Cottage Grove avenue from 62d street south to 67th street.

Mr. Blocker has pointed out that "the present lighting systems on 63d street and Cottage Grove avenue in the sections mentioned are inadequate." The plans for the new systems call for 1,500 watt bulbs to replace the present 500 watt lamps.

Long Campaign Successful.

The Kenwood Chamber of Commerce has appointed Joseph Geary, a member of the Chicago civil service board and Democratic committeeman of the Fourth ward, to represent the district in all matters calling for decisions from 47th street merchants during the construction of the system.

The Kenwood chamber, which has been campaigning for the new lights since last January, is headed by Lee F. Smith.

The system calls for bulbs ranging from 1,200 watts to 1,500 watts, depending on the location of the standards. The larger lamps will be used at entrances to alleys and street intersections.

At present 47th street has "a patched up" lighting system in which no two blocks have the same kind of equipment, according to the chamber.

While the majority of the poles carry 400 watt frosted bulbs, many of the lights are only of 200 watts or less.

The bureau of streets and electricity says that much preliminary work will have to be completed before the new standards, some 200 in number, can be erected.

The Kenwood businessmen have hopes of dedicating the new system by the first of the year, but the city bureau of streets points out that some delays are likely due to scarcity of funds for the work.

CIVIC GROUP BIDS SUMMER ADIEU, BUYS SNOW PLOW

South Park Council to Hold Cleanup Drive.

The South Park Community council at its meeting last week said farewell to summer and began making preparations for the coming winter and its snows.

The council met at its headquarters, 64th street and South Park avenue, and voted to purchase a snow plow. Robert Haynes, president, said the organization has decided to wait no longer for the city to clean its streets and sidewalks after storms. He complained that last year the city was "inexcusably slow" in removing snow.

The council also voted to sponsor a neighborhood cleanup campaign on Oct. 1-6 inclusive. Frank Anderson, general chairman, will be assisted by Albert Lollar, Nathan Richards, Frederic Sanders, William Owens, and Clifford Mandel.

Mr. Anderson said that while he believes members of the council have enough push carts, wheelbarrows, rakes, shovels, picks, and other equipment for the cleanup work, the city's bureau of streets has expressed willingness to lend additional tools for the drive.

Among places to be visited by the council's cleanup groups, working without pay, are vacant lots, back yards, streets, alleys, and dilapidated houses.

Last spring more than 75 residents of the community participated in a similar campaign conducted under the supervision of the council in conjunction with the Chicago Association of Commerce and the Chicago board of education.

The next meeting of the council is scheduled for Oct. 14, at which time the organization plans to vote on a community Thanksgiving dinner for members, relatives and friends of the council.

Other south side organizations planning community dinners Thanksgiving week include the South Side People's Civic club, the Park Manor Improvement association, and the Woodlawn Community Forum club.

Community Card Party.

A card party will be given by the Southwest Community center Saturday evening at Haley's hall, 38th street and Archer avenue. Mrs. Herbert A. Kossart and Mrs. J. H. F. O'Neil are chairmen.

GAINS REPORTED IN SCHOOL ROLLS OF SOUTH SIDE

22 Changes Announced in Principalships.

Reports from 15 Catholic schools and 15 public schools of the south side reveal only a small gain in enrollment this year over last. Last year the total for the 30 schools was 27,388; this year's figure is 27,934, an increase of 546.

Principals of the schools say they expect a three per cent additional increase within the next 10 days, and that at least two per cent of the three per cent will be boys. They base their conjectures on former records revealing that two out of every three students enrolling late are boys.

Bowen is the only high school reporting a loss. Up to Wednesday morning, Bowen had received 3,089. Last year the school boasted an attendance of 3,600. Part of the loss is said to be due to the fact that several hundred families moved out of the district during the summer.

Increase at Hirsch.

The Hirsch High school has an increase of 204, or 2,804 compared with 2,600 in 1933. Business conditions in the district within the last few months are credited with the gain.

Mount Carmel, founded 40 years ago by the Carmelite Fathers and said to be the largest mid-western Catholic high school for boys, has an enrollment of 975 against 850 in 1933.

The Acquinas Dominican High school has a gain of 51. Last year's figures was 305 and this year the number is 356.

YOUNG PEOPLE MRS. FLAGLER'S GREAT PASSION

Devotes Her Life to Their Interests.

coöperation, fair play. No wonder I have such faith in the proper use of leisure as a force in education!"

Her interest in young people has taken yet another form. Until she became president of the Illinois congress Mrs. Flagler taught a Sunday school class at the Trinity Methodist Episcopal church of Beverly Hills. For the last eight years she had the same group of girls.

"Watching them develop from high school students into young women busy with careers or with husbands and families has been a thrilling experience," Mrs. Flagler commented.

"My methods of teaching were not exactly orthodox—I disagreed with many in the church—but the girls have all turned out pretty well. The worst I've known them to do is to smoke. My second son, Allen, was married to one of my former pupils last week-end."

Another Pet Idea.

From this experience Mrs. Flagler has gleaned another of what she calls her pet ideas. This is a church service for young people, managed entirely by them, to be held Sunday evenings. Sunday morning is not a good time for meetings, since it does not give them time to recover from Saturday night dates, she has found.

"The sportsmanship of young men and women today is wonderful, but they need every ounce of it," Mrs. Flagler interjected at this point. "They're going into all sorts of work, the hardest kind at the lowest wages, and they're doing it eagerly, without a word of complaint. Now the older generation, the employers, must take care not to exploit them."

Mrs. Flagler was born on the west side near Union square. Her father and her brothers were interested in politics and civic affairs, and Carter Harrison the elder and Senator Billy Mason were familiar figures in her childhood. Upon graduating from high school she took vocal lessons for five years, singing in concert and in the Garfield Park Methodist church choir. Later her husband and her three sons were to take up so much of her time that her music was permitted to lapse.

Her Official Career.

After joining the Vanderpoel Parent-Teacher association and achieving the presidency there she became successively corresponding secretary, printin.; chairman, and first vice president of the Illinois congress. Then, in the middle of the year, came the sudden death of Mrs. George Detweiler.

"When I heard the news I was so overcome that I walked into the garden by myself. All I could think of was her poor little boy. Then the immensity of my new responsibility began to dawn on me. I knew that I couldn't take the job. I began to pray. And suddenly I knew that I would get along, that I must not, could not fail. In moments like that I have found that there is always a force that sustains you, carries you through. It is a matter of faith, faith that you will be protected, that nothing can touch you."

After filling Mrs. Detweiler's term, Mrs. Flagler was elected for an additional two years. Her duties took her from coast to coast. A year ago, in Washington, she urged the plan for paying the school teachers which has now been put into effect.

Calls Teachers Heroic.

"The teachers were heroic during these last years," Mrs. Flagler declared. "Will you believe me when I say that not once did one of them ask me to help them get their money? All they ever asked was that the standards of our schools should be maintained."

When her term ended last spring Mrs. Flagler became school education chairman for the Illinois congress. This is the first job she ever sought, she asserted, adding that all the others had come to her without opposition from a rival candidate.

"I had become so much interested in school conditions that I actually asked for the post," she revealed. "The first duty of the school education chairman is to keep the public abreast of the school situation—the radio chairman has arranged a series of broadcasts for me over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station, to begin next Tuesday."

"There are so many things that cry for reform. Our high schools are our greatest weakness now—so overcrowded that the teachers do not have personal contacts with students at just the age when they need guidance most."

Works for Parent Education.

"Then we are working to introduce parent education. It is incredible that children should be trained in biology, mathematics, in fact everything under the sun but the thing that counts most—parenthood."

Education, Mrs. Flagler sees, as the joint responsibility of home, school, and church.

"The home should provide the physical and spiritual training. Mental training and training for citizenship should be given by the school, where the child is one of a group. The church can reinforce the work of both.

"Church people I have found to be the cream of the community—they have principles, try to stick to them. There are a few hypocrites in every group, but you hear only about those in churches. However, the church must offer the same activities that attract young people to the home and the school if it is to exert influence over them, hold its own against rival, undesirable forces."

San Salvador council No. 1262, Knights of Columbus, will celebrate its twenty-eighth birthday tomorrow evening with a program and dinner at 8:15 o'clock in the organization's clubrooms, 24 East 114th place.

The program, according to Vincent Guastalli, the council's lecturer, who will deliver the address of the evening, will include talks by Henry [Zeke] Bonura, White Sox first baseman, and James Adducci, and selections by Mario Vallortigara, operatic singer. Mr. Adducci will sing several Italian folk songs.

PLAY IN SAFETY DRIVE ENLISTS AID OF WOMEN

Councils Are Formed to Further Cause.

Play yard councils was formed last week by groups of women in various parts of the city to support the "off the streets campaign" being conducted by the Chicago Motor club.

MRS. W. M. WIGGER

On the south side the play yard council was organized at the home of Mrs. William F. Wigger, 7104 Lowe avenue, president of the Englewood Women's club.

"It is highly important to keep children off the streets," Mrs. Wigger said. "The schoolboys' patrol, the safety posters, and the work being done in the schools has resulted in a decrease in accidents among children of school age, but accidents have increased among children of pre-school age.

Mothers Have Duty.

"This means that a duty has fallen upon all mothers to see to it that the children are given safety education before they start to school. One of the easiest and most effective ways to prevent accidents is to keep children off the streets. The play yard movement does this, and consequently it should have the eager support of all women."

The play yard contest conducted by the motor club ends Oct. 31. Prizes will be given for the best purchased equipment, and, secondly, for the best homemade equipment. The pieces will be judged upon originality, usefulness, artistic conception, and durability. Coupons to be used to enter the contest will be found in another column in THE TRIBUNE.

Size of Yard Not Factor.

Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, points out that the size of the play yard need not necessarily be a determining factor in awarding prizes. He says that small plots of ground may be made extremely useful, from the standpoint of play.

"One of the principal considerations in judging the contest will be the use of the play yard," he says. "Children will play where things are made interesting for them. Parents must use as much energy and imagination in the construction of a play yard as they do in the making of a garden or the venture is doomed to failure. The results which come from keeping off the streets, however, are so important that no effort should be spared."

Next week the formation of the committees to judge the contest in various parts of the city will be started.

Find It Easy to Keep Children Off Street

For a long time Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Zobel, 9725 South Damen avenue, have been contending that it takes little effort to keep children from playing in the street. To prove their point, last year they built a small, inexpensive playground in their back yard, where their children, as well as those of their neighbors, have fun in safe surroundings. Sitting, left to right, are Carol Danne, Kenneth Denter, and Herbert Zobel. Standing: Franklin Fisher, Marjorie Danne, Jack Sullivan, and Marie Zobel.

Previously he has been choir director at Marlboro Presbyterian church and at the Emerald Avenue Presbyterian church, and has been director of the well known Canary chorus of the Masonic lodges of the south side. At Drexel Park church he has for some time directed the men's chorus. The vested choir numbers 100 voices, including 14 soloists of distinctive ability. With the assistance of Fred Farrel, organist, the choir will furnish music at both 11 and 8 o'clock services.

WOMAN'S CLUB HELPS 3 GIRLS DEVELOP TALENT

Beverly Hills Scholarship Winners Named.

Thanks to the scholarship fund of the Beverly Hills Woman's club, two girls took up their studies at Morgan Park Junior college last week, and a third will return to the University of Chicago on Oct. 3.

They are Miss Helen Doerr, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. Doerr, 11519 South Irving avenue; Miss Virginia Hayn, an orphan, who lives with her aunt, Miss Simona McKenzie, 9845 Vanderpoel avenue, and Miss Beth Hemmens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Hemmens, 2301 West 107th place.

The scholarship fund, now in its second year, provided awards for both Miss Hemmens and Miss Hayn last year. Miss Hemmens is returning to the University of Chicago, which for the second time has granted her a half scholarship providing $150 tuition. The other half is being furnished by the Woman's club.

How Funds Are Raised.

Miss Hayn has begun her second year at Morgan Park Junior college where her award covers a full year's tuition. The scholarship received by Miss Doerr also covers tuition and the matriculation fee at the junior college, where she is a freshman.

"The club is delighted that this year it can provide scholarships for three girls instead of two, as it did last year," commented Mrs. Reid M. Bennett, chairman of the scholarship committee and former president of the club.

"The girls have been outstanding in character as well as ability, and we of the club are proud that we are able to help them to develop their talents."

The scholarship fund, Mrs. Bennett explained, has been raised through the club's annual card party, the annual play, noon luncheons, and guest fees. Mrs. H. W. Spencer and Mrs. Walter F. Heineman serve with her on the committee.

Girls Reveal Ambitions.

All three girls are alumae of Morgan Park High school. Miss Hemmens, who is 20, was graduated in the class of February, '33, and entered the University of Chicago last September on a half scholarship based on her high scholastic standing at Morgan Park. She had been active in athletics and school clubs, besides ranking second in the class scholastically.

Last year at college Miss Hemmens was on the Woman's Athletic association board, the cabinet of the Y. W. C. A., and the Anderson club. She plans to major in bacteriology and become a laboratory technician.

Miss Hayn, 18, took all the French courses available at the junior college last year, and is taking up German this year. She hopes to become a language teacher. The French club and glee club are her principal extracurricular activities as they were at Morgan Park, where she was graduated in June, '33.

Miss Doerr, who finished high school in June and is just 17, is taking up the liberal arts course at the junior college. French also is her favorite study, and she is interested in music. She sang alto in the high school glee club and was the club's accompanist and she hopes eventually to become a professional accompanist.

HYDE PARK GROUP ENDS 44 YEARS OF "MILITANT" WORK

The Hyde Park Protective association, of which Arthur Burrage Farwell is secretary, recently completed a month's celebration of its 44th anniversary. Many prominent business and professional men and women took part.

In announcing the celebration Mr. Farwell declared that the organization, which was formed on July 27, 1900, "is proud to admit that it is militant." In recounting the association's fight against vice Mr. Farwell pointed out that it has won ten out of eleven cases which it has taken to court in the last few years.

SOUTH SIDE P.-T. GROUPS LAUNCH SEASON TUESDAY

Two Districts Schedule Meetings This Week.

Tuesday and Wednesday will launch the season's activities for south side parent-teacher leaders, since District 1 has scheduled its opening conference for Tuesday in the Venetian room of the Southmoor hotel, and District 25 will hold its conference the following day at Thoburn Methodist Episcopal church, 64th and Paulina streets.

The state has been combed to assemble the distinguished educators and parent-teacher leaders who will address both sessions on problems of particular interest at the moment as well as parent-teacher work in general. At both conferences presidents and committee chairmen of parent-teacher associations will be in attendance, together with district directors and their assistants.

HAROLD STOKES NEW ORCHESTRA CHIEF AT W-G-N

NBC Maestro Will Be Dance Band Leader.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Harold Stokes, an outstanding leader in the realm of popular music, has been appointed director of the W-G-N Dance orchestra. Mr. Stokes will make his first appearance with the new orchestra of 20 pieces on Monday, Oct. 8, with a gala opening broadcast over THE TRIBUNE's station. On the preceding day, Sunday, Oct. 7, Henry G. Weber, W-G-N's new musical director, will make his first appearance as conductor of the W-G-N Concert orchestra, presenting a special program.

When Harold Stokes takes up the baton at the W-G-N studios in a fortnight it will be something in the nature of a homecoming for him. Six years ago, when he was a youngster of 23, he was directing Jean Goldkette's band, the W-G-N studio orchestra of the predepression days. In this capacity he was in charge of the first commercial program broadcast coast to coast from Chicago—the Champions' show which is still on the air over both networks.

Director, Arranger, Composer.

During the intervening years Stokes has achieved an enviable record as a director, musician, arranger and composer. Leaving W-G-N to organize his own orchestra, he was succeeded by Victor Young, who also has become famous in the broadcast world. Harold went to Kansas City, playing hotel engagements there and in Omaha.

In 1931 he came to the National Broadcasting company in Chicago as staf conductor. He was featured on many important commercial broadcasts including the Contented Hour, the Sealed Power show and the Palmer House Promenade. Last year he began free lancing but most of his work has been confined to NBC. Currently he is directing the Thursday Carnival hour, one of the best of the daytime network programs, featuring also Little Jackie Heller, Gale Page, the King's Jesters, and Don McNeill.

Stokes is particularly facile as an arranger and many noteworthy ideas in musical treatment have been of his origination. One that comes to mind is his symphonic interpretation of "St. Louis Blues," presented first on the air a year ago on the Contented Hour. and repeated at the great colored pageant "Sing a New Song" at Soldiers' field this summer. Stokes also has a half dozen song hits to his credit. Among these are "Mary Lou," "Kids Again," "Mystery Man," and "That's Happiness."

Harold Stokes was born in Nokomis, Ill., the home town also of Jimmy Bottomley, the baseball player. He began studying music when he was 5 years old. He went to high school in St. Louis, where Jeanie Lang, now teamed with Buddy Rogers, was a schoolmate, and attended the University of Missouri and musical conservatories in St. Louis.

In Radio Eleven Years.

He has been in radio 11 years, making his start with Paul Whiteman's Collegians at the Congress hotel in 1923. He played in J. B. Lampe's orchestra at the Trianon ballroom with Wayne King—in fact the two were roommates when King was learning to play the saxophone. At the same time Harold was mastering the accordion.

As a member of Roy Bargy's orchestra he helped open the Stevens hotel in 1927. During this engagement with Paul Whiteman's future pianist he met his future wife, who was Esther Ross. The Stokes' have a daughter, Nancy, 5 years old, who is making her first appearance at school this week. They reside in Evanston.

Harold Stokes is an enthusiastic outdoorsman. He does a lot of motoring and more boating. He owns the cabin cruiser, Roxanna, named for his mother, and spent much time this summer on the Great Lakes. He also flies, plays tennis, and is a competent photographer.

THE NEW PROGRAMS

The networks have been setting up a terrific hullabaloo over new programs the last few weeks. Last weekend they began appearing on the airlanes. Saturday night NBC presented "The Gibson Family," radio's first original musical comedy. And this show is just about 99 44-100 per cent of what a good radio show should be, if one may borrow the figure so regularly employed by the soap concern sponsoring the show. The music seemed exceptionable and particularly well suited to radio. The script is attractive enough to make one want to listen in again the following Saturday. If the authors keep to the pace of the first show bath night will become a stay at home night for a legion of listeners.

Roxy Is Still Roxy.

Roxy's Revue, which had its première the same night, was heralded as a new art form. The so-called "ear pictures" were hardly that. It was a pleasant program, except for Roxy's own sharp voice. So far as we are concerned it is a good idea to let him plug the castoria. The highly advertised new talent on the show was easy to listen to, but not exceptional. In short Roxy is still Roxy—but now you hear him on CBS instead of NBC.

Tibbett and Crosby.

Lawrence Tibbett is back again, singing at least as well as last year and doing his first talking on the air. Same evening Bing Crosby returned and he, too, has taken to exercising his speaking voice on the air. The gab seems to lend informality to the programs which is probably a desirable thing. With Crosby are the Boswell sisters. Both programs are bound to be popular.

Baggiore Will Present 2 Famous Old Ballads

The famous old ballads, "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," will be presented by Attilio Baggiore, W-G-N's tenor, with the orchestra on his regular Friday evening concert at 9:30 o'clock. Mr. Baggiore also will sing "The Rosary," by Nevin, in response to hundreds of requests; "Dawn Awakes," by Braine, and "House Love Made for You and Me," by Coates.

W-G-N TO REPORT DEMOCRAT MEET FRIDAY EVENING

W-G-N will broadcast the speeches of several prominent Democratic chieftains next Friday evening when two half hour broadcasts will be presented from the Chicago Stadium where the city and county Democratic convention is to be held. W-G-N will broadcast from 8:30 to 9 p. m. and from 9:30 to 10 p. m.

Speakers who will be heard during the W-G-N broadcasts will include Mayor Kelly, States Attorney Courtney, Gov. Horner and United States Senators Lewish and Dieterich.

A special radio booth will be built for W-G-N behind the speakers' platform in the center of the stadium on the south side of the big building.

W-G-N Will Broadcast Cub Game with Pirates

This afternoon W-G-N will broadcast the baseball game between the Chicago Cubs and the Pittsburgh Pirates at Pittsburgh. The game will start at 1:55 o'clock. Bob Elson, W-G-N sports announcer, will be at the mike.

FRED ALLEN SAYS

Dear Larry:

Am inclosing the Town Hall Bulletin for the week: The new postage stamps taste the same as the old ones. . . . Since the bathing season has closed, there's nothing left in the water but a few fish and Dr. Beebe. . . . Sponsors are cutting down. One popular piano team is now playing on the same piano. . . . Crab pickers are out on strike. Oh well! We can do with a little less crabbing these days. . . . So many opera singers on the air. One listener says his family feels like a claque. . . . The man who still owns a miniature golf course doesn't have to worry about the profit motive.

Cordially.

FRED ALLEN

Bishop Spreng to Be W-G-N Chapel Speaker

The speaker at the W-G-N studio chapel service at 11 o'clock this morning is to be Bishop Samuel P. Spreng of the Evangelical church. Bishop Spreng will have for his subject "Personal Religion." Hymns, responses, and special numbers will be presented by the W-G-N Studio Chapel choir. The service is arranged and directed by Dr. John L. Dickson.

JUST PLAIN BILL WILL RETURN TO W-G-N TOMORROW

Columbia Also to Take Homey Sketch.

"Just Plain Bill," the homey sketch which tells of the life of "Just Plain Bill" Davidson, the barber of Hartville, and his daughter, "Nancy," and their friends, returns to the air tomorrow. "Just Plain Bill" will be heard at 1 o'clock daily except Saturday and Sunday on W-G-N and a CBS network.

"Just Plain Bill" had a nine months' run on W-G-N and CBS last winter and spring and the same sponsors are presenting the sketch again this season.

Mildred Hark, who plays the part of "Nancy," has been writing and acting since she was eight. She received her first professional training under Stuart Walker, famous theatrical producer and movie director.

Started on Station WLW.

Miss Hark's radio career started at WLW, Cincinnati, and she won her first job through a telephone audition. Edward Byron, who produced a network show in New York, heard her voice over the telephone and recognizing a "natural" for radio signed her for several productions. Her first radio broadcasts in Chicago were on the "First Nighter" programs and since that time she has played many parts in shows over W-G-N and the two national networks.

Recently one of her original plays, "The Final Curtain," was produced on the "Talkie Picture Time" network program. This particular play was pronounced one of the finest vehicles that June Meredith was ever starred in. Miss Hark also appeared in this production.

Poses for Painters.

Miss Hark has posed for several portraits during the last summer and one of them, "The Red Beret," by Miss Eleanor Junge, prominent Chicago artist, is on exhibition at the Drake hotel.

The rest of the cast of the sketch will be selected from artists who appeared on the air sketch last season and several new artists. The main characters last season besides "Nancy" and "Just Plain Bill Davidson" were two young suitors of Nancy, "David" and "Kerry." Many incidental characters, townsfolk of Hartville, and various other persons, appeared in the sketch from time to time.

Helen Hedges, Sears to Sing Duet with Sentinels

The old favorite, "Annie Laurie," will be sung a cappella by the ensemble in contrast to the stirring orchestral rendition of "Damnation of Faust" as two of the highlights of the Sentinel's Serenade at 4 p. m. today over WMAQ and an NBC-WEAF network. Helen Hedges, soprano, and Charles Sears, tenor, will sing "Love in Bloom" as a duet and the ensemble, with Edward Davies, baritone, will be heard in "De Glory Road." Josef Koestner conducts the orchestra.

HAROLD TURNER SIGNED AS STAF PIANIST ON W-G-N

His Versatility Wins Him Contract.

Harold Turner, sensational young pianist, has signed a year's contract as a staf artist on W-G-N. Turner, who has been playing at W-G-N for five months, will be heard daily on commercial and sustaining programs.

Although a comparative youngster in the music world Turner has attracted attention of critics throughout the middle west. Turner started his study as a pianist when 5 years old under the guidance of his mother. Eight years ago he enrolled at the University of Nebraska.

Ernest Harrison, head of the school of music, became his teacher for four years both in piano and at the organ console. While at the university Turner worked at various theaters as organist and pianist. He also made his debut on radio in Lincoln over station KFAB.

After graduation Turner went to France, where he studied for a year with Marcel Dupre, the great French organist and pianist and composer. Last April, after returning from France, Turner came to W-G-N. He is 26 years old, single, 5 feet 7 inches tall.

Turner's ability to play any style of music brought him his W-G-N contract. He is equally proficient in the works of the old masters as well as the lighter type of popular music of the day.

Turner is accompanist for the Doring Sisters, the W-G-N harmony trio. He also plays for Frank Wilson, tenor soloist, and with Leonard Salvo, staf organist, and the new trio, Betty, Jean and Jim.

'Maryland Raid' Highlight of Roses, Drums Today

"Maryland Raid," a Roses and Drums episode, which will introduce two of the civil war's most colorful commanders, Jubal Early, "Lee's bad old man," and the Union general, Lew Wallace, who later wrote "Ben Hur," will be presented over WENR and NBC network at 4:00 p. m. today. The action takes place in July, 1865, with Early leading his veterans in a surprise raid into the north.

Edward Davies to Be Guest on Eastman Hour

Edward Davies, baritone heard over NBC networks, will be the guest of Morgan L. Eastman's Symphony orchestra at 9:15 tonight over station WENR. Davies will sing "None but the Lonely Heart," by Tschaikowsky, and Wolf's "Gwine to Hebbin." Brahms' "Hungarian Dance No. 5" and Tschaikowsky's "1812 Overture" will be played by the orchestra.

Daughters of Isabella Open Season with Stunt Party

To start the fall season, Calumet Circle, No. 22, Daughters of Isabella, will hold a stunt party on Thursday evening at the Southmoor hotel, 67th street and Stony Island avenue. Mrs. Marie C. Miller, 8749 South Morgan street, is chairman of the event and has planned a surprise program. Refreshments will be served. Miss Florence Cotter, 7321 Princeton avenue, is regent of the circle.

KEMP TO LEAVE; AGNEW, KYSER FOLLOW ON W-G-N

Final Midnight Flyers' Show Tomorrow.

Three different dance orchestras will be heard over W-G-N from the Blackhawk restaurant during the coming week. Hal Kemp and his band make their final appearance of the season at the Blackhawk, Charley Agnew and his orchestra appear at the café and on the W-G-N schedule for four days, while Kay Kyser and his novelty orchestra open their fall engagement at the famous night life spot the latter part of the week.

KAY KYSER.

Kemp and his boys finished their regular engagement last night at the Blackhawk, but return tomorrow night to play their final "Midnight Flyers" broadcast. This two hour show, which features Kemp's orchestra and a galaxy of guest artists, was inaugurated more than twenty months ago by W-G-N with Kemp's orchestra during the first engagement Hal and his boys played at the Blackhawk.

Agnew to Play Four Nights.

Tonight, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday evenings Agnew, his orchestra, singing ensemble, and Emrie Ann Lincoln will appear at the Blackhawk. Charlie is in Chicago to break up a road trip which has taken him throughout the south and southwest.

Kay Kyser and his orchestra come to the Blackhawk from the Pacific coast, having just closed an engagement at the Mira-Mar in Los Angeles. Kyser comes to the Blackhawk with a great entertainment record. The orchestra has been playing together for the last five years and has worked up many novelty numbers.

Final Flyers Show.

For the final "Midnight Flyers" program, in which Kemp and his orchestra will participate, Hal has planned a brilliant show. The broadcast, which starts at midnight, will present many of the original entertainers who inaugurated the "Midnight Flyers" broadcasts nearly two years ago. Hal has issued special invitations to this original group of artists as well as the majority of the outstanding stars of the stage, screen, and radioland who have appeared on the broadcasts during the last twenty months.

On Tuesday Kemp and his orchestra start a tour east which will land them in New York and the Pennsylvania hotel about Oct. 1 after a series of one night dance engagements through Ohio, Pennsylvania, and New York state.

Ted Weems Guest Tonight on Hall of Fame Program

Ted Weems and his band concluding the series of guest appearances by celebrated orchestras, will be heard on the Hall of Fame broadcast at 9 p. m., tonight, over WMAQ and an NBC-WEAF network, playing from the Chicago NBC studios. Numbers to be played include "Canadian Capers," "The Lights Are Low," "Beautiful Blue Danube," "Liebestraum," "Pardon My Southern Accent," "Baby Take a Bow," "The Very Thought of You" and "Stardust."

Tony Wons Rents House by the Side of the Lake

Tony Wons is going suburban. By the time the next House by the Side of the Road program goes out on the air Wons will be all located in his own house by the side of the lake—the Evanston portion of the lake, that is. The strain of life in the loop has been getting Dons down a bit of late, so with a trifle of time on his hands this week, he went Evanstonward with the idea of getting an apartment—and he wound up with a whole house.

Works of Old Masters on W-G-N Concert Hour

A program featuring the works of the old masters will be presented by the W-G-N orchestra from 7 to 7:30 o'clock this evening. Included in the brilliant program are Mendelssohn's "Spinning Song," "Tarantella" by Saint-Saens which will feature the playing of Joseph Schotta, flutist, and Oliver Thomas, clarinet soloist, with the orchestra; Rachmaninoff's "Prelude in C Minor," Heykins' "Serenade" and Chopin's "Minute Waltz."

ILSE MARVENGA TO SING OVER W-G-N FROM WORLD'S FAIR

Ilse Marvenga, brilliant musical comedy and operetta singing star, will appear during the coming week as the guest artist with Palmer Clark and his orchestra at the Swift Bridge of Service at the Fair and on the broadcasts over W-G-N. Miss Marvenga, who was one of the first German artists to come to America following the world war, is internationally famous for her brilliant work on the stage.

ILSE MARVENGA.

She originated the rôle of Kathie in "The Student Prince." Since then she has appeared as the star of many productions of the musical comedy stage and the municipal opera of St. Louis, among the presentations being "No, No, Nanette," "Naughty Marietta," "There You Are," and Friml's "The Fire Fly." On her broadcasts over W-G-N she will sing songs from the shows in which she was starred.

NORTHWESTERN, MARQUETTE U. GAME ON W-G-N

When Northwestern university's Wildcats open their grid season against Marquette university's football team next Saturday, W-G-N will broadcast the game from Dyche stadium in Evanston. This broadcast will inaugurate the W-G-N collegiate football broadcast schedule of nine games which will present the best of the middle west's gridiron battles.

Quin Ryan again will report the football games. The W-G-N booth in the press box has been put in order and as in former years Carl Meyers, chief engineer of W-G-N, will assist Mr. Ryan as his observer.

The complete show will be broadcast by W-G-N. Saturday's broadcast will start at 2 o'clock, when Mr. Ryan will picture the scenes in the big stadium before the contest and give dope on the two teams and their players. Microphones have been installed to catch the college bands as they parade and the cheers of the rival rooting sections.

SALERNO WILL SING POPULAR SONGS THIS WEEK

Lawrence Salerno, the Neapolitan troubadour, who is heard with the W-G-N Rondoliers at 9 o'clock every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday morning will feature popular ballads during his three programs this coming week. Tomorrow morning Salerno will sing "I Only Have Eyes For You," "Sibony," an Italian song and "They Didn't Believe Me." On Wednesday the three selections will be "It Happened in Monterey," "Blue in Love," and an Italian love song, "Canzona di Taormina." On Friday he has picked "Shortnin' Bread," the popular Negro spiritual, "Stars Fall on Alabama," and "Rollin' Home."

Skin drying up?

MELT HORNY CELLS ON SURFACE SKIN WITH SPECIAL SKIN SOFTENER

SEE SKIN SOFTEN —INSTANTLY!

DRY SKIN is dead surface skin.

What causes it? The constant drying of the outer surface of the skin—due to outside influences—wind, sun.

A distinguished dermatologist says:

"Due to the drying-up process, there is a coating of dried-out cells—desiccated cells—horny cells—on the surface. That makes the skin rough."

Dermatologist explains how:

"Vanishing Cream," he said, "has a keratolytic property. It dissolves the horny substance on the surface, leaving the skin soft... fresh... transparent. It has another property—it leaves a thin film on the skin which keeps the natural moisture from evaporating too quickly due to sun, wind."

Vanishing Cream, therefore, both protects against loss of natural softness and restores softness. Thousands of women have found this out for themselves in actual experience.

No matter what their method of skin care is, they never fail to finish with Pond's Vanishing Cream. It protects completely against dry, rough skin—keeps it clear—young.

Holds powder marvelously...

Every time you powder, put this magical skin softener on first. It gives an enchanting smoothness and keeps you looking freshly powdered for hours and hours. It is greaseless. Always put Pond's Vanishing Cream on after every cleansing . . . your nightly cleansing, too. Use it on hands, arms, elbows! See how it keeps them, too, soft and white—alluring.

Miss Anne Gould, shown above, says: "I find Pond's Vanishing Cream smooths and softens my skin divinely. Also, it is the grandest foundation cream ever."

DISGRACEFUL TRUTH SHOCK TO FAMILY

EVERY MEMBER FOUND USING SOGGY TOOTHBRUSH—LOW-GRADE OR WORN-OUT

Commonest cause of dull-white teeth now known to be brushes that get soggy when wet, that fail to clean

EVERY TOOTHBRUSH SOGGY—"I did not realize the truth," says this mother, "until, recently, we had a nurse in the house. She showed me that every one of our toothbrushes was soggy—either worn-out or made with cheap bristles. Now we are all using DR. WEST'S water-proofed brush."

ALL FOUR GUILTY—This entire family, like many, many others, was wasting time with soggy toothbrushes that failed to clean. Now DR. WEST'S water-proofed brush keeps their teeth brilliant-white.

FATHER AMAZED—"No more soggy toothbrushes for me. I had no idea how white my teeth could be until I started using DR. WEST'S water-proofed brush."

UNSEEN DEPOSITS IN 8 OUT OF 10 MOUTHS—In most mouths dentists find unseen deposits that masquerade as enamel—that make teeth dull-white. The commonest cause is soggy toothbrushes that fail to clean.

UNFIT FOR USE—Every toothbrush owned by this family turned limp and soggy when wet. As is often the case, bristles were either worn-out or inferior—could not possibly keep teeth really clean. (The costliest bristles are water-proofed in DR. WEST'S 50c brush.)

Famous brush water-proofed against sogginess

Like this family we all want brilliant-white, good-looking teeth. Yet we go on, day after day, wasting our time and energy with soggy toothbrushes—brushes that get flabby when wet.

Actually, really brilliant-white teeth are rare. The chief reason is that we are careless about the toothbrushes we use. We do not realize the truth.

A soggy toothbrush—one that is worn-out or cheap or equipped with inferior bristles—simply cannot keep tooth enamel clean.

Here is your safeguard: a remarkable brush that is water-proofed against sogginess—DR. WEST'S famous 50c Toothbrush.

The world's costliest bristles are used in making it. And these bristles are water-proofed. They cannot grow soggy when wet. You get 60% faster, more thorough cleansing than ever before possible with DR. WEST'S water-proofed Toothbrush.

Throw away your soggy toothbrush

Why let an old, worn-out soggy toothbrush rob you of brilliant-white, lovely teeth? Throw it away today. Get DR. WEST'S famous water-proofed brush—50c; or at the very least, DR. WEST'S new Economy brush—29c.

ONE COMMON NEGLECT was discovered in this home—soggy toothbrushes that grew limp and flabby when wet, that left teeth half-clean, only dull-white. Today DR. WEST'S water-proofed brush is standard family equipment.

WATER-PROOFED AGAINST SOGGINESS—A special safeguard to give you quicker, more thorough cleansing, brilliant-white teeth. Cleans teeth 60% better than ever before possible. DR. WEST'S famous 50c brush is made of the world's costliest bristles water-proofed. Cannot get soggy. Sealed in glass, it is the only brush that reaches you surgically sterile. In ten gem-like colors.

ALSO DR. WEST'S NEW ECONOMY BRUSH—29c
A medium-priced brush that really cleans. Gives greater protection against sogginess than any other brush at this price. Its bristles do not equal in quality those in DR. WEST'S famous 50c brush, nor are they water-proofed. Yet DR. WEST'S new Economy brush at 29c is superior to many higher-priced brushes. Famous DR. WEST'S design. Sterilized and sealed. Six beautiful colors.

DICK TRACY
YES SIR - THAT'S THAT SAME WOMAN THAT'S BEEN FOLLOWING ME AROUND - HA! I'LL FIX HER. I'LL SLIP AROUND THIS CORNER AND SHAKE HER OFF. THEN I'LL SPY ON HER.
WHILE JUNIOR TRACY'S MOTHER FOLLOWS THE BOY AROUND DAILY IN WORSHIPFUL ADMIRATION, SHE IS STILL UNDECIDED WHETHER TO IDENTIFY HERSELF AND CLAIM THE LAD WHO IS IGNORANT OF HER EXISTENCE AND IS HAPPY AND CONTENTED WITH DICK TRACY - OR TO FADE OUT OF THE PICTURE AND LEAVE THINGS AS THEY ARE.....
HA! I LOST HER. SHE'S GOING BACK UP THE STREET.
GEE! SHE LIVES IN A NICE ENOUGH HOTEL! I'LL FOLLOW HER INSIDE AND SEE WHAT ROOM SHE'S OCCUPYING.
ROOM 202 - THAT'S WHERE SHE WENT IN! IT'S IN THE CORNER ON THE SECOND FLOOR.
MEANWHILE..
DID YOU MAIL THE LETTER TO THAT STEELE WOMAN, LU?
YOU BET I DID, MORTIMER, AND I TOLD HER WE'D GIVE HER JUST TWENTY-FOUR HOURS TO GO THROUGH WITH THE JOB - OR ELSE.
SHE'S HIGH-HATTED US EVER SINCE WE CAME TO TOWN! SHE WON'T EVEN CALL US ON THE PHONE - AND WE COULDN'T LET HER LIVE WITH US BECAUSE IT WOULD AROUSE SUSPICION.
YOU'D THINK SHE'D BE GRATEFUL TO US FOR BRINGING HER TO TOWN WHERE SHE CAN SEE HER SON. YOU'D THINK SHE'D CLAIM HIM AND SPLIT THE LEGACY WITH US.
THAT LETTER WILL BRING HER TO HER SENSES, THOUGH! THAT'LL BRING HER TO HER SENSES.
A LETTER! HEAVEN HELP ME! IT'S FROM LU! I CAN TELL BY THE HANDWRITING!
WHAT'S THIS? OH, SO THAT'S THE WAY THEY FEEL, IS IT? WELL, THEY CAN'T FORCE ME TO CLAIM THE BOY IF I THINK HE'S BETTER OFF WITH DICK TRACY.
YEP, THAT'S HER ROOM RIGHT THERE AT THE CORNER.. OH OH! SHE'S THROWING SOMETHING OUT OF THE WINDOW - LOOKS LIKE LITTLE PIECES OF PAPER!
THEY ARE LITTLE PIECES OF PAPER! AND MOST OF THEM LANDED ON THE LEDGE OF THAT WINDOW BELOW.
WHAT COULD BE BETTER! THERE'S A PIECE OF FLY-PAPER LYING HERE AND IT'S CAUGHT NEARLY ALL THE PIECES!
I'LL TAKE THIS HOME TO TRACY! BOY! WE'LL FIND OUT WHAT THE WRITING ON THOSE PIECES OF PAPER SAYS! YES SIR!
WILL JUNIOR AND TRACY BE ABLE TO PIECE THE TORN LETTER TOGETHER? WILL THE BOY EVER DISCOVER THIS WOMAN IS HIS OWN MOTHER??

If the boss could speak . . .

Employers find it difficult to tell girls they are offending others through perspiration odor in underthings. Men simply can't mention so personal a matter. So, girls, don't ever run this risk —it could even cost a girl her job.

WE ALL PERSPIRE, of course—frequently over a quart a day, doctors say. Underthings absorb the odor, but it's so easy to avoid offending.

Clever girls never run the risk of wearing underthings a second day. They Lux underthings after every wearing. It takes only four minutes or so and it's the sure way to be exquisitely dainty.

Lux removes perspiration odor—and it saves colors. Avoid cake-soap rubbing and ordinary soaps which contain harmful alkali. These may weaken fabrics, fade color. Lux has no harmful alkali. Anything safe in water is safe in Lux.

Mothers: Doctors Discover

1¢ worth of Quaker Oats = 3 Cakes of Fresh Yeast

Often known as yeast vitamin. Yet nature stores more of it in 1c worth of oatmeal than in 3 cakes of fresh yeast!

Loss of weight, under-nourishment, malnutrition, result when a child's diet is short of this element. Kids aren't as bright, don't get along as well at school, when they suffer lowered vitality in this way. But, warns one scientist, this element can't be stored up in the body. So play safe. Serve Quaker (or Mother's) Oats regularly.

How it affects poor appetite—constipation

Now youngsters poorly nourished for Vitamin B, can develop wholesome, normal appetites without being coaxed to eat. Poor appetites disappear, records show, after regular feeding of this precious food element, so richly supplied in Quaker (or Mother's) Oats. Stubborn cases of constipation also yield to this same magical food element, according to medical records. Now in Quaker (or Mother's) Oats, the economical breakfast food, every child, rich and poor, may have this splendid nourishment.

Start at once to give your child, your family, the amazing benefits of a Quaker Oats breakfast. Quick Quaker (or Mother's) cooks done in 2½ minutes. Eat it—serve it for abundant energy!

Here, for instance, is a statement that might win a FREE bike. "Mother says Quaker Oats makes me strong and full of pep, because it contains the things that make good red blood and tough muscles." You can do even better than that! NOTE: Mention Mother's instead of Quaker if Mother's is your favorite brand.

...able business of your own, backed up by our prosperous company.

I have been in this territory exactly eight months, and have already set one hundred and eight-seven men up in business for themselves between Cadillac, Mich., and Mattoon, Ill., and still have thirty-four opportunities left.

I am in control of this territory of a business unique in character, merchandising an electrical unit that has no competition, for which there is an ever increasing demand.

If in a personal interview you can satisfy me that you are honest, reliable, and trustworthy, and really have a desire to succeed, willing to study and are teachable, you may be the very man I am looking for.

Our business is very profitable. Many of our associates are earning as much as $50 on a percentage basis in a single day, and after they become experienced handling our business received a sizable monthly income, not regulated by the seasons, as ours is a year round business.

Selling experience not necessary, for if you are selected you are thoroughly trained at no expense to you. Some of our most successful associates never sold anything before joining us.

We stand all the expense of your business, such as rent, light, heat, telephone, help, etc., and in addition to giving you merchandise on open account, carry all of your time payment paper.

You do not invest one cent with us. We finance everything.

Our business is depression-proof, as same has increased every month of the last four years, with 1933 our busiest year. We have thousands of satisfied customers in the territory and are considered one of the country's outstanding organizations. There are no strings connected with this offer, and if you can meet the above requirements you will be granted a personal, confidential interview, which will quickly determine our mutual interests.

Our successful men come from every trade, business and profession. Some men make big money right from the start, but all who go into this work sincerely and follow out our instructions, can succeed. WHY IS IT—that 180 E. Delaware has been able to build and maintain such an unusual reputation as an outstanding apartment hotel?

The fact is there are more reasons than it would be possible to enumerate in one small advertisement. One reason, however, is the exceptionally well-groomed appearance of this building inside and out. Step in any time and be prepared for a genuine surprise.

When apartments are redecorated here they are thoroughly renovated and then completely refinished to your order. Lobby, halls, and receiving rooms—in fact, every nook and cranny of the building is spotless at all times.

Five and six room apartments with fireplace and 2 tile baths; sound-proof, canvased walls with an abundance of closets, gallery halls, large rooms and unusually fine kitchens.

You will be delighted with—

Why work in air that's Drier than the Sahara?

It's a fact that desert air registers an average relative humidity of about 23, while most offices record the dangerous Winter reading of about 18.

The new air conditioning system in Tribune Tower promotes better work by protecting health. That's just one of the many advantages of a Tribune Tower office. An ideal location at the right price.

Children Like Healthful Food When It Is in Party Dress

Juvenile Appetites Respond With Gratifying Result to Dishes Appearing With Festive Air

By Mary Meade.

"WHEE-EE! It's a Funny Face man!" crows Donna Jean "And look at my sailboat! . . . and Humpty Dumpty! . . . and Chicken Little!" shouts young David. "Gee, Mom, but eating's fun!"

And "Mom," who once was five herself, smiles all over to see peas, carrots, beets, and potatoes precede simple sandwiches

Many a Parent Interprets Faults of Adolescence Too Seriously

Over-Anxious, He Attaches Adult Significance to Mere "Growing Pains" of Youth that Time Is Sure to Cure

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

WHAT often is at the back of conflicts between adolescent boys and girls and their parents is a combination of causes. Here is the age at which we see looming up fore our anxious eyes the man or woman our child is destined to become. Hopes and fears and ambitions for them become all entangled in our minds and hearts. We want to see, we are impatient to see emerging the and wholesome desserts down small red lanes. She'll laugh if you talk to her of meal problem children. Such worries just don't happen, she'll inform you, in homes where "eating is fun."

Perhaps it's magic—this miracle that can turn weary, commonplace foods into gloriously exciting adventures. But, if so, it's a magic for which we each have the wand if we'll only uncover it and dust it off. Imagination—loads of it: understanding—oceans deep. That's all—but it turns the trick.

Down in one of the large Chicago department stores, I've been watching this imagination and understanding work. Miss Bina Wood, manager of the store's tea rooms, literally bubbles with inspirations for feeding young folks. A "Raggedy Ann" salad plate sounds fun. Or how about "Pink Elephant" cookies a fat "Dunce Cap Sundae" or a hot "Pirate Plate" for a rainy day? So Miss Wood tries out her plans upon her whooping young patrons, hundreds of whom come each week for parties or luncheons, certain, from experience, that whatever Miss Wood has put on the children's menu will make just grand eating.

"Raggedy Ann" Charms Small Girls.

So let's do the small mouse stunt and take a look. "Raggedy Ann" has all the young ladies in raptures today. Her plate is a glass one, feathery with curly clippings of lettuce. Her body is a half peach, round side up. For a skirt she wears a half slice of pineapple, laid boat shaped on the plate below the peach. Ann's head is a marshmallow flat-side-up, with gay clips of maraschino cherry for features. Atop that head is a fat raisin and all about are trails of white coconut hair in the proper Raggedy Ann manner. Arms and legs are sections of banana cut lengthwise like quarter-rounds. Plump raisins give her hands and feet, and don't forget buttons—wee currants right down the middle of her nice, fat tummy.

Soups may prove pretty tiresome spooning unless we stir in still more of our imagination. Alphabet noodles in clear soups are beloved. Tiny toasted croutons, grains of buttered popcorn, or an island of crisp cornflakes or puffed grain cereal make a game out of soup. Potato chowder, corn chowder, potato and spinach soup, cracked wheat broth—all these are almost certain favorites with young diners.

Is a vegetable plate a sign for tears at your house? Then you never have tried Donna Jean's "Funny Face Man." Pipe creamy hot potatoes through a pastry tube in a wiggly line all around a plate. With more potato, outline eyes and mouth. Fill in the large eye-wells with hot buttered peas. Tuck in a hot triangle of carrot for a nose. Add a heart shaped slice of pickled beet for the Funny Man's mouth, and give him crisp hair of parsley and a neat bowtie of red beet. Slip him in the oven for a moment until he's piping hot, then introduce him—and watch him disappear!

"Chicken Little" Is Clever Trick.

Or, center the fun around a "Chicken Little" dinner. Small molds for forming croquette mixtures may be purchased—or practice a bit and mold your own fat biddies. Deep-fat fry them, draining well, then nest a chicken on each plate, with a little sea of creamy gravy around her chunky feet. Buttered peas in a nest of mashed potatoes, and bright slices of hot carrot complete the plate.

No one need tell you that the average small eater is in love with mashed potatoes and gravy. Use these foods, then, as vehicles for introducing some food which is far less popular. A pastry tube does wonders in dressing up potato. Nests just yearn to be filled, and gravy quite graciously will go on as a cover blanket.

Children are only moderately fond of salads unless they excite their play spirit, but they will eat the same salad foods quite happily when they're introduced into sandwiches. Lettuce which won't be touched on the plate, disappears right merrily when pressed between thin bread slices.

The fact is, sandwiches are about "the fondest thing small folks are of." Whole wheat or graham bread and Boston brown bread, with sometimes raisin or another fruit bread, are the usual choices. Two medium thin slices, filled, put together, then cut in four square sections, is one way. Or scores of animal and geometric cutters are available. A brown and a white bread may form a sandwich. Or make a "goblin" sandwich by spreading a round of Boston brown bread with cream cheese, cutting a face out of another round, and placing this over the first. Minced celery, cabbage, and onion with cream dressing makes a well loved sandwich. Or try a chopped celery and nut filling, chopped pickled beets, cranberry jelly, or minced carrots and raisins with honey dressing.

Desserts Are Simple, but Imaginative.

Desserts may be simple, yet still sing with imagination. For a sailboat dessert partially stiffen flavored gelatin in glass dishes. Then place in each a slice of peach, boat fashion, with the gelatin for the sea. When ready to serve, add a sail formed from a bit of paper fastened to a woodpin.

Among cookies the regiments of animals and funny men are endless. Make liberal use of vegetable coloring, colored sugar crystals, and raisins. Gingerbread men are age-old favorites. Little frosted cakes may have gum drop decorations. Filled cookies are hungered for. Cup custard afloat with ice cream or whipped cream will always have takers. Homemade chocolate sundae pleases everybody. And pink pineapple sauce of half-and-half crushed pineapple and cooked apple, tinted with red coloring and seasoned with cinnamon, is our happy finale.

promise of the fine man or woman we want our child to become.

Each aspect of his or her personality that does not seem to measure up to our ideal fills us with apprehension. She's pleasure loving—our daughter—and we wonder if she'll be trivial. Or she adores pretty things, and we fear an inordinate regard for the flesh pots. Our son hates chores, and is full of temporary enthusiasms, and is terribly self-centered, and we fear that these things presage a manhood of irresponsibility and vacillation and selfishness.

The result of this mingling of fears and hopes and ambitions is that we take every act of our teen-age boy and girl too seriously. We become critical, we tighten up the traces, we make more demands than formerly, at a time when we should make fewer. And—worst of all—in doing all this we give to our growing up sons and daughters the feeling that we have no confidence in them—this at a time when they have none too much underlying confidence in themselves, no matter how self-assured they may seem. The result is tension, unhappiness, loss of parental control, and frequently the growth of a real antagonism between the child and his mother or father.

Aversion to Chores Causes Trouble.

With some necessary disguises to preserve the incognito of the family concerned, I'd like to describe an actual situation of the above kind.

"We have a baby and a small boy who are easily managed. It is our boy of 15 who is somewhat difficult. He is slow to do what he does not want to do, he wants what he wants, and he does not seem to want to work. In fact when told to do a piece of work he often grumbles.

"His father cares so much for him that he takes his flareups seriously and is sure his son will not turn out well.

Party Frocks Gay Allies of the Romantic

Even Butcher Boy Jackets Express Devastating Glamor in Every Flare.

By Rhea Seeger.

HOW the new dance time dresses are going to please everybody! Even carping, hypercritical Aunt Het will find nothing to complain about. Stag lines will gasp with unbelief over the lovely ladies wearing long, romantic looking frocks the like of which haven't been about for over a thousand and one nights. Dancing dresses are twice as easy to wear, infinitely more romantic and devastating than ever before. They are slinky, slithering, of rich, glamorous materials, have fur trimmings, glisten and glitter with a proper festive shine, and trail interestingly at the back.

They have plenty of slits, lots of swirled effects at the back, and all are cut by inspired scissor wielders. Huge flowers of chiffon, velvet, and silk are planted decoratively at the deep V in front. Double arrangements of straps are also featured, tie-on sashes, and the clever, trim trickery that only a good dance dress maker knows how to achieve.

Slit Skirts Demand a Gleaming Dancing Slipper.

Because of the numerous slits, your dancing slippers will be the giddiest, gayest, most colorful things you can find. . . . Dizzy heels, glittering trifles, criscrossed straps, and gleaming bits of satin and gold or silver are all that you will wear with the super-exciting costumes such as are illustrated here.

Every one of the ensembles is as new as tomorrow. For proof see the charming little detachable jackets, for with these jackets, with their distinctive flare and youthful dash, the rather simple dresses attain the fashionable smartness of 1934.

Black velvet is perennial, and when stiffened, flattering wisps of white Irish crochet lace outline the gouged-out, squarish neckline, it definitly steals the show. Long, flowing lines that break into fullness below the knees and this flounce slit so that the dancing slippers will be seen, a low backline, and narrow shoulder straps make the frock in the center one of the best buys for anybody's money. Number one.

At left: . . . Dull black crêpe silk fashions some grand costumes, with an exact duplicate sometimes obtainable in dull white. This is a simple sheath of a dress with some unusual double narrow shoulder straps fore and aft; uses either the black or white crêpe. For an opulent top, scarlet velvet trimmed with fluffy fox fur made into a short, perky, elbow length cape. The scarlet covers the shoulders of the black affair, while an emerald green velvet, likewise festooned with fur, tops the stunning white dress.

Lower right: . . . A most engaging duet, done in cinnamon brown lustrous velvet, combined with pin-checked gold and white brocade. The skirt is of the velvet, the tailored top of brocade, and the flaring, fetching butcher boy coat also of the velvet, made with long sleeves, buttoned down the front on the cuffs with large velvet covered buttons.

Upper right: . . . Another butcher boy jacket, this time of brocade in creamy, golden spattered pattern, but made with short sleeves and a yoke to accent the flared backline. This jacket is worn over a dress of dull black crêpe fashioned in sheath silhouette and accented at the top with matching brocade of the jacket.

Vegetables Rival Fruits as Popular Table Centerpiece

TABLE centerpieces of artificial fruit now have a rival. Artists have captured the beauty of well formed, ripe vegetables and have molded them of bright colored wax. Just picture the attractiveness of bright red peppers, slick green peppers, darker green artichokes, chubby cucumbers, maroon beets, yellow-green asparagus, and brilliant tomatoes on a large oval mirror.

In the same department store they are showing gourds of every conceivable size, shape, and color. These fruits have been given a shellacked finish to preserve them. Some of the larger ones are hollowed out, painted with peasant designs, and used as vases.

SKETCHED IN A CHICAGO SHOP

Silk crepe in black or dull white fashions a frock with double narrow shoulder straps. Scarlet velvet trimmed with fox fur makes the top of the black gown, emerald green that of the white.

Cinnamon brown lustrous velvet does a duet with pin checked gold and white brocade in this gown. The skirt and flaring, butcher boy coat are of velvet, the tailored bodice of brocade.

A FRIEND IN NEED

Children in School Are Faced with Problem of Adequate Clothing; Search Through Your Family Wardrobe May Reveal Garments to Fill These Requests.

By Sally Joy Brown.

TO many mothers the reopening of school brings with it additional worry. True, the care of the youngsters for the greater part of the day is taken over by competent teachers, policemen watch the trafic with a special eye to the school districts, the health nurse will check the physical needs of our younger generation, books are supplied without cost, and the best instruction possible is offered. All these factors are supplied for the care and education of children, but a major problem still remains to haunt mothers and fathers. That problem is clothing, and, believe it or not, it's a real stumbling block in many cases.

Take, for instance, the woman whose husband works only a few days a week, earning only a few dollars a day. Paying rent, gas, light, and feeding even three children is a nerve racking, penny stretching business. Kerosene is often substituted for electricity, coal stove for gas, smaller quarters are sought, and still there is great need. Under these circumstances how can clothing possibly be purchased?

And how about the man who earns around $15 a week, who must provide food and shelter for his wife and family? There are any number of men trying to do this. Where will they secure money for a new suit, for shoes for the youngsters, for warm coats, for blankets and bedding for the coming winter?

It seems to me that people not receiving relief face greater difficulties than these on the lists. Not that such dependent persons have luxury or even any large degree of comfort, but coal comes regularly, as do food tickets, thus relieving some of the suspense and worry of poverty.

Numerous agencies are making tremendous efforts to gather, repair, and distribute clothing, but the demand far exceeds the supply. Our files are jammed with requests for clothing, with particular emphasis, at present, upon the needy school child. Most little boys' toes are perpetually out of their shoes, their knees out of their stockings. Holes seem to sprout in the elbows, boys outgrow their coats, lose their caps. It's often a question of warmth as well as of neat appearance, this call for clothing.

If you have children's clothing of any serviceable kind, won't you let me supply you with the address of some needy child?

Here are a few samples of the numerous appeals we have.

"Dear Miss Brown: I am coming to you with the hope that you will be able to help me. My children are sorely in need of clothing for school. The girls need dresses and winter coats, size 8 and 10, and the boy needs a suit, size 7. My husband works only two or three days a week, and it is almost impossible for me to buy clothing for the youngsters. I will appreciate anything you are able to secure for me.—Mrs. J. K."

Mrs. K. lives on the near southwest side of the city.

Mrs. L. P. makes the following appeal:

"Dear Sally Joy Brown: I am asking you if you could help me to get some clothes for my three boys. My husband deserted us two years ago, and I am working to keep the family together and keep a home for the children, but I am utterly unable to provide for clothing with the little I make. My daughter, sixteen, works occasionally, but has never earned more than $3 a week. The boys are back in school, but need clothing badly, as does my daughter."

The P. family lives on the south side. The boys' ages are fifteen, thirteen, and eleven. The girl has only gingham dresses.

From Mrs. J. M.:

"I don't know what else to do but to ask your help. My husband doesn't make enough to buy clothing and, now that school time is here again, I have no clothing for my son. He must begin this year, and needs a coat and trousers in a 9 year old size, also stockings, size 8½, and blouses, size 9. Perhaps some one has some discarded men's shirts that I could make over for him."

Mrs. M. also has a small daughter, aged nine.

"Dear Miss Brown: I have three little boys whose clothes are simply threadbare. Their ages are nine, five, and three. I would appreciate any clothing you may be able to help me secure for them. My husband makes so little as a watchman, that it is impossible for me to purchase anything outside of pure necessities.

"Mrs. C. W."

PARIS SNAPSHOTS

- Dresses and coats that are going to be worn at the cocktail hour and onward far into the night will feature materials that are made of jet-like spangles or that have jet in the weave.
- Worth has new evening slippers with low, but exceedingly bright, heels. They come up high over the instep in front.
- It will be fashionable this winter to wear turquoise jewelry, and the slim platinum chain with three turquoise pendants hanging from it is a Lelong jewel feature. Turquoise studded buttons and earrings are back.
- Another jewel mode that you will want to remember is that for Forty-Niner nugget gold bracelets, clips, earrings, and enormous pins. And don't forget the Herz smoky crystal and topaz jewels, for they are tophole chic.
- Dresses with blouses that button down the back to the waistline are found in most of the big time Paris shows, and buttons are by way of being fancy. Gold jewel studded buttons, silver plus-sign buttons, and dollar size cloth buttons with silver rims are three smart varieties.

Centerpiece of White Bowl and Coral Is Lovely

THE ingenuity of woman manages to contrive some highly novel and artistically interesting centerpieces for the summer dining table. One of the most unusual of these, seen recently, was as simple as it was good looking. It consisted merely of a milky white Victorian glass bowl, the sides curling inward slightly at the top and edged in pink, and in the center of this bowl two branches of pink coral, standing erect and spreading their stumpy little arms like a miniature tree from Lilliput. Both the bowl and the coral can be bought in the chinaware department of a Chicago department store.

Parents Take Youth's Faults Too Seriously

"If only he [the father] would show the boy he has confidence that he will be a good man, I feel that it would help.

"I often think other parents have similar problems but do not broadcast them, so we see their boys only at their best and do not know how they also misbehave. This is a jumbled letter, but I feel upset."

First, I must reassure this mother by agreeing with the last thing she said—that "many other parents have similar problems, but do not broadcast them, so we only see their boys at their best." This is so true. If we could see behind the scenes in other families we'd learn that often all is not smooth sailing and that frequently those children who appear the best socially—with winning ways or "perfect manners" which fill the parents of more "natural" children with envy—present real problems of temperament or character to their parents. So when we think, "Nobody else seems to have the troubles that I have," we usually are greatly mistaken.

The letter quoted gives a clear picture of the story I hear so often about fathers and growing boys. This boy is struggling through his adolescence and outwardly it shows itself in typical ways—he hates routine, resents having tasks set for him, and is impatient of restrictions. He is conscious of his father's disappointment in him, and yet he cannot bring himself to behave so that he will merit his father's approval.

This is a difficult time for fathers and sons. What will accomplish most are the following four things: quiet, friendly talks; a real companionship between the son and his father or mother; great patience, and a parental display of faith and confidence in the boy's future as well as his present.

[Copyright: 1934: By The Chicago Tribune.]

We have a fully written booklet called "Understanding the Adolescent," which will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

House Coats Are Smart to Wear in One's Lazy Hours

FOR lazy hours of relaxation women are now wearing smart and extremely comfortable house coats. They are made of heavy white silk with broad revers as tailored as those of a man's dinner jacket and belted in place with a heavy silk cord. Pajamas or a heavy white slip may be worn with the coat.

Another lovely negligee is one made of a luscious angora crêpe with a neckline and sleeves trimmed with bands of shaved marabou feathers which give the appearance of fur.

Home Treatment For Keeping Skin Young

MERCOLIZED WAX is the one beauty aid you can afford because this single preparation embodies all the essentials of beauty that your skin needs. It cleanses, softens, bleaches, lubricates and protects. It is so simple to use, too. Just pat it on your skin each night as if it were an ordinary cold cream. That's all. Mercolized Wax seeps into your pores and dissolves grime and dust and all impurities. It absorbs the discolored surface skin in tiny, invisible particles, revealing the beautiful, soft, young skin that lies beneath. It clears away freckles, tan, oiliness, sunburn or any other blemishes. You use such a tiny bit of Mercolized Wax for each application that it proves an inexpensive beauty investment. Beauty cannot be taken for granted. It must be cared for regularly if you want to hold it through the years. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty of your skin.

POWDERED SAXOLITE dissolved in one-half pint witch hazel quickly reduces wrinkles and other age signs. It is a refreshing, stimulating astringent lotion. Use it daily. At all drug and department stores.

Whether to Keep Hair Color Nature Gave It or Change to Another Shade to Please Fancy Is Feminine Debate

Women Who Wish Tresses Back to Natural Must Seek Reconditioning.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

A GOOD many women are in a quandary at this moment over hair that has been dyed or bleached or somehow tinted out of its natural shade. They wonder whether to let it return to its natural shade or not. Something has to be done on account of the streaks of off colors which the head shows.

Whether to let it go back to its natural color or keep on with the bleaching and dyeing only you interested ones can decide. Personally I feel that certain economic demands, professional and personal, are the dictators on this hair tinting business. Consequently it is the individual's own business and hers only. While there is still any amount of hair coloring going on, I detect a back-to-natural trend. Women recognize that it isn't the hair color so much as the smart grooming of whatever color of hair one has that makes the head today. Even a mousy hair shade is privileged under up-to-date cutting, shampooing, waving, general hair styling and grooming to a place in the gallery of distinguished heads. One really doesn't have to dye or bleach hair to be noticed. But if other motives dictate, as suggested above, it is another matter.

If the tinted hair is streaked and discolored, as it often is after an outdoor summer period, or even after indoor life when it takes on several different shades, some form of treatment is necessary. I think it reckless folly for a woman inexperienced in this sort of thing to try to patch up her own hair coloring. A few women have acquired a certain skill at bleaching and dyeing their own hair, but most amateur jobs look the part. I would plead for professional treatment both in changing hair coloring and correcting streaks in hair. One simply cannot see her head from all angles. Besides, only experience, and years of it, teaches the proper handling of this intricate phase of hair work.

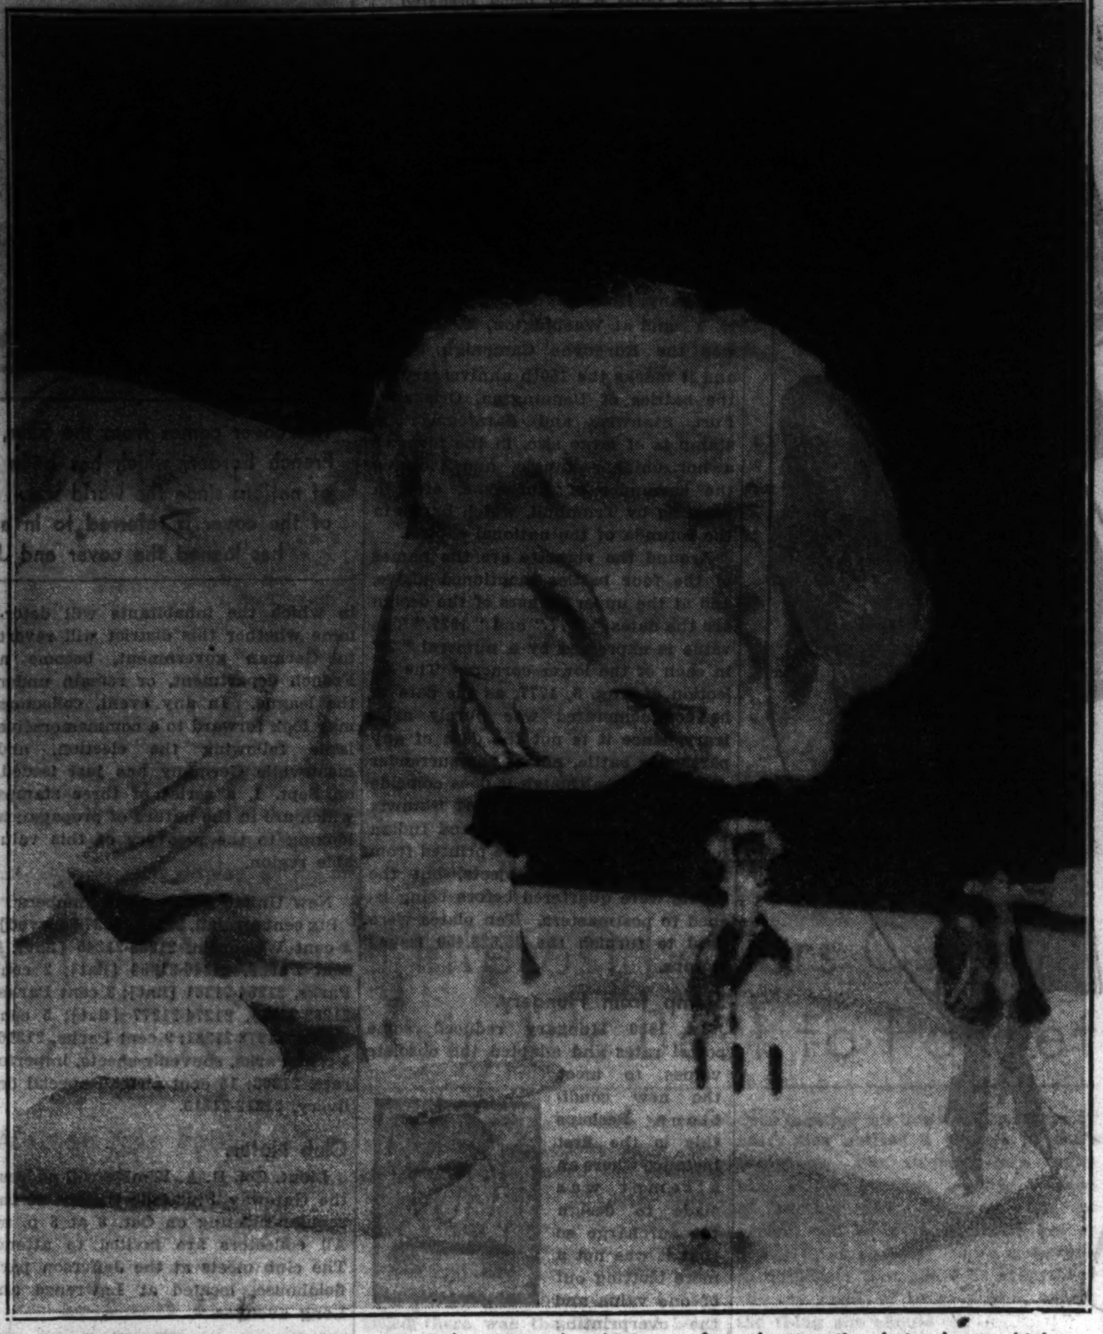
Oil treatments, which you may give yourself well enough, will eventually remove streaks. If one wants the hair back to natural coloring, again the oil treatments are recommended. But it takes quite a time. Most women become discouraged and give up before the wanted hair tone is restored.

Peroxide is sometimes used as a hair dye remover, but you have to know what was in the dye used on your head. Peroxide cannot be used over compound henna and metallic base dyes. Please do be frank with your operator on this score. For some peculiar reason certain women will withhold the proper information from the operator about the hair dyeing product used. It puts both the operator and your precious head of hair at a great disadvantage.

The particular reason for which I urge the professional operator is that he or she knows the especially prepared hair dye removers that are the most practical to use in correcting tinted hair faults and the most successful. In skilled hands the streaked and unevenly colored areas may be cleverly corrected. One treatment may suffice, two or three at the most, to even the coloring or tone it down.

To return hair to its natural color is something that only time and a new growth of hair will effect. No use expecting professionals to perform a magic return to nature for you. Oil treatments and frequent shampoos and daily brushing will help speed the happy day. There are rinses that may be used while time and the new growth of hair are performing their duties. These rinses subdue the artificial hair coloring in the meantime.

But all of these complications over hair that has been artificially colored should serve to persuade the young woman with no more than a fickle desire to change her natural shade of hair to leave it alone. Let her be fickle as she wants to be on her hair styling; that is, the cut, the wave, and the hairdress. Let her realize that she can be just as much noticed with a clever coiffure as if she suddenly turned blonde or Titian, and with a great deal less of a problem on her hands.



Beauty culture and expert care gave Toby Wing the shining, soft and attractive hair about which she is smiling in satisfaction. When milady desires to make a departure from the color of her hair, change it to something lighter or darker, and then, with another change of heart, decides to return to nature, the attention of efficient beauticians is best supplemented with home treatment.

New Hand-Knits for Fall Adopt Color Contrasts

BROWN, with either chartreuse or old gold for contrast, is a favorite color for handknits for fall. Next in line is dark green, set off by maize-gold or dusty beige. Bright reds have created quite a furor for two piece dresses, with cerise and flamingo leading the field.

Carving Sets in Stainless Steel Have Silver Trim

CARVING sets with good, stag horn handles and silver trim are always in good taste, and an aid in skilful carving. A State street store at this time has unheard-of values in two piece steak sets of fine stainless steel. In fact, most all knives for individual service as well as carving, not forgetting the kitchen cutlery ware, are now made of stainless steel.

A smart style of knife and fork has extremely long handles with short fork and blade. Though still in the ultra class, this ware is not expensive.

There are dainty sets for lighter meals, with handles of green, blue, red, white, coral, and mother-of-pearl. They would add the finishing touch to service for a smart and gayly appointed buffet supper.

Bird's Tail Motif Is New.

A bird's tail effect is imparted, by Paris designers, to some of the newest gowns. It is accomplished by folds of material flared near the back hem.

Window Box Lends Color to Home in Winter

WHEN the flower lover no longer can enjoy the pleasure of outdoor gardening, there is still a thrill in cultivating window gardens. It is quite smart these days to have glass shelves erected across windows [two or three to a window] with southern or western exposures. Upon these shelves, gaily colored pots of various shapes and sizes, filled with dwarf sanseveria, pendennis plants, tiny cacti and trailing ivy, produce a pleasing picture and, of course, no curtain mars this charming, modern effect.

There are folks who just naturally must have something to fuss over—so they pick on plants! One of the first things to remember is to avoid unsightly, weak, or sickly looking plants. Keep only healthy ones and the chances will be slight that insects will make indoor floral culture a care instead of a pleasure.

Plant Food and Judicious Watering Are Essential.

Turning the pots around from time to time, and nipping off faded leaves and ungainly branches, aid in keeping plants shapely. A little plant food added judiciously is beneficial. Use tepid water rather than too cold, as the latter is a shock to their growth. When cool nights, with frost in the air, are here again, remove plants from the window and place them out of danger. Moist air is essential to house plants, so it is advisable to have some kind of container with water at all times.

What would a window garden be without the garanium, which always has been associated with little gray homes, pottery, pewter, calico, and chintz covers and brass? When stocky and full of blooms, this old fashioned flower is most lovely, but never let it grow with naked, scraggly stems.

A list of flowering house plants that omits begonias is incomplete because there are so many excellent and widely different kinds from which to choose. The primrose is another interesting flowering plant for one's window garden and may, with care, be kept blooming for a year or two. Most plants respond to a fuss being made over them, and the primrose will thrive well in a sunny window, either south or west. It dislikes heat, and is reported to be gas resistant.

Bulbous Plants Require Little Care to Thrive.

Almost every one who goes in for house plants takes a fling at the bulbous varieties, which may be grown with but little trouble. The delicate white or yellow grandfloro narcissus, with its maximum bloom and delightful fragrance, adds a decidedly decorative touch to the home, provides weeks of pleasure, and is another means of introducing needed moisture into the air of the room.

The hybrid amaryllis is just about the last word for producing a gorgeous lily-like flower. It is easy to grow, usually one bulb to a pot. When the huge bud breaks, revealing four or more blooms six inches or more in diameter, varying in rich, solid colors and exquisite stripes, much color is added to an otherwise drab window garden. These bulbs will rebloom for years when given proper care.

This Paris Pattern Shows How to Make Afternoon Ensemble of Blouse and Skirt

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS. — [Special.] — The greatest Paris houses creating the dress that is for the glamorous hours of playtime in afternoon and evening this autumn give it a blouse and skirt. This Paris pattern brings that last and most beautiful fashion to you at home. Here it is: In the original model the blouse, just like this one, was made of white, fine net, and the skirt of black velveteen. The sleeves, with their unpressed plaits at the armholes and at the wrists, are the most exciting of dressy-frock sleeves, and they're beautiful in net. The soft fullness of the bodice front is another chic detail.

You can make your blouse and skirt in the same color if you prefer. You can make them of the same material, too, but Paris likes contrasting materials. If you make the blouse of dark red satin and the skirt of dark red wool the dress will be charming. You can make the blouse of lamé, any of the silks with gold or silver in their weave, and the skirt either of wool, satin, or velvet. It will be exceedingly dressy made of the lamé.

Brocaded silks are smart, and they would do nicely for the blouse. The smartest colors are deep slate blue, dark wine, or plum red, cedar brown, deep rich green, darkest amethyst, and black. You can make the entire dress of satin or of silk crêpe. You will find it new and beautiful as Paris designed it, with a net blouse in white or color and a velveteen skirt. The skirt is split a few inches at the hem, in the fashionable manner.

Net scarves, peeping out between the revers of a heavy fall coat, are chic, and I have had one patterned for you, which you can add around the neck of your blouse when you go out.

The back belt of the skirt may be buttoned on rhinestone buttons.

Squeezer for the Lemon Garnish Is Boon to Diners

WITH all the varieties of lemon squeezers on the market, it's just been recently that some one had the bright idea of designing a squeezer for the lemon slices that garnish fish, iced tea, and vegetables. These little metal squeezers, which may be seen in a Chicago store, aren't hard to stick into the slices, because that is done before the lemon is sliced. The metal sides that encircle the lemon slice facilitate grasping the fruit, and the juice runs down the metal pin instead of squirting into the eyes of one's neighbor.

Girls and Women Chief Factory Workers of Japan

SINCE the larger part of Japanese industry is silk and cotton, girls and women are chief factory workers of the Empire Islands. Most of them begin work at the age of twelve.

Dr. Patricia Virginia Henno, aged 23, of San Francisco, Cal., is one of the few women to qualify as veterinarians in the United States. She is a recent graduate of Washington State college.

Mrs. Edith B. Miller, aged 33, married and a mother, who has passed the necessary civil service examination, delivers mail in Montrose, Cal.

Miss Jennie Lee, 24 year old daughter of a miner, is the youngest member of the British parliament.

Weatherstripping Prevents Loss of Heat from Homes

ANY home improvement which saves in home upkeep costs is worth considering seriously. Such an improvement is the modern weatherstrip.

Heat loss in a house can be reduced from twenty to fifty per cent by weatherstripping windows and doors, and the quantity of fuel ne essary to keep the home warm can be reduced also.

Sometimes windows have grown old. In this case much of their natural moisture has dried out, and they fit loosely. Then, too, with damp and dry weather there is a certain unavoidable expansion and contraction of lumber which affects the standard allowance of space between sash and frame. Again, when a house settles, door frames and windows can become a little twisted, the doors and sash cease to fit well, and too great an air leakage occurs.

To all these ills to which windows and doors are heir, weatherstrips are a decided aid. There are many types obtainable, from the simple and inexpensive wood and felt type to the heavy metal types with their interlocking feature.

Weatherstripping won't do everything in the way of keeping out drafts from a house. One must be sure that the window sashes are well puttied. For a badly puttied or ill-fitting glass will let costly heat escape. Again, in a brick or masonry house, the home owner should make sure that the door and window frames are tight at the joint between the frame and the masonry. If there is trouble here, it can be cured by calking.

Velvet with Taffeta Back Gives Enchanting Whisper

"WHISPERING VELVET" is the most enchanting of fabrics to delight the market for years. It creates glamor in the guise of an evening gown or wrap, and is immeasurably feminine when tailored into a town tea suit. Its taffeta back intones a crisp whisper and causes the fabric to jut, flare, or drape according to the whim of the designer.

THIS WEEK IN THE GARDEN

Monday, Sept. 24.

It is a good time to transplant evergreens. Buy only balled and burlap covered stock, for such stock is shipped with some of the soil. Do not purchase trees that will soon grow out of bounds, especially when planting at the base of a building. Evergreens do not do well in the city where there are excessive quantities of gas and smoke.

Tuesday, Sept. 25.

Keep the flower garden cleaned up and in first class condition at all times; remove seed pods of annuals to prolong the season of bloom; stake and tie up all straggling growths that affect the appearance of the plants. Zinnias, marigolds, and other annuals look bad if the old blooms are left on the plants.

To keep Nymphaa (water lily) from closing their petals when cut, heat paraffin until it runs and drop some of it in and between the petals while the flower is open. The paraffin will cool and prevent the closing of the petals.

Wednesday, Sept. 26.

Seeds of annuals may be sown now for winter bloom. In lieu of sowing seed one may dig plants of petunias, phlox, and other kinds, cut them back, and pot them. After potting place the plant in a shady place for a few days to enable it to become established; then place it in the light. A few novelties for indoor use are interesting. Take the large seed of a matured alligator pear and insert three common wooden matches or toothpicks slightly into the base to act as a tripod to hold up the seed. Then place it in a common tumbler and fill with water so that half an inch of the seed is immerged. Soon a root will grow from the center of the base and later a strong shoot will appear from the top.

Thursday, Sept. 27.

Make a bottle garden for use in the house. Bottles holding ten gallons make a fascinating garden when planted with exotics, such as crotons, dracæna, club mosses, wandering jew, philodendron, and other plants of a similar nature. Use a soil composed of half peat muck, a little sand, and soil without organic matter. Have the soil moist to a point where it molds easily in the hand. Special tongs may be had for clasping the plants and inserting them through the neck of the bottle. Watering will consist of merely sprinkling. Care must be taken not to overwater or a fungus growth is likely to appear and foul the soil.

Friday, Sept. 28.

Gooseberries and currants root easily from cuttings. Make the cuttings a foot long, tie them in bundles according to the kind, and bury them in a well drained spot in the garden. In spring remove the cuttings, which will have callused, and line them out in rows. Of the cuttings may be lined out in the garden this fall in a suitable situation and all should root. This is an excellent method to increase the stock.

Saturday, Sept. 29.

Many perennials will root from cuttings. Such things as rock cress, violas, pinks, snow-in-summer, armeria, or thrift and many others may be taken, the cuttings placed in rows in the coldframe, protected by boards and straw or other materials, and all will be well rooted by spring.

Make a plan of the bulb garden and get the order in immediately. Plant the madonna lily now and the narcissi as soon as they are offered for sale. Small groups of bulbous plants in the foreground of the perennial border offer many possibilities for spring effects. Crocus planted for a natural effect in the lawn is also effective.

Paris Styles Show Effects of Inflation

Every Mode Is Carried to Extremes; Bouffants Flare Extravagantly.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Conservative fashions got a wallop in the late Paris style shows. The dressmakers came out strong for inflation of whatever fashion trends they backed with few exceptions. There is the narrow sheath silhouette group, with its attendant program of split skirts, high necklines, and short, exaggerated coats. All these things are inflated to their final extreme limit. The dress skirt is made narrower, its split hem more split, and the short coat or tunic that goes with it fuller and more swagger than ever. When it gets into evening clothes this silhouette breaks out around the feet in short but excessive fullness, the skirt is split to the knees, and in some houses the 1912 pegtop hip drapery is included.

Then there is the other outstanding silhouette with a fitted bodice and a full skirt, and this, too, is inflated and exaggerated. Redingotes with skirts that are full and flaring and bodies above the hips fitted within an inch of their capacity are the coats of this class.

Daytime Frocks Seek Both Highs and Lows.

Day dress necklines are either extremely high or cut so low that they remind you of evening dresses. Sleeves are fitted like your own skin, or they are big as balloons.

Hats, as you have been informed, have crown inflation. Shoes, for the first time since the war, are given high tops and are laced up the outside.

Flowers in bouquets that would fill a good sized vase are placed at the waistlines of evening frocks by Mainbocher. Ostrich feathers make exceedingly flaring hems and deep hems on the sheath-like evening frocks of Molyneux.

Wools and velvets and even lamés have their hair grown to a length of half an inch and look furry, to say the least. Velvets from Bianchini, with a pile as rich as carpet, are in for the first time in many years. In short, everything that is new and exciting in Paris winter styles has been inflated in one way or another.

Couturieres Insist on Bosom-y Effects.

The woman who is in style à la Paris this coming season is going to have a bosomy effect. The big dressmakers like Schiaparelli, Augustabernard, and Vionnet have so cut and draped their dresses as to make you look like Diana even if nature didn't cut you on this plan. Your shoulders are going to be made sloping and female, not athletic and boyish. Your hipline, if you listen to the 1912 draped hip group, will be increased a lot. If you follow the rest your hipline will remain modern, but your skirt will have the daring-and-demure allure of the lost epoch of 1900 to 1912 or that of 1860.

Glamor, opulence, and the gleam of gold and silver and white fox will be essential to the formal evening mode. The two figures at the left show the general aspect of the woman in evening clothes this season. Schiaparelli designed the coat and the frock.

The cloak is made of parma violet and silver lamé brocade, and it is garnished with eight skins of purest white fox worked into luxurious bands around the cape top and the coat body. The cape has Schiaparelli's famous parachute flyaway drop at the back—already shown in these pages. The hem comes to a trailing point at the back, and the whole effect is one of incredible richness and beauty.

Schiaparelli's Draw Strings Create a Sensation.

This evening dress has Schiaparelli's draw string skirt, which has been a sensation of the openings in Paris. It explains itself in the drawing. Made of Bianchini's deep pile velvet in parma violet, it swoops out from the draw string waistline at the back in the most graceful curves until it reaches the floor and trails a bit. The front is straight and rises in a curve at the waistline. The blouse is made of violet, white, and silver plaid silk, with a band of violet velvet shirred into the bosom in front.

Second from the right is the inflated redingote, as done by Lucien Lelong. This coat is made of black long haired woolen and its hem measures about five yards, while at the waistline and above it is fitted; with no "maybe" about it. The cape collar is made of gray Persian lamb and is draped forward. The flaring cuffs on the sleeves also are Persian lamb. With this coat goes the dress in the background, center, made of silk cloky and with a bright red and gold band trimming the high neck and sleeve cuffs and make the belt. The skirt is front-flared with box plaits.

At the right is the Worth girl, 1934-'35, fall and winter. Observe the high topped boots and the Russian tunic blouse to the dress—the toppling turban of navy blue Persian lamb and the big pillow muff. All are important in making this an exceedingly smart ensemble in the new manner. The dress is made of wool with cellophane in the weave, and the belt and tunic hem are made of shiny cellophane studded braid.

GOWNS TO MAKE A LADY RADIANT

SOLOMON'S TEMPLE.

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents each, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn or Tribune Tower.

By Nancy Cabot.

"SOLOMON'S TEMPLE" ranks among the quilt blocks which are considered ancient. It was first pieced in 1781, and the block contained some thirty odd pieces of material; gingham, calico, chintzes, plaids, checks, all-over designs, and others. Fortunately, however, the completed square measures 24 inches and only six blocks are required. These are alternated with six plain blocks. The present day quilter may use all plain colors, or combine them with figured prints.

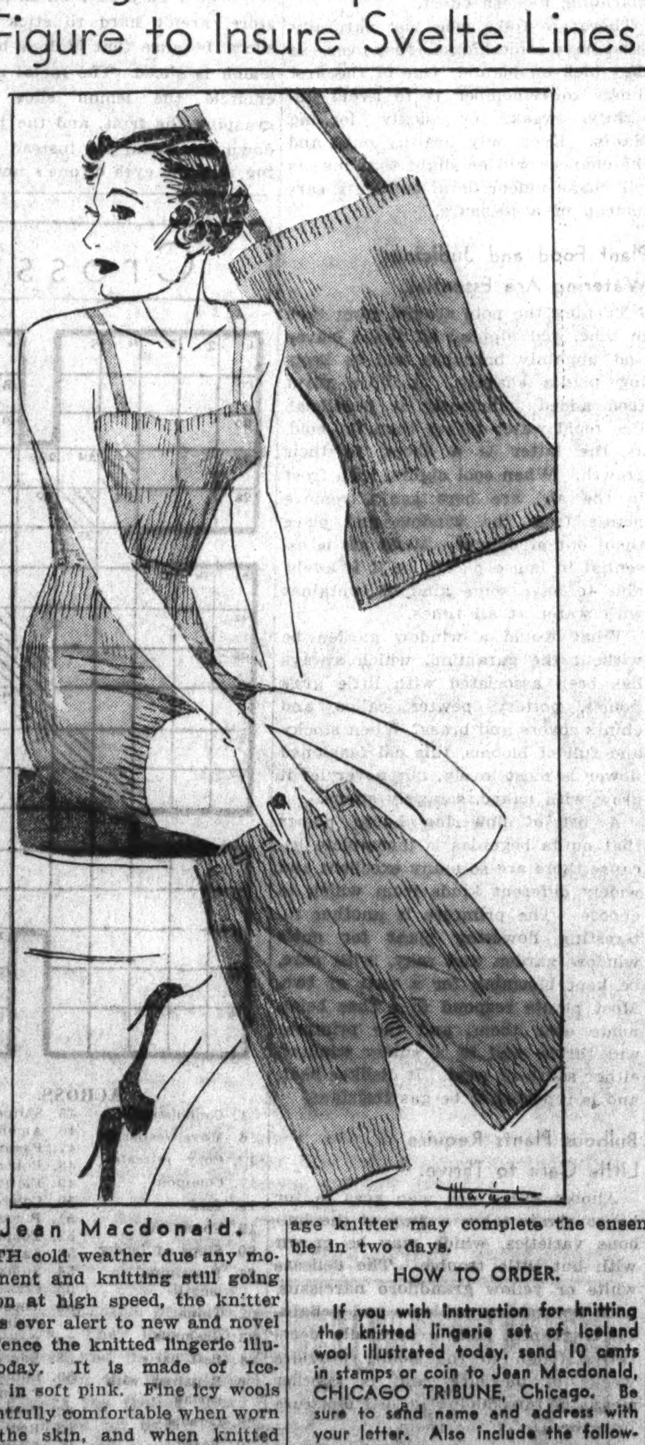
Inspect Basement Walls and Walks Before Snow Fall

BEFORE the snow falls, make sure that there are no small cracks in sidewalks or in the basement walls. The coming winter weather will make those cracks yawn badly before many months have past. It won't be necessary to carry home a sack of concrete, either, to do these little patching jobs. For you can get concrete patcher at a local hardware store, lumber yard, or supply house. And all you need to do is to spread on this patcher with a putty knife. It comes in powder form and can be mixed with a little water in a pie tin. This is a great deal easier than laying a new sidewalk or building a new basement foundation wall, which may have to be done some day if those cracks grow too large and menacing.

Crystal Cornucopias in Gold Frame Add Elegance

WINTER dinner tables demand gleaming crystal for elegance. Among the new centerpieces in the autumn collections of home decore is a gold frame supporting eleven small crystal cornucopias with fluted edges. Filled with flowers, artificial or natural, this can be a colorful, a dainty, or a stately note on the winter dinner table, according to the type of bloom chosen.

Knit Lingerie Disciplines the Figure to Insure Svelte Lines



By Jean Macdonald.

WITH cold weather due any moment and knitting still going on at high speed, the knitter is ever alert to new and novel ideas. Hence the knitted lingerie illustrated today. It is made of Iceland wool in soft pink. Fine icy wools are delightfully comfortable when worn next to the skin, and when knitted in a stockinette stitch they are pleasantly porous and not uncomfortable in heated rooms, while they afford perfect comfort out of doors.

If you are interested in something which serves as a foundation for that svelte figure, these are not to be overlooked. Such knitted panties and vests fit like a glove. They require only three balls of yarn for a complete set. So simple are they that an average knitter may complete the ensemble in two days.

HOW TO ORDER.

If you wish instruction for knitting the knitted lingerie set of Iceland wool illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Jean Macdonald, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago. Be sure to send name and address with your letter. Also include the following measurements:

THE STAMP COLLECTOR

By Richard McP. Cabeen.

The third booklet of the commemorative series is now being prepared by Mr. Cabeen and the title will be announced in this space next Sunday. Booklets now on sale are listed at the end of this column. The editor will be glad to answer questions about stamps except those relating to values, when a stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies the query.

This cover comes from the Saar, that portion of Germany, on the French border, which has been under the control of the league of nations since the world war. The insert in the lower left corner of the cover is referred to in an adjoining article. John Hopley has loaned the cover and J. Karl Voigt the new stamps.

ON the same day on which the Vermont sesquicentennial stamp was issued another commemorative stamp was placed on sale in Albany, Rome, Syracuse, and Utica, N. Y., and at Washington, D. C. This was the Burgoyne Campaign issue, and it marks the 150th anniversary of the battles of Bennington, Oriskany, Fort Stanwix, and Saratoga. The stamp is of large size, in the form of a horizontal rectangle, and pictures the surrender of Burgoyne, after a painting by Trumbull, which hangs in the rotunda of the national capitol.

Around the vignette are the names of the four battles mentioned above, and at the upper corners of the design are the dates "1777" and "1927." The value is expressed by a numeral "2" in each of the lower corners. The selection of Aug. 3, 1777, as the date to be commemorated was purely arbitrary, since it is not the date of any particular battle, nor of the surrender of Burgoyne, although it does coincide with the investment of Fort Stanwix by St. Leger and his Tory and Indian forces. The stamps were printed from flat plates of 200 subjects, but the sheets were quartered before being issued to postmasters. Ten plates were used to furnish the 25,628,450 issued stamps.

Stamp from Hungary.

In 1930 Hungary reduced some postal rates and adapted the obsolete values to meet the new conditions. Perhaps this is the first instance where an attempt was made to design the surcharge so that it was not a mere blotting out of one value and the overprinting of another. In the example shown an 8 filler magenta stamp is changed to a 6 filler stamp without entirely destroying the character of the original.

The Saar.

Collectors have seen what is perhaps the last issue of stamps for the Saar region. The 15 year period during which the league of nations undertook to administer the government of this bit of Europe will come to an end in January, 1935, following an election in which the inhabitants will determine whether this district will revert to German government, become a French department, or remain under the league. In any event, collectors may look forward to a commemorative issue following the election, and meanwhile Germany has just issued, on Sept. 1, a series of three stamps which are in the nature of propaganda looking to the recovery of this valuable region.

Knowledge of Table Etiquet Assures the Proper Poise

Questions pertaining to etiquet and correct social behavior are invited. For a personal reply inclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope with your request. Address mail to Helen Bartlett, Etiquet Editor, Chicago Tribune.

By Helen Bartlett.

AFTER having discussed correct table setting and table service in our last two articles in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE, it is not such a far cry to the subject of table manners and the correct usage of the silver we arranged together on our imaginary table two weeks ago. Only a definite knowledge of table manners gives one unquestioned grace and poise.

If you are invited out to dinner and are puzzled about which fork to use, just remember that silver is laid on the table in the order in which it is to be used: Forks to the left of the service plate and knives and spoons to the right, except the little cocktail fork, which is placed at the extreme right beyond the soup spoon. If, knowing this, you are still bewildered, you had better sit back and wait to see what your neighbors do.

Small Spoon Is Used for the Fruit Cocktail.

For a fruit cocktail a small spoon is used, the spoon farthest to the right of the plate. For a fish cocktail the tiny cocktail fork is the proper implement. Tomato juice or fruit juice cocktails are simply sipped from the glass. No silverware is necessary. Soup, when served, should be sipped noiselessly from the side of the soup spoon and spooned away from, and not toward, the diner. If bouillon is served in a cup with handles, it may be drunk directly from the cup. Crackers are not broken into the soup. They are nibbled as an accompaniment.

After soup there likely will be relishes. Olives and pickles are taken from the serving dish with the fingers. To have a spoon or tiny fork accompany the olives is now considered obsolete. Olives are also conveyed to the mouth with the fingers. They are never placed wholly in the mouth, but simply nibbled and the pits returned to the plate with the fingers.

Bread Slice Is Broken Into Pieces Before Buttering.

If fish is served as an entrée, or preliminary to the main course, a fish fork, which will be found farthest to the left, is used. If lemon is served with the fish it is taken between the thumb and forefinger and a few drops squeezed over the fish. The rind is then laid on the plate.

When eating bread one should remember that it should be broken up into small pieces, that it should never be held flat on the elevated palm while being buttered. It is important to know that bones and pits are removed from the mouth with the fingers as gracefully as possible and deposited on the plate. Under no circumstance is food, that has once been placed in the mouth, removed. It is needless to tell you that it isn't good form to refuse certain foods that are offered. Take a small portion and attempt, at least, to eat it. Never, under any circumstances, comment slurringly about the food or express a dislike for anything, even spinach!

Still other things that are good to know, and knowing which will give you more confidence in yourself, are that corn on the cob should be eliminated entirely from the formal dinner menu. If it is served at home, or in a restaurant, it should be attacked with as little ferocity as possible without champing down the entire row to the point of exhaustion. Asparagus should be manipulated with a fork. A baked potato may be broken in half with the fingers and the interior removed with a fork.

Sherbets Require Either Spoon or Dinner Fork.

When sherbet or ice accompany the main course, either a spoon or the dinner fork is used to eat them. If it is a spoon, then this must be rested in the sherbet cup when not in use, because there is no saucer under it and the spoon cannot be placed on the tablecloth. [This is the one exception in which the spoon is left in the cup.] Because many people find this arrangement objectionable they prefer to use their dinner fork.

Dessert silver is brought in with the dessert, having been arranged in the kitchen previously, so there is practically no opportunity to select the wrong piece.

Accidents at Table Are Best Ignored Composedly.

It is inevitable that accidents will happen at the table even to people with perfect poise. Minor ones are ignored composedly. If you drop a piece of silver, or a napkin, or anything else from the table, do not pick it up. Ask politely for another. If you spill a glass of water, offer murmured and brief apologies. Don't become flustered.

China Depicts Evolution of U. S. Railroad

By Mabel Bryant.

IN the Travel and Transport building at A Century of Progress the evolution of one of the oldest railroads in the United States is depicted on a set of fine Centenary chinaware. This railroad's lines are located mainly in the eastern states, which teem with lore of civil war days.

Wending his way to the dining car just outside the exhibition building, one is greeted cordially by a charming and alert little miss who, in her frills, curls, and furbelows, impersonates the illustrious Mary Prickerville. This young hostess tells the story woven into the historic blue chinaware which graces the tables of the railroad's twenty luxurious dining cars, and on which well cooked food is served to guests.

Serving Platters Portray Pennsylvania Scenery.

A few of the museum pieces on display were made in 1827 by Enoch Wood of Burselem, England, one of the leading manufacturers of Staffordshire china, whose pottery works commemorated the establishment of this famous railroad at that time.

The blue dishes on display are a marked improvement over those of a hundred years ago. For with so much background, the artists have given special attention to the representation of outstanding scenic points of the railroad's history in a charming manner.

Various borders outline in historical sequence the evolution of the railroad and its own century of progress. The large serving platters depict one of the most beautiful scenes of southern Pennsylvania—the juncture of Indian creek with the historic Youghiogheny. The pageant of motive power is carried out even to the tiny blue butter chips that show a horse drawn car such as was used in 1850.

Deep Blue Color, Translucent Quality Delight Collectors.

Viewing this exhibition, one gets the urge to hop a train and be off to these interesting and delightful places portrayed so beautifully on the chinaware; to ride the road which winds its way along the scenes of Harper's Ferry, where the three states of Maryland, Virginia, and West Virginia come together, and the Shenandoah and Potomac rivers meet.

Those desiring a souvenir may have their choice of any of the many pieces available, done up neatly in cartons. Collectors of fine old chinaware will be delighted with the deep blue color and translucent quality of this American made centenary china.

The evolution of the steam engine from the puny little carrier of a hundred years ago to the giant of today is depicted in the border of this dinner plate. It's the Centenary china brought out by a famous American railroad to commemorate its century of progress, on display at the World's Fair. The drawing in the center shows Harper's Ferry.

Gay Waxed Paper Will Tempt Invalid or Cheer School Child

"WHICH needs appetite appeal the most, a convalescent's tray or the lunch box of a school child?" wondered a manufacturer of waxed paper. The answer was lacking, so two new waxed papers were designed and packaged.

One variety, decorated with a dainty all-over design of colored flowers, is designed to line the tray that goes to the sickroom and keep the patient's bread from staling. The other paper bears a gala assortment of small bright animals and figures loved by children and goes to school in the youngster's lunch box. Both would be right at home in a picnic basket.

When Waning Interest Lowers Curtain on Love Affair, It's Best to Forget

By Doris Blake.

OSCAR WILDE let one of his male characters make a rather pertinent criticism of women, a criticism so poignant that all womankind should take heed. "The one charm of the past is that it is the past. But women never know when the curtain has fallen. They always want a sixth act, and as soon as the interest of the play is entirely over they propose to continue it."

This quotation is an important one not only because of the fault it mirrors but because it indicates that the masculine viewpoint does not coincide or sympathize with refusing to let the curtain fall. There may be a general significance intended, but I read into it only the relationship between man and woman, coupled with the feminine inability to let the dead past bury its dead.

In other words, it is a plea for less sentimentalism. Women need to adopt a more fatalistic attitude toward their love affairs—not enough to deprive them of their dreams and ideals but enough to put themselves on a par with the men in their "love 'em and leave 'em" practices. They place themselves at a terrible disadvantage when they make their love affairs a matter of life and death.

Hearts Don't Break as Youth Will Believe.

Hearts are not so easily broken as youth would pretend to believe. In their attempt to dramatize their lives they enlarge upon their heartaches. They turn on the tears at the slightest... lies in the fact that women still cling tenaciously to the outdated notion that every man with whom they have four or five dates is THE man. There might have been more basis for that belief many generations ago. Our pioneer mothers hadn't the selection of husbands that is available today. They had to use all the artifices at hand to hold the few eligible ones, and, believe me, those lures had to be handled delicately in those days. If they failed there was the horror of being an old maid, which was a calamity. At twenty-five, if you weren't yet wed, people began to look upon you with pitying glances and to whisper behind your back.

Today, with transportation so simple, with all kinds of social groups on every hand, with women so active in the business world, there is no longer any occasion for the fear of not being able to find a man. But the fear does exist, if we can judge by the way our young girls are flinging themselves at eligible men, hanging on for dear life when they seem to be interested. If they only knew, or realized, their very efforts to keep the men are fatal to their ambitions.

Women have acquired a certain amount of independence, it's true, but that independence hasn't succeeded in giving them the indifference they need to cope with the masculine attitude. It only serves to make them a bit bolder in their lovemaking and in their demands. In the transition subtlety has lost caste. Women have lost the art of being demure and feminine. Such tactics are too slow and uncertain for the modern woman. She must have action, decisive action, even at the risk of losing the companion.

Aggressive Tactics Don't Work Any More.

Love isn't a game which allows the women to club their prospective mates into insensibility and drag them home. That may work all right in the Amazon, but our own civilization doesn't countenance such methods. Certainly the men are beginning to resent the encroachments upon their liberties.

But, to get back to my original theme, it concerns those women who refuse to release their men gracefully after the play has ended.

Let's make a sample case of Mary and Bill, both in their 'teens. They've gone together for five months. Recently Mary has noticed a change in Bill's demeanor. She suspects he's beginning to lose interest, possibly because of another girl. At any rate, he doesn't call so often, and he's not as attentive as he was. She's desperate, so desperate that she does everything she can think of to keep him, except the thing she should do.

First of all, she starts with accusations. "You don't love me any more," she wails. She harps on that fact so often that Bill no longer enjoys her company. She's too busy pitying herself to help him have a good time or to show him her more cheerful, interesting side. She talks about it so much, in fact, that the powers of suggestion begin to function. Bill begins to wonder if he does care enough to continue.

So he attempts a retreat, intending to make it gradual enough that the girl won't mind too much. Sensing his intention, Mary only bursts into worse tantrums. She becomes irritable, temperamental, sulky. Quarrels are bitter and frequent. Such scenes and dramatics are much too embarrassing for masculine temperaments, and Bill makes an exit.

Persistence Doesn't Win the Reconciliation.

But Mary makes still another mistake. She writes letters. She calls his home and pleads with him to come back to her. She makes herself a nuisance by threatening suicide and such things if he doesn't come. Her attitude only makes Bill more certain that he's well out of a bad mess. He's darned glad he didn't marry a girl like that, and no inducements will effect a reconciliation. The curtain is down as far as he is concerned.

I hope the errors are obvious. I know it's a lot easier to be critical of some one else's conduct than to judge your own from an impartial viewpoint. In the first place, Mary made the mistake of thinking Bill was the only man in the world. She felt that without him life would be empty and useless. On the contrary, those dates during the 'teen ages ought to serve mainly as a standard for comparison. They give youth a chance to look about a bit to see what there is in the way of companionship.

In Mary's case a vastly different campaign was in order. A little indifference, punctuated with a few minor flirtations, might have saved the day. Instead of making herself more interesting and more attractive, as she might have done, and keeping the man guessing with occasional hints about beginning to find the relationship rather dull and boring, she muffed her chances for regaining a waning interest.

Anticipating his desire to break off, she should have intimated that she, too, would appreciate new interests. That might have lessened Bill's anxiety to get away. Or, learning that he wasn't as important as he thought he was, he might have hung around just to impress her with his attractions.

Never Try to Raise the Fallen Curtain.

That brings us to the final curtain which Mary tries so valiantly, although foolishly, to stave off. I know of nothing more designed to make a fool of a woman than pleading with a man to return to her. Never, to my knowledge, have such methods proved satisfactory. I don't mean that the man never comes back, for he sometimes does out of pity; but a reunion under those conditions can never be a happy one. The women hold it against the men that the return was not voluntary, that it came as the result of considerable pressure. Their pride suffers. They lose confidence in themselves and in their attraction for men. On the masculine side there is always the feeling that the woman has taken an unfair advantage. Affection is given grudgingly, if at all. Reconciliation can never be complete.

And so I say, with Oscar Wilde, when the curtain drops let it stay. There is nothing quite so dead as a love which dies a natural death. Busy yourself with setting the stage for another play, and still another, without seeking to prolong the agony of the first.

By Ellen Bruce.

CROCHET doilies, mats, and table runners have been a boon to housewives not only as laundry savers but as a change for table settings. The well known pineapple pattern has been incorporated in the mat illustrated today. This long forgotten design was revived when crochet table decorations recently returned to favor.

A wide range of colors is available for table mats of this pattern, which may be made in cottons, linens, and mercerized threads. Anything from the finest tatting weight to materials of almost cable cord thickness can be used.

The size of the mat depends, naturally, upon the thickness of the thread, the size of the crochet hook used, and the looseness or tightness of the work of an individual. Small pieces such as these are easily carried in a small bag and may be worked in idle moments away from home.

If you wish instructions for crocheting the table mat in the Pineapple Pattern illustrated today, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to Ellen Bruce, Chicago Tribune; or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street or Tribune Tower.

3464—Girl's dress. Sizes 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅞ yards of 39 inch material, with ¼ yard of 35 inch contrasting material.

3127—Woman's and miss' dress. Sizes 14, 16, and 18 years and 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 16 requires 3¾ yards of 35 inch material, with ⅝ yard of 39 inch contrasting.

Simplicity Is Outstanding in Daytime Frocks

Small Collars and Lovely Ties Trim Two Models Versatilely Practical.

By Clotilde.

YOUNG girls are much interested in their clothes, and like pretty things. The adorable little dress made by pattern No. 3464 will certainly appeal. The waist has raglan sleeves, with the slight fulness at the wrists gathered into fitted bands. There is also included a pattern for short sleeves, but the full length ones seem more suitable for school wear at this time of year.

The waist buttons up the front to the normal neckline, and may be finished with a narrow bias binding or facing. Separate Peter Pan collars of starched, white linen or piqué are made, and are easily basted in place. A bow of ribbon finishes the neck prettily.

Skirt Is Wider Toward Bottom to Assure Grace.

The little skirt is in two parts, widening toward the bottom enough to be graceful, and the bottom of the skirt should be hemmed. Waist and skirt are joined under a removable belt. A novelty angora woolen in red tones, with navy blue velvet ribbon for the bow tie, will m[a]ke an attractive dress.

Pattern No. 3127 is for a youthful looking and jaunty model, and any one who makes a dress by this pattern will wear it time and time again. It's smart, easy to slip on and off, and just right for general daytime wear. The skirt is in two sections, with the seams at the sides. An inverted plait is set in at the center front, and this allows freedom of movement when walking.

Waist Is Slashed and Bound for Practicality.

The waist is slashed down from the neck at the center front, and the edges bound. A pretty collar of the dress material finishes the neck, and a long tie is knotted at the top. The long sleeves are made to fit easily, and finished at the wrists with turned back cuffs. It's an especially easy dress to make, and the chart that comes with the pattern simplifies every detail.

A plaided woolen in yellow and brown tones made the original dress, and the bow tie was of brown taffeta, the belt of brown suede. For more dressy occasions, black satin crêpe with a white bengaline silk tie would be smart.

Incinerator Is Also Used for Heating Water

Simultaneous Operations Are Obtained Through Double Duty Units.

ONE can now burn garbage and heat the domestic hot water supply simultaneously! For there are double duty units available which are combinations of water heaters and incinerators.

This new unit is small. You can install it in your basement or your kitchen. It is conveniently equipped with a flat top on which to heat water.

Garbage Is Placed in Basket-Shaped Container.

In a basket shaped cast iron receptacle the wrapped garbage is placed. Then, surrounding the basket on all sides, the hot gases and the radiant heat of the coal fire below come in close contact with the garbage, completely consuming it without odor.

The special construction of the garbage compartment prevents smothering or killing of the fire in the heater.

Small Sized Fuels May Be Used for the Firing.

It is possible to burn small size fuels because of the design of the shaking grates. If the heater is in the kitchen it may be painted to conform to the prevailing color scheme. The same holds true in the basement. Heating dealers will make the necessary piping connections with the water supply system.

Women Exceed Men in the Population of Germany

THE present excess of females over males in Germany ranges around 1,900,000 and is found almost exclusively in the cities. The excess is largest in Berlin, namely, 1,169 females to 1,000 males. In rural communities the proportion is 1,002 females to 1,000 males, and in many small communities a considerable excess of males may be found.

Walls Must Be Mended Before Winter Comes

Systematic Inspection Now Prevents Cracks, Fissures, Leaking Gutters.

By Louise Bargelt.

LET'S look to our foundation walls, our exterior walls. Let's make sure that they are in condition to withstand the weather ravages of the next seven months. A systematic, routine inspection at this time of year may save some acute trouble a little later.

We may have been aware of impending leaks and breaks and know just where to look to see what needs to be done. Our basement may have been unpleasantly damp last spring when the fires dropped low. We may be unhappily conscious of leaking gutters and downspouts or of cracks between walls and sills when the high winds blow.

But even if we do not have reason to suspect anything radically or even slightly wrong, any house deserves that measure of precaution contained in a brief investigation of its exterior by an experienced workman; a man whose knowledge of building will enable him to check up on defects and troubles before they really land plumb on us and cause us a lot of grief.

Extremes of Weather Enlarge Cracks.

First there are the foundation walls. Nothing is more important than this base of the house the very foundation on which it rests; the support, in fact, of the whole family.

Examine these walls carefully to discover if any cracks or fissures are appearing. The action of the weather, extremes of cold and heat, will enlarge these openings. Once sleet and rain and melting snow seep in through such cracks, mortar joints will disintegrate, cellars become damp and unhealthy, and in time even the walls themselves will be so weakened that they will constitute a real menace to the dwelling they support.

It is a simple matter to repair minor cracks and tiny spots where the mortar has broken loose. A handy man around town or around the house can do this type of work. But if the cracks are serious and there is evidence of bad crumbling it is wise to call in an expert to give some real first aid to the parts affected.

Once the foundations have been inspected, the exterior walls come next.

Where the house is of frame, the owners may have noticed that a considerable amount of cold air comes in through the walls. The walls may not admit water, but cracks between clapboards and along edges of ornamental trim and other joints may have developed from house settlement or other causes. If these cracks are located and closed, inside chilly drafts will be lessened.

Air Circulation Inside Walls Source of Heat Loss.

Again the walls of a house may be perfectly tight, but there is a heavy heat loss through constant air circulation inside the walls themselves. The open ends of these wall spaces can be closed at the bottom and top—preferably with bricks and mortar and concrete—for fire safety. Such a simple method also gives added fire protection to a house in case the blaze starts in the basement. If these ends are closed up, flames cannot be sucked in and upward through the walls.

There are other and more thorough ways of improving walls that are light or old. They can be strengthened by a new overcoat of wood or concrete or brick—or of stone—or they can be filled with a rock mineral product—a form of insulation and renovation well worth considering if one is planning any home modernization.

A reasonable and periodical inspection of a stucco house should also be made. If cracks are developing in a stucco wall, their size will determine what should be done about them. Where they are fine, hair cracks, the exterior may look worse after they have been patched. So unless one is ready to paint the stucco the patching process may be postponed for a time.

If Stucco Breaks, Lath Should Be Examined.

However, if the cracks are large enough to admit moisture they should be repaired before winter comes on. Matters won't be helped by water freezing in the wall. Besides, cracks enlarge under the action of weather and other causes, and serious impairment of the entire house structure can result.

Should stucco be bulging and breaking, the lath should be examined for rust and disintegration. If they are present the stucco will have to be torn off and replaced over new metal lath, or a new coat of stucco and lath must be applied over the old surface. This latter method has the advantage of giving the house an added warmth. If one engages a reliable contractor who applies good portland cement stucco according to recognized standards, the stucco will prove satisfactory and enduring.

Still other treatments for an ageing stucco wall are the application of a clear or colored waterproofing compound and painting with an oil paint or a cold water wash. If the wall is just a little soiled from dust and dirt it can be washed with a hose and water and brushed carefully afterwards with a fiber brush. If it is badly soiled a solution of one part muriatic acid to six parts water may be applied with a broom. The walls should then be rinsed with cold water. Afterwards, to remove every trace of the acid, the surface should be washed again with diluted ammonia—one quart of ammonia to four gallons of water.

This same muriatic wash may be applied to the walls of a brick house which are showing signs of efflorescence. First, however, try removing this visible accumulation of crystaline deposits called efflorescence with a stiff brush—fiber or wire.

Loose Mortar Often Cause of Efflorescence.

Since these deposits are the result of moisture absorption it is well to locate the cause of this absorption. Look to the mortar joints and see if they are firmly filled with mortar. Inspect and repair all flashings, close the joints around window frames with a calking compound, examine the chimney to see if it is leaking. When the latter condition exists, wet places can develop on the inside walls. Make sure there is no leak at the top of the wall, where it meets the roof.

Where a masonry house has been built for some years and "settlement" is not the cause of any cracks in its surface, immediate repair of the cracks should be made by raking out the mortar along them and replacing it with new mortar.

As was mentioned earlier in the article, a new overcoating for a house will add greatly to its appearance and warmth. An interesting type of man-made stone veneer overcoating for any type of home, brick or stucco or frame, is shown in today's picture of a small doorway.

Stone Veneer Durable, Handsome, Inexpensive.

Since the beginnings of history man has built of stone. Recent generations, however, have looked upon stone as a luxurious, costly material.

This stone veneer now available to the home owner who is considering a new surfacing for his house is a close approach to the perfection of natural, age old stone. Into its manufacture have gone such sturdy, fireproof materials as portland cement, ground quartz, metallic hardeners, pure mineral colors and waterproofers. The resulting material is a blend of soft, rich colors; a material, moreover, which is rendered hard and impervious to the elements by high pressure application and membrane curing.

Because it is light in weight it requires no special foundations or footings to carry it, nor any special door and window casings. It is cast over the existing wall, renewing it, beautifying it, and rendering it highly fireproof. And due to its various textures and facings and the wide range of colors in which it is manufactured, it is a veneer which adapts itself to different architectural styles.

For suggestions on modernizing your below-stairs spaces, send for a new booklet by Louise Bargelt, "A New Deal for the Old Basement." It is 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Tribune Public Service Offices, 1 South Dearborn street, Tribune Tower lobby, and Hall of Science, A Century of Progress. SALVAGING LOST SPACE

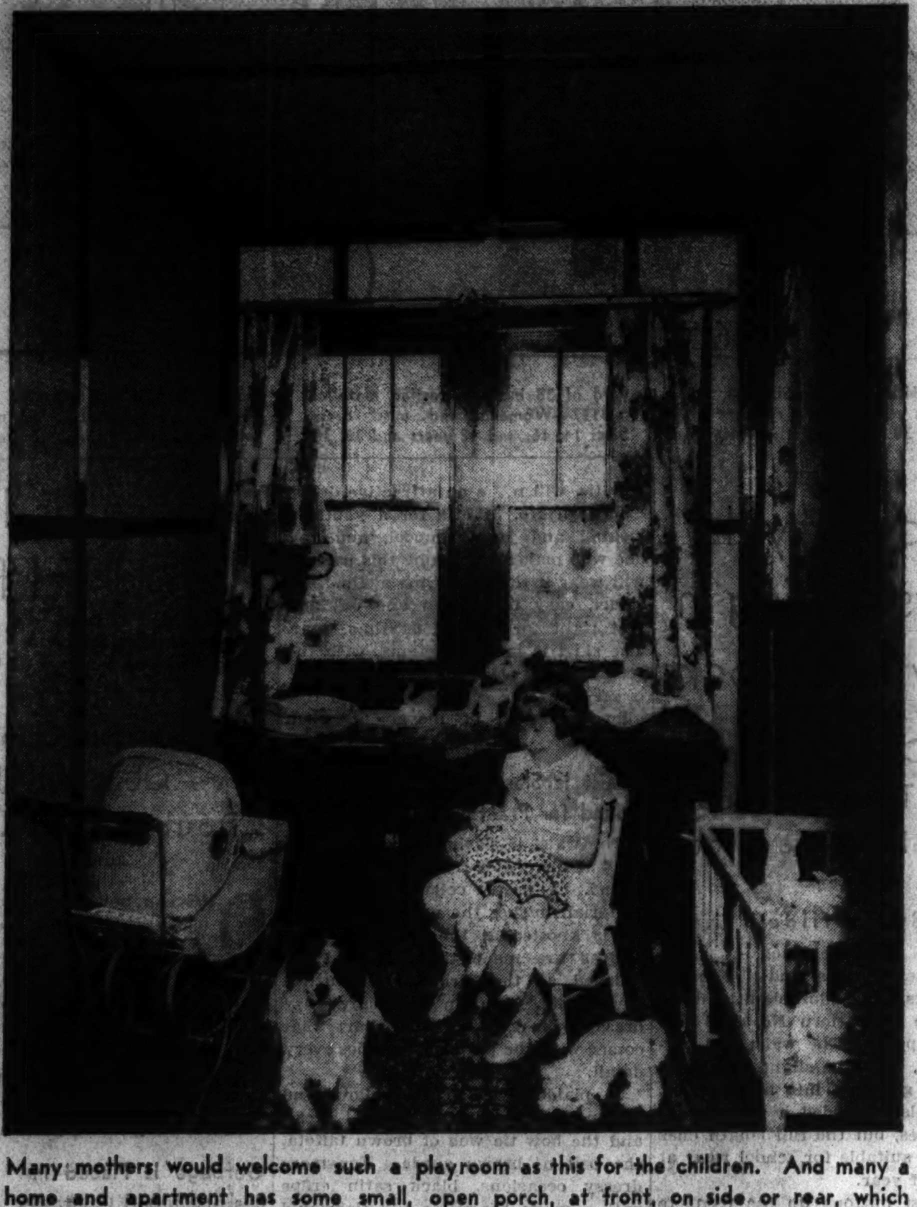
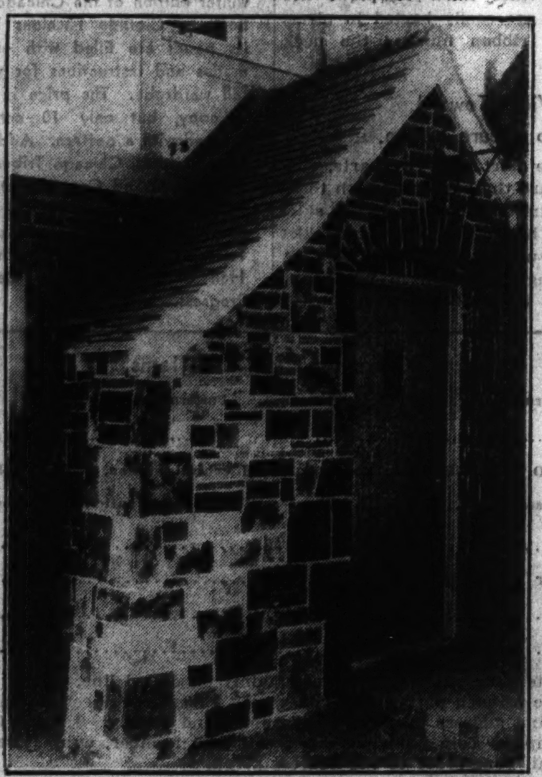
When the winter winds blow and the temperature drops, open porches are lost spaces, as far as domestic usefulness is concerned. But a weather tight enclosure, well finished and well heated, will convert the cubic contents of a porch into a room at the service of all. The cost of such modernization is small, while the tangible results loom large.



Many mothers would welcome such a playroom as this for the children. And many a home and apartment has some small, open porch, at front, on side or rear, which can easily be enclosed—which is, indeed, just waiting to be enclosed, to show what fun it can contribute to the youth of the family on days which are blustery and wintry.



For generations stone has been an enduring and beautiful material for houses. Here we see how a man-made stone veneer may be applied over the old walls of a stucco, frame, or brick dwelling. A close approach to the perfection of natural, age-old stone—in rich, soft colors and varied textures.

HOUSEHOLD QUERIES

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Will you give us a formula for home made polish for our brass chandeliers? Also, will lacker on the chandelier, after it has been cleaned, keep it from tarnishing?
J. A.

Ans.: If you don't want to try any of the ready made polishes available, and there are a number of good ones, make a paste of whiting and water to which you add a drop of ammonia. Rub it well with a clean cloth. Yes, a coat of colorless lacker will keep your brass from tarnishing. Try the effect on a little of your chandelier first, to see if you favor the appearance it gives.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Is it difficult to apply light paint over dark? We have a basement playroom which has walls of wood stained a very dark oak. How many coats of light paint must be used?—Frank P.

Answer: Better make your first coat of good grade aluminum paint. This will go a long way toward hiding the dark oil stain of the oak. After that you can follow with a coat of flat paint and another of enamel, or you may discover that you can enamel directly over the aluminum.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Are there metal wall tiles available which can be applied individually, like real tiles? Also, did I read somewhere that real tiles can be installed in a bathroom without removing the plaster?—Frank K.

Answer: "Yes" to both questions. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for further particulars.

Bright Summer Hues Preserved in Fall Drapes

Artistic, Uneven Patterns, Fabrics with a Hand Made Air Predominate.

By Claire Winslow.

DO you hate to say good-by to summer? Does it give you a pang to see the last flowers dying in the garden? Then you'll be glad to know that you can make your rooms, inside, almost as lovely as the riots of color outdoors, for the new showings of drapery fabrics for winter were never more rainbow-like in their myriad tints and shades.

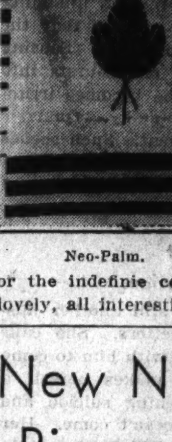
True, the tones of many of the textiles are deep, dark, and rich. But for the white rooms [and there are thousands of them, these days] and the ones with pale walls there are chintzes, cotton and satin damasks, and printed linens that are set in a lighter key. And stripes are back.

There's also a decided trend toward artistic uneven textures and patterns—fabrics with that handmade, craftish feeling. And "best" colors? New York says blues are going to be exceedingly good in a wide range covering the sapphire, midnight, delphinium, and purplish tones. Brown is again popular, especially when coupled with eggshell or pure white, and the grays—pearl, French, etc.—are in the forefront. One sees red again: Currant, raspberry, flame, and plum, while yellows are more in evidence than ever, from the clear canary tone to the greenish-yellow called lime.

Leaf-Classic.

Cut Velvets Will Be Worn by Smart Divans and Chairs.

For the woman who likes her draperies to be subtle in coloring rather than blatant there never were more charming materials from which to choose. Take the pinky-beiges, for instance, as soft as a kitten's ear and as feminine as a powder puff, or the eggshell roses, or the indefinie corals. They all are lovely, all interesting.



Neo-Palm.

Cut velvets are going to be worn by many a smart modern divan and chair this winter. We saw one stunning one that had white herringbone stripes on a marvelous emerald green ground and in daring combinations on another textile were zebra stripes of yellow, white, and green on black. All designed for modern decore.

Swedish cottons and heavy linens are being imported to bedeck early American maple furniture, a delightful change from the sort of thing we have been used to seeing for a long time. One that looked handwoven, but wasn't, showed tiny black star dots and indefinite white foliage on a subtle red ground; another, a plaid in varying greens and eggshell, with brown, white, and a touch of orange. Still another Svenska textile looked almost like carpeting, so sturdy was it due to the heavy yarn used.

Cottons Have the Lovely Sheen of Silks.

We saw some handsome brocatelles in a range of fascinating colors that will sell this winter for half their former price. Rich and luxurious, they bring a note of formality to the room in which they are used.

Several times fabrics that had the lovely sheen of silks turned out to be cottons. This is due to the weaving, where fine yarns are used and "crowded." The prices are about those for silks, and for some unusually fine antique satins we saw, liking particularly the raspberry and blue ones.

Chintzes are just as good for winter as for summer windows; their popularity never wanes. The insets today show some of the new, small patterns. The one called Solarius comes in brown and white, coral, gray, and white, blue and white, yellow, gray, and white, and green and gray combinations. The one called Neo-Palm is modern in feeling and may be had in blue and white, with the palm in coral and yellow; in yellow and brown, with orange and green palm; and in bright red, with white bars and the leaves in black and chartreuse.

Solarius.

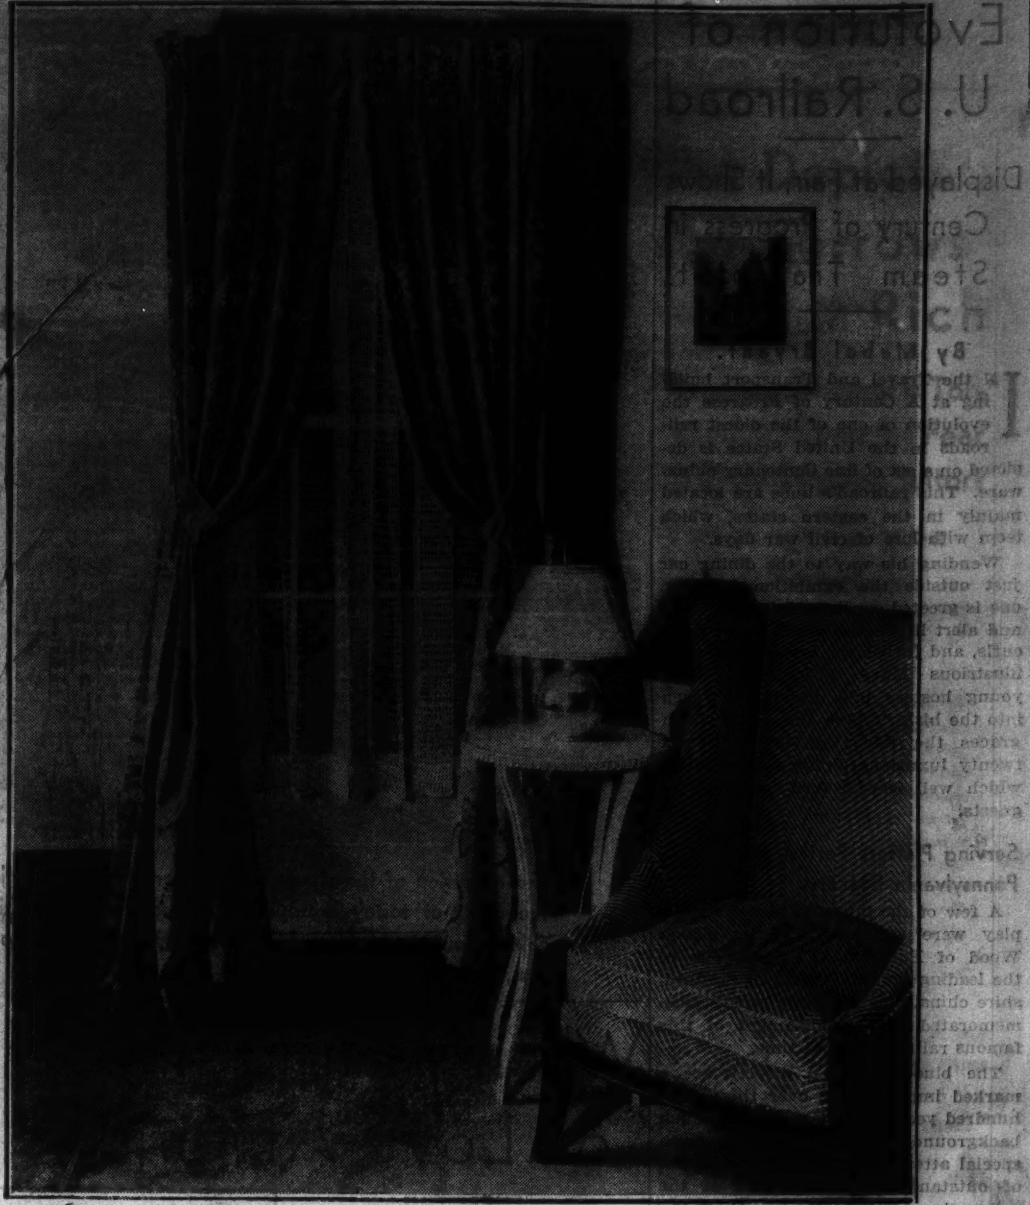
Leaf-Classic will be sold in the same color ranges, adding one with black ground and one with a pure white. It's well suited to the small room, for the design is diminutive.

The large picture shows one of the new chintzes made up into draperies. Against a solid color background a wavy, ribbonlike streamer makes a pretty design. Various colors are available.

All the fabrics described were seen at the Merchandise Mart and are sold in Chicago and in stores everywhere in this country, including Alaska.

"Selecting, Hanging, and Framing Pictures," a booklet by Claire Winslow, tells just how to give the added beauty of well chosen pictures to every room in the house. It is 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street, Tribune Tower lobby, and Hall of Science, A Century of Progress.

ONE VERSION OF THE 1934 BLUES



Gay chintz draperies will brighten many a winter room this year. Those pictured are blue, with the wavy, ribbon design in eggshell. Seen at the Merchandise mart. Sold here and elsewhere.

New Nursery Pieces Have Juvenile Elan

Color and Animal Designs Produce Gayety, Gadgets Aid Convenience.

By Edith Weigle.

IF there is anything much sweeter or prettier than the new furniture for children we'd like to know about it. Said a middle aged man when he surveyed the exhibit of one well known Chicago manufacturer, noted for attractive infant furnishings: "I wish they had made cribs and dressers and chests and chairs half as nice as this when I was a youngster! Why, these are beautiful!"

If the opposite sex voices its praise, how much more are women interested in the new nursery equipment! A few years ago almost every crib was painted ivory or was given a dark, glossy varnish over the natural wood. Today you can choose shell pink, powder blue, light green, and white trimmed in these tones or in scarlet, as well as a good looking honey-brown maple, walnut, or mahogany.

The ends of many of the cribs are amusingly decorated with little teddy bears, ducks, bunnies, calico dogs, and children's figures. And these are repeated on the fronts of dressers, chests, screens, toy boxes, and on the splats of chairs.

The well equipped nursery has an entire set of baby furniture: a crib whose side may be lowered by simply touching with your foot a lever concealed under the springs; a chiffo-robe that has not only drawers, but a section for shoes and a cabinet for hanging little garments; a dresser and accompanying mirror; a small clothes tree; a high chair; a painted wooden screen of three panels, and, finally, several chairs and a toy chest.

High Chairs May Be Lowered to Normal Height.

Have you seen the high chairs that are comfortably padded and upholstered with a nice, solid color fabric that may be washed off with a damp cloth? They come with practical wooden trays that do not lift up over the baby's head, like the old types, but that are quickly removed from the chair by pressing two springs, one on either side. A natural wood finish is treated in such a way that it is stainless and waterproof, and rounded corners make it easy to keep the tray immaculate.

The padded chair comes in a number of colors. Two of the prettiest are a light, clear green, and an all white. And another nice feature—it can be converted from a high chair to a low chair with an attached play table. Any baby will crow over this little item.

Play pens, too, are made to please. One model has short legs that lift it a trifle above the floor, while another is placed directly on the rug, but has a wooden floor of its own and thus can be taken out to the lawn with no fear of the damp ground.

"Upper Berth" Robs Bedtime of Its Sting.

Here's a grand idea for the room occupied by two youngsters who have graduated from cribs to beds. It is a double-decker—and just find any child who won't love sleeping in the "upper berth!" At a charming summer cottage we saw recently such a pair of beds placed against the wall in a corner, and a little ladder was attached to the wall close by so that it was a simple matter to climb up to the top bunk.

One manufacturer has cleverly designed a double decker that may also be converted into a pair of twin beds. They are of maple and are being shown at a large Chicago store.

The pictures today, taken in the American Furniture mart, show you just what sweet little Carol Cady thinks of the new very-sub-deb furniture. Her vocabulary is somewhat limited (she's only 16 months old), but if she could express herself fully it's pretty certain she'd have a lot of nice things to say about the crib and high chair. They looked good enough to eat and she tried to take a bite out of the footboard of the crib just to show us.

All the articles shown today are made in Chicago and sold in stores here and elsewhere throughout the country.

GOOD Morning!

The richest girl in the world! And what a time she had of it!

"A rip roaring GOOD time!" guess you.

"Not at all," reply I. "In most respects quite the reverse."

"Well, HOW . . .?" Your query is dubious, impatient.

"Attendez," responds the writer, sporting one of the few French words she knows, which same she insists on airing upon all available occasions.

This "richest girl" never dares make a public appearance. Nobody, barring a few trusted friends, has ever seen her — knowing who she is. Not even the august board of directors who manage her unbelievably vast interests are aware of her identity — though they think they are.

Proxy Faces All Dangers.

How can such a situation exist?

She has a proxy. And even the substitute is cagey and seldom glimpsed abroad. The "richest girl" herself poses as the proxy's secretary.

The reasons for all this keeping out of sight are F-E-A-R-S.

Fear of kidnaping. Fear of hounding by press, cranks, beggars, and the troops of idly curious. Fear of obnoxious boot licking and the flattery of friends who at heart are foes.

Where fear IS happiness is NOT. So Miss Hunter's life, despite its ease and luxury, is not a joyous one.

The fear that most besets her is the dread that she'll never meet a man who will want to marry her for herself alone. . . . She's had several romances that have ended disastrously, for, put

N. Y. New Plays Have Feminine Appeal, But No Distinction

By BURNS MANTLE.

NEW YORK.—(Special.)—We begin the drama this week with a Lady Jane who was forced to admit an infidelity and to confess a personal indorsement of infidelity in order to save the happiness of her son's home.

We continued it with a lady named Von Kurtz, whose life had not been at all above suspicion and who found herself, as so many ladies of the drama do, living with one army officer and loving another, this one in the Philippines.

As a third contribution to the feminine circle we met a little gal from the you-all country of No'th Ca'lina who was impelled to seduce the young preacher, only to see him shot in his tracks as a betrayer when she bore him a son.

Klari Confused About Her Race.

Fourthly, we met Klari of Hungary, who had a perfectly terrible time finding out just what was her religion, seeing they told her first she had been born a Jewess, adopted and reared a Catholic, and then corrected themselves by admitting she had been born a Hungarian of Protestant parents, and was still a Catholic.

Fifthly, we had a heroine who went into the "tourists accommodated" business, renting out her bedrooms at a profit until she had to put father on a cot in the dining room, and thereby so confused her home that father suffered a nervous breakdown and her daughters were practically driven from home to great unhappiness.

Unfortunately, no one of these unhappy ladies brought a really good play to the theater with her. And we are at the moment fearfully anxious to start the new theater season off with a dramatic hit.

The "Lady Jane" play is one that H. M. Harwood (he wrote

"Cynara," you may remember) produced in London as "The Old Folks at Home," with Marie Tempest playing the heroine. In our production Frances Starr has the part. Frances is a fine actress without being much of a comedienne, and I have a notion a comedy gift would have helped.

Lady Jane is faced with a situation. Sybil, her son's wife, is in love with a novelist named Allenby and wants a divorce. She asks Lady Jane's assistance, rather brazenly I thought, to help her in keeping her children.

Lady Jane meets Allenby, induces him to stay the night, beds him in the room next to Sybil's, with a connecting balcony, and waits for breakfast. The expected happens. Sybil is fearfully chagrined, Allenby is conscious of having been trapped, and the whole affair is dropped.

"Many a marriage has been saved by an unsuccessful infidelity," says Lady Jane. Further to clear Sybil's mind she admits that she, too, took a lover in her youth to save her own domestic happiness. And still has him, if it comes to that.

You could hardly expect the Decency league to overlook "Lady Jane," but I doubt if the issue ever comes up. The play is too artificial and stagy to meet the current mood of playgoers.

Lila Lee is in the cast with Miss Starr, playing a vitally physical young person who goes her way and snaps her fingers at maternal advice. She, too, is brought up with a turn by her mother's confession.

Tragic Army Love Affair Has Comic Ending.

Owen Davis wrote the piece about Thelma von Kurtz, taking the plot from a novel by Charles Clifford. Rather interesting background. The Philippines in 1918, with an army of blacks in barracks commanded by a set of officers who have been shunted there because the high command does not believe they are to be trusted in France. They are bad boys with the bottle, most of them.

Capt. "Cork" Coates is one. Maj. von Kurtz, suspected because of his German antecedents, is another. Coates hates Von Kurtz. But Mrs. von Kurtz loves Coates. So there you have it. Von Kurtz would humiliate and degrade Coates, thus hoping to get his wife back. Coates refuses to be degraded, but he doesn't want Mrs. von Kurtz either.

Mutiny among the blacks. False charges against Coates. A fight, a shot, Von Kurtz deader than a frozen mackerel. Coates charged with murder. They ship Mrs. von Kurtz back to the states on a tramp steamer. They free Coates of the murder charges and—this being a laugh at the curtain—he catches the same steamer.

The young W. A. Brady made the production. I have a feeling Davis wrote the play for him on assignment. Brady was in the army himself and would like a story like that. Helen Flint, the most seductive of the stage's loose ladies, and Earl Larimore, white haired boy of the Theater Guild, play Mrs. von Kurtz and Coates. Horace Braham is the Von Kurtz and Charles Kennedy has a good part as a slightly unbalanced colonel. The piece will be a lot better in the movies.

Clandestine Romance Ends Tragically for Preacher.

The one about the seductress and the preacher is called "Tight Britches." John Tainter Foote and Hubert Hayes wrote it and Rowland Stebbins, the "Green Pastures" man, produced it. But I shall have to wait another time to tell you about that one. All I have is the word of my confrères that they did not care much for it. I might like it a lot, being stubborn thataway. Sheppard Strudwick, who came forward in "Both Your Houses," plays the preacher, and Joanna Roos, who is convincing in seduction scenes, plays the girl. The title derives from the observation of his aunt that the preacher boy was too big for his britches.

The story of Klari, the Hungarian farm girl, was expected by its producers to turn out another "Abie's Irish Rose." I think there is little hope of this. Klari, a foundling, discovers, when she applies for a marriage license, that she was a foundling born of Jewish parents. She suffers the sneers of the villagers, the threatened loss of her fiancé, and then is told that a mistake has been made. She is not a Jewess, but a Hungarian born of Protestant parents. Having tried her best to be a good Jewess by studying the Talmud, she goes back to being a Catholic and is reasonably happy. One of those artificial continental comedies with which, as Americans, we can have little common touch. Jean Arthur and Sam Jaffe play the leading rôles.

The "Tourists Accommodated" comedy, written by Charles Divine, is the best play of the lot because its people are at least recognizably human. There is too much of it, but it never oversteps the bounds of reason. The unconsciously avaricious mother who turns her home into a tourist hotel learns her lesson through the suffering of those she forces to pay the price. In the end her problems are solved and there is a spell of indicated happiness for the family. I am still old-fashioned enough to enjoy the happy ending. The cast is obscure, but includes a Katherine Emery who is new and an ingénue of promise.

SHE DANCES IN ACROBATIC STYLE

Joanne Geodner, whose unusual tricks of acrobatic dancing may be seen in the floor show at the Blackhawk restaurant, is a favorite with Chicago cabaret patrons. She had a long engagement with Buddy Rogers' troupe in the College Inn, and has also appeared in several musical comedies.

to various subtle tests, her suitors have proved her point that money, and not Dorothy, is uppermost in their thoughts.

Lover Severely Tested.

At last she meets Anthony Travis, who, so far as her sentiments are concerned, is THE MAN.

Her kindly and adoring guardian, Jonathan Connors, after carefully investigating the young man's past, family and prospects, is convinced that here's a "regular" who could make her happy. He begs his ward to lay off the tests and marry the boy.

But Dorothy is completely sot as regards this matter. No gold digger shall toast his slippers in her boudoir.

The rest of the story is concerned with manner and outcome of putting Mr. Travis over the jumps.

The picture is intriguing only because the acting is so good. For the yarn gets awfully involved and many of the situations are stupid and incredible.

Take alone the stated facts that nobody has ever seen and no newspaper ever possessed a picture of "the richest girl." . . . Rot! BUT—

You will be thoroughly charmed by Miss Hopkins' deft and appealing characterization, and so taken with the fine playing of her supporting cast that you'll overlook much.

The production is lavishly staged, the women stunningly garbed, and technical effects well handled. The director, I'm sure, did his dead level best to make a silk purse out of, well—not a sow's ear, exactly—but—you get the idea. . . .

Brisk Start of Season on Chicago Stage

Broadway Hits Arrive and Prosper; 'Thousands Cheer' Due Oct. 15.

By Charles Collins.

A DEFINITE advance toward that much desired condition of things called "recovery" by the economists and statesmen has marked the start of the new theatrical season in Chicago. September, a dead month for four years, is bringing a respectable quota of new shows, and the quality of these offerings is superior.

The "Ziegfeld Follies," which arrived on Labor day, is the best revue that Chicago has seen since its forerunner of 1932, and attendance upon these revels at the Grand Opera house has been a happy portent of a returning taste for stage entertainment. "No More Ladies," a credentialed Broadway hit in the vein of epigrammatic comedy, came into the picture last week with gratifying results.

The word that Chicago is again in a playgoing mood has reached the New York booking offices, with the result that "As Thousands Cheer," most popular of the 150 shows that were staged on Broadway last season, is announced for a mid-October première. This satirical extravaganza, which replaced Irving Berlin upon his throne as America's first troudabour, ran for a full year in New York and is coming here with its original cast. Thus it seems that one hit—the "Follies"—breeds another, according to the oldest axiom of the theatrical business.

Four Theaters on Active List.

The Chicago theaters that may be counted on for active operation during the season of 1934-'35 are the Grand Opera house, the Harris, the Selwyn [these three represent the present holdings of the firm of Shuberts], and the Erlanger, where Theater Guild's productions ["Mary of Scotland" and "Ah, Wilderness" among them] will be offered on a subscription basis. The Blackstone, the Studebaker, and the Cort may be expected to contribute occasional bookings, according to the luck of their managements in finding material.

Messiahs of Legitimate Stage.

During the past year the partial collapse of the legitimate theater in Chicago has caused much beating of tremulous wings in the void. Rescue committees have been meeting and passing resolutions, amateur groups have seen mystic symbols in the sky calling upon them to save the drama, and people of missionary spirit have been canvassing for subscribers to repertory theaters in which native born authors and actors would be given an opportunity to express themselves.

What will come of all this worthy groping and aspiring is more than I can say. I can see no signs of definite accomplishment as yet, and therefore I sit patiently, waiting for the Messiahs of the Chicago stage to manifest themselves and to prove their vocation by good works. I will list the prospects as I have heard of them:

New Group for "Plays of Protest."

3. The Theater Society of Chicago, which recently announced its intention to foster interest in the higher forms of drama, to give instruction in acting without charge and to produce plays. The leading spirits are Mrs. A. Starr Best, Miss Thoda Cocroft, Edwin C. Wappler, Dudley Crafts Watson, Dr. Benjamin Van Riper, Mrs. Alfred Alschuler, Dr. Mark E. Penny, and Mrs. Charles Clark. This organization has opened offices at 6 North Clark street, room 505.

4. The Circuit Theater of Chicago, a new organization which proposes to stage plays and send them on tour among the colleges, high schools, and smaller towns of the region. It will start Oct. 5 with "The Whiteheaded Boy," out of the Abbey theater repertory. Among the players are Tyrone Power Jr., Sidney Breese, and Alexandra Knuuti. Virginia Dalton, formerly of the De Paul university faculty, is the manager, and Luther Green, well known among Chicago's little theaters, will be the stage director. Headquarters are at 335 South Michigan avenue.

5. The Drama Union, which aims to do in Chicago what the Theater Union did last season in New York—that is, produce plays of soap-box propaganda nature. The "drama of protest" will be its specialty, and it will strive, no doubt, to demonstrate by melodramatic means that the world in general and this country in particular is in a terrible state. Its first production, which will be staged about Jan. 1 if the dream comes true, will be "Peace on Earth," a New York Theater Union product of last season.

Footnote to "No More Ladies."

The American Theater society, which is organizing a subscription series of plays at the Erlanger theater, finds itself in a predicament. It announced "No More Ladies," and finds that this comedy has crept from under its fostering wing and is now lodged, outside of the subscription, at the Harris theater.

Therefore, to calm its subscribers, the society announces that this change in plan was caused by the fact that the producers of "No More Ladies" wished to send it to Chicago earlier than its date on the subscription schedule and at "popular" prices. It recommends the play to the subscribers and advises them to visit the box office of the Harris theater if they want to see it.

As a footnote to the society's bulletin I wish to add that such eccentricities have become chronic in the executive department of the legitimate theater, and that postponements, cancelations, and shifts of bookings seem to be normal procedure. A New York weekly magazine always carries over its list of approaching premières a warning to the public: "You'd better verify all dates."

Mutual Admiration

KATHARINE CORNELL and Rudolph Besier met recently in Geneva, Switzerland, for the first time. Though Miss Cornell had appeared nearly 700 times in Besier's play, "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," it was not until nearly four years after she first produced the drama that she saw its author.

"I think I never was so nervous, not even on a first night, as when I went to meet Mr. Besier," Miss Cornell said afterward. "I feared that when he saw me, he might say: 'Not at all like Elizabeth, you know!' But whatever he thought, he was charming. We spent several of the most delightful hours of my life, talking about everything, in the theater and out of it.

"She is not at all like an actress," Besier later remarked. "I have known English 'queens of tragedy' and their entrances, their scenes and their exits off-stage. Miss Cornell is apart from all that. Such simplicity, naturalness, modesty, in a woman who is the outstanding figure in the American theater, surprised and delighted me."

Apparently the meeting, like the play, was a success.

Lack of "Easy Money" Is Held Boon to Schools

Eastern Professor Declares American Education Remains Free, at Least.

THE state of education at the opening of the new school year recently elicited the following analytical comment by Dr. William Slater, eastern educator, who believes that the diversion by the federal government of only a small percentage of "easy money" to the schools of the land will prove to be a boon, rather than a handicap, in the future.

"The financial condition of education during the new school year," he says, "promises to be better. Improvement in municipal and county finances throughout the country will bring about quicker payment of teachers' salaries, more classes for a greater number of students, longer school terms in many sections of the land. This fact alone will account for a substantial lift in teaching morale everywhere.

Government Turns Its Back.

"Teachers are only human, after all, and we shall naturally expect better, more effective work from them under conditions which remove the strain of economic uncertainty. There is no intention to question the heroic devotion to duty American teachers have displayed in carrying on their work under trying conditions. The nation has no way of calculating the debt owed to its teachers for the spirit in which they have continued their efforts during the last five years. And yet, to say that teaching will improve when economic strictures are relaxed from a profession which has never shared largely in financial rewards is but to state a very obvious psychological fact.

"Education, strangely enough, may have cause to rejoice over one economic fact which has been generally deplored. In spite of pleas for financial assistance—calls for aid justified by shorter school terms, unpaid teachers, sharply curtailed educational budgets and the paralysis of local tax collection—the federal government has, by and large, turned its financial back on education. Banks, industry, counties and cities have called upon Uncle Sam for help and have received a generous response. Education also lifted a cry to Washington, but its voice was not heeded. This is perhaps the happiest refusal our federal government ever made.

Education Must Be Free.

"Industry and commerce have learned that when Uncle Sam responds to a request for help he insists on taking a hand in the erstwhile private affairs of those helped. The federal government does not give or lend money without taking authority. Rugged individualists know this to their sorrow and today raise the alarm of regimentation. Perhaps that limited measure of regimentation, or collectivism, if you will, possible in a land of congenial individualists will not hurt our economic future. That is beside our point. Any amount of centralization or regimentation would undoubtedly hurt education.

"The hope of education and culture in a democracy lies in the fact that it has its roots in the people. No broad conception of American education is possible if the spirit, initiative, and control of education are centered in the hands of one small group or placed under the administration of a bureau. To live, education must be free. To be representative, as it must be if it is to be broad and socially useful, education must be organized into many scattered, small units—the smaller the units the better, within the limits of financial efficiency.

"Because education has not received large grants of federal money and is consequently untouched by the tendency toward centralization, it faces the future relatively free. Behold the fate that has overtaken education in the corporate, sharply focused states fathered by Mussolini and Hitler. The once admirable scholarship and culture of the Germans, for instance, is today a pale, lifeless reminder of what is likely to happen to education when it lives from the hand of centralized authority.

"To a deplorable extent German students who used to spend their time on beer and study are now abandoned to absorbing Dr. Goebbel's propaganda and to voicing that cry of servile conformity, 'Heil Hitler.' While recent polls in this country indicate that there is considerable collegiate enthusiasm for President Roosevelt's New Deal, newspaper headlines constantly remind us that professors are still free to criticize the administration. Students are still free to study what they wish and to think as they prefer. Furthermore, the little village of Siwash, Kas., may still run its schools as the good people of Siwash choose. American education may be poorer because it has not shared in the federal bounty, but it is free."

Dr. Gordon Keith Chalmers, 30 year old educator, on Oct. 10 will be inaugurated president of Rockford college, Rockford, Ill. The ceremony is expected to be attended by a number of nationally prominent educators, including Miss Mary E. Wooley, president of Mount Holyoke college; Dr. Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university, and Dr. Robert Maynard Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago.

Globe Theater Offers Prizes to Essayists

THE management of Merrie England at the Fair has launched an essay contest open to all high school students of Chicago and the suburban area. Four valuable scholarships and twenty or more honorable mentions will be awarded on Oct. 15 for the best essays of one thousand words written by Oct. 6 on the subject: "The Plays of Shakespeare at the Old Globe Theater."

The first prize will be a scholarship of $200 at any dramatic, art, dance, or music school in the metropolitan area or at any university of the student's choice. The winner will also receive a new Elizabethan costume, made to his or her order, to be worn at the presentation ceremony.

Three scholarships of $100 each will be awarded as second prizes for the essays displaying originality, power of expression and evident personal reaction to the performances at the Globe theater. The twenty or more "honorable mentions" will receive season passes to the theater for the last two weeks of the Fair.

The writers of the best essays will be invited to read them aloud in the Globe theater. They will also be invited to view a performance as the guests of Merrie England.

The winners will assemble on Saturday, Oct. 13, at noon, in the Old Globe theater, to receive their awards and to hear the four prize winning essays read aloud. They will be escorted by the Tower of London Beef Eaters and welcomed by the actors and actresses of the Old Globe theater in costume.

"Follies" Girls as Features of Variety Bills

THE current program of vaudeville at the Palace theater is headed by Lillian Shade, singer, and J. Fred Cootes, song writer and pianist. Other performers are: Stuart and Lash, comedians, assisted by Barbara O'Neal; the Twelve Aristocrats, a dancing troupe; Carl Shaw, eccentric dancer, assisted by Jack Whitney and Nina Simmons, and the De Guchi troupe of Japanese acrobats.

Lina Basquette, former "Follies" girl and motion picture actress, leads the new vaudeville bill at the State-Lake theater. She sings, dances, and poses as a fashion model. Other contributors are: J. C. Flippen, comedian, assisted by Barney Dean and Claire Carter; Gene Sheldon, banjoist, assisted by Loretta Fisher, ex-"Follies" girl; Ross and Ayres, impersonators; the Five Blue Eagles, comedians, and Gerald Hoag and his trained horse.

The Chicago theater continues its stage program of last week through another week. The feature spectacle, "Chopin Melodies," contains Hans Muenzer, violinist; Rudolph Wager and George Parrish, pianists; Ruthe Falley, organist, and the Evans ballet.

"The Drunkard," melodrama of 1840, with vaudeville specialties, is the current stage entertainment at the Uptown theater. It contains a cast of twenty-five players, headed by Kathleen Fitz.

GRANDMA MIXES WITH THE MODERNS

[Drawing by Ben Cohen.]

"No More Ladies," the comedy now at the Harris theater, deals with a brace of hard-boiled young moderns and their wise-cracking grandmother, who favors the costumes of the Victorian period and the cuss words of the new generation. Ben Cohen's cartoon depicts Mary Sargent, as the lively old lady, exchanging a few cynicisms with Walter Pidgeon, as the Park Avenue Casanova of the intrigue.

A Decision Which Requires Stud

Children are easily swayed by superficial considerations in their choice of a school or college. The problem is one squarely up to parents in deciding which course of training and which school are best suited to their children. It is a difficult decision to make and one which requires careful study and much thought. ● If you are having difficulty in deciding on a school, get in touch with the Chicago Tribune School Bureau. Here you can get factual information about more than 4,000 schools and colleges. You can obtain expert, individual consideration of your problem. ● Much of the advice and information which the Tribune School Bureau can give you is based on first-hand, personal knowledge of many schools of all types. There is no charge for Tribune School Bureau services. Call in person, write or telephone.

DANCERS FROM CAFES OF EUROPE

The dancing team of Anita Avila and Jack Niles, now appearing on the program in the Silver Forest room of the Drake hotel, is fresh from a tour of the first class night clubs and cafes of Europe. This is their first engagement in the United States. They are featured performers with Johnny Hamp's band.

BitsaBOUTem

They're going to TEACH CHILDREN appreciation of GOOD MOVIES in the Cook county grade schools! A grand idea! When the masses, through education, have learned to WANT and DEMAND quality in their photoplays, they'll get it—and the present system of ridiculous, inconsistent, and unfair censorship will die of starvation. . . . DIANA LEWIS, diminutive specialty dancer, who has been given an acting contract by Paramount, will make her screen debut in "Enter Madame." . . . Remember SEENA OWEN and BOBBY VERNON, stars of the silent days? They're now writing dialog for the movies. . . . "Spring 3100," based on Argyll Campbell's successful New York stage play, went into production recently. NANCY CARROLL and GEORGE MURPHY have been given the leading rôles. . . . MAURICE CHEVALIER will have his first leading rôle for 20th Century in "The Red Cat." . . . A photograph of SHIRLEY TEMPLE will adorn the room where she was born in the Santa Monica hospital. Hospital officials requested the picture "as an inspiration to mothers." . . . It's a lucky thing for FREDRIC MARCH that he looks at the food before eating it. The other day when he walked onto the set to begin filming the Russian banquet scene in "We Live Again," a huge bowl of caviar on the table caught his eye. "Why, those eggs look like B-B shot," he remarked. "They are," said the director.

ROLAND YOUNG has returned to Hollywood and will have a featured rôle in "Here Is My Heart." . . . BEVERLY BAYNE, one of the first movie stars, returns to the screen in "Domestic Blisters," a comedy, starring York and King. . . . RICHARD CROMWELL has been signed for the third major rôle in "Lives of a Bengal Lancer." MONTE BLUE has also been given a part in this production.

Hollywood

By Sidney Skolsky.

Dorothy Parker is in Hollywood, and the flood of stories concerning her have already started flowing. In fact, they started with her arrival. Looking for a house to rent, it is told by Helen Gwynn, Dorothy Parker and her husband, Alan Campbell, a grand guy, were hunting for a house for several days. Finally they found a place that pleased them both, but they didn't want to sign a long term lease. The owner of the house met Dorothy and decided she wanted her and her husband as tenants and agreed to let them have the house for just as long as they wanted it. The owner, however, took the agent aside and told him confidentially that she wasn't accustomed to renting it for less than a year, but would let them sign a short term lease on one condition. That condition was to be a clause to the effect that she, the owner, was to be invited to dinner on account of she was fond of the Campbells!

DOROTHY PARKER.

Ralph Rainger and Leo Robin, who did the movie and lyrics for "Love in Bloom," the biggest selling song in the country today—it has already reached the 200,000 copies mark for sheet music sale—have another ditty in the new Bing Crosby flicker which is a great follow-up to this one. It is called "June in January," and I'm certain you'll go for it when it is released. Anyway, I heard it the other day and loved it.

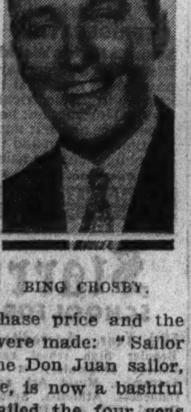
SIR JAMES M. BARRIE.

The collaboration on stories in Hollywood is amusing. Authors who never met have been co-authors of screen entertainment; one author who never heard of the other suddenly discovers he has co-authored a flicker, and the contrast of some of the co-authors is amazing.

Of course, Charles Dickens, writing "David Copperfield," never knew that some day he would share credit for this with another author. Yet when this novel appears on the screen it will be by Charles Dickens and Dudley Nichols, who authored the movie script and did the dialog.

Sir James Barrie, sitting alone in a room in his London house, wrote the play "What Every Woman Knows." He probably never heard of James M. McGuinness. Yet in the last few months they have become collaborators, and if Sir James goes to the movies he will see on the screen: "What Every Woman Knows—by James Barrie, with additional dialog by James K. McGuinness."

Alexandre Dumas may have written the large book "Count of Monte Cristo" by himself, but when the talkie version appears shortly Dumas fans will learn that three new musketeers, Philip Dunne, Roland V. Lee, and Dan Totheroh, helped. There are many more instances. The prize of them all, however, concerns the Bard of Avon, for when Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford made "The Taming of the Shrew" this appeared on the screen: "Written by William Shakespeare—with additional dialog by Sam Taylor."



BING CROSBY.

Paramount had censor trouble with "Sailor Beware" long before the big censor flareup started. They had purchased this rough and salty play of the love affairs of a sailor for $76,000, and every one wondered how they were going to put it on the screen. Now, after many months of being rewritten by many authors "Sailor Beware" is about ready to be made into a flicker and win a purity seal. The author who did the real cleanup job on it is Patterson McNutt.

And the cost of this play to date, before a camera turns on it, is $150,000. This includes the original purchase price and the salaries of all the writers. These are the changes which were made: "Sailor Beware" is now "Lady Beware," and Dynamite Jones, the Don Juan sailor, who had only to look at a gal to make her heart palpitate, is now a bashful sailor who is afraid of girls. For four years he has sailed the four seas without so much as kissing a girl. Honest.

A movie producer, positively not Sam Goldwyn, was saying that Gloria Swanson was a misunderstood person.

"She's really naive," he said "She's a simple person with one interest in life—she just wants to live like a queen."

THE VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Fan Doesn't Believe in Movie Dissection.

Dear Mae Tinée: Doesn't it seem a shame that there are certain persons who, after seeing the superb artistry of George Arliss and the lovely Loretta Young's poignant portrayal of his daughter in the "House of Rothschild," can sit down and make a list of that picture's faults and flaws, which the average person would find it difficult to locate?

If we go to the movies only to see what faults we can find in them we certainly are not making good use of our spent money.

JUST "ANOTHER CHEERER-UPPER."

Promotes French Literature for Motion Picture Plots.

Dear Mae Tinée: Please accept my sincere thanks for your "Monte Cristo" review.

What a field French literature has for moving pictures! For instance, Balzac stories for Maurice Chevalier [how that young man has been made to waste his time since he gave us "Innocents of Paris."

Then I should like to see Greta Garbo in "A Woodland Queen" by André Theuriet, an author crowned by the French academy.

If this suggestion meets your approval, please pass it along where it may do some good. JANET GORDON.

Editor's Note: We hereby "pass it along." Come again!

Paul Muni Finds Wife His Most Faithful Critic

An Ex-Actress, She Helps Direct His Work—Until It's Time for Love Scenes.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—Paul Muni of the films, formerly Muni Weisenfreund of the Yiddish theater, has an exceptional wife. She is the answer to a lot of questions about how it seems to have your husband making love to other women in front of the camera. A professional herself by the name of Bella Finkel and also of the Yiddish theater and répertoire companies in and about New York, she gave up her own career when she married Muni and has devoted herself to the furtherance of his career ever since they said "I do." Also as a professional she knows about this love making for art's sake.

At all times she is with Muni at the studio. She is his shadow. His last glance before he goes into a scene is for her. During his work he will often glance at her to see how it is going over and there is a perfect signal system between them that means "Pep it up," "Pipe down a little," "Try it again, that shot was bad," or anything else that needs to be said.

But when it comes to the love scenes! Mrs. Muni, who is a woman as well as an actress, has some perfectly natural excuse, a telephone call, a message, something she's forgotten that makes it easy for her to slip unobstrusively away. She's enough of an actress to know that her presence would cramp her husband's style, and she's enough of a woman not to like to watch him making love to somebody else.

In his current picture, "Bordertown," Muni this week had to do a love scene with Margaret Lindsay. As usual Mrs. Muni slipped away. "I know it must be as embarrassing for him as it is for me; I just don't like the idea," she confided.

At Home Muni's Permitted Solitude as Often as He Likes.

At home Muni gets the same tactful consideration. When he is "reading" for a new rôle, especially when the characterization is of a sort unfamiliar to him, as in his present rôle, that of a Mexican, he likes to spend a great deal of time reading and absorbing all he can of the background and color of the sort of thing he is to do.

He has a retreat down under a huge walnut tree in his ranch yard, where he goes and is left undisturbed by his wife if he chooses to stay there a week. This hideout formerly was Douglas Fairbanks' portable dressing room. Muni purchased it when Doug started flitting to foreign shores. He has fitted it with every possible convenience, including a rather extensive library. Muni and his hound dog go into retirement together and, guests or no guests, phone calls or no phone calls, his wife sees he is not disturbed.

One sure way to get into the Muni black books is to cast any aspersions on the pedigree of the hound. The pooch is an English foxhound, a breed not often seen here. Many breezy Hollywood dog fanciers whose knowledge does not extend beyond scotties and wirehairs have patronizingly referred to his dog as a "mutt" only to have received the freezing of their lives and a liberal education in the points of an English foxhound.

Muni is a dreamy, impractical fellow in some respects. He was on the set, a border town café scene, one day when the director hollered, "Everybody all set, Muni—grab your partner and begin whirling around." Muni stopped dead. "I have never done a step of ballroom dancing," he said, dazed.

A few impromptu instructors got right busy and gave the big dramatic star a few lessons in how Terpsichore might be wrassled into life around a border café. He knew the scene had been planned to include dancing, but it never had occurred to him that he didn't know how to dance. Muni Weisenfreund's early education was hard work and allowed no time for frivolity. His stage training had been in the heavy tragedies of the Yiddish theater, and the agile hoofing that is the basic thing in the early training of almost every actor in town had been totally overlooked by him.

By Edward Moore.

WHAT does the NRA mean to a man who from preference works twenty hours a day?

Fortune Gallo is the name of this particular person. He is owner and manager of the San Carlo Opera company, which will be at the Auditorium a week from tomorrow night in the early part of its silver jubilee year under his direction. As such he begins operations at 6 o'clock in the morning and keeps going full blast until 1 or 2 the next morning. That is an ordinary day for him and his week is seven of those days.

He has made and lost two fortunes and is on his way to a third. He has owned a New York theater and plans to own another. He has toured his opera company across America and into Canada and Central America until the diagram of his travels would look like a slightly insane spider web. In May he ended a season of thirty-nine weeks. On Sept. 3 he started another of forty-four weeks, of which the Chicago engagement was one item. In between times he was booking the second. He has no advisory board, no directorate, no box office subscriptions. And he has no deficits.

Landed in America with Capital of Twelve Cents.

Try to get hold of him during the day! He is talking to a union agent at 11 o'clock. At 12 he interviews singers; at 1 he argues with a printer; at 2 he sees a costume designer; at 3 he is out at the scenery warehouse; at 4 he confers with his stage director; at 5 there are a few things to tell his ballet master; at 6 he looks in at a rehersal; at 7 there is a conference with the conductor. And at 8, smiling, fresh, and placid, he is "out front" watching the audience come in, running back stage, counting up the house, and still keeping an alert and vigilant eye on every detail of a huge enterprise.

Gallo landed in this country with 12 cents in his pocket. They say that he had been educated on the subject of crap shooting on the way over and that the information was by no means academic. A week later he was working in an Italian bank. Twenty-five years later he was a director of the Giannini Bancamerica.

But banking hours were all too short for his ideas of a working day. It is true that after three months at the bank he was getting $6 a week, a raise, as he says, of 100 per cent in one-third of a year, but in addition he hired himself out as amanuensis to those of his countrymen who could not write, collected for a gas company, gave lessons in Italian to an American physician in exchange for lessons in English, and joined a Democratic ward club, marching fifty-six countrymen to the polls in 1900 to vote for Bryan. Meanwhile his own citizenship papers were pending.

Made Musical Debut Promoting Bands.

Then came his entry into music. From Torre Maggiore, near his birthplace, came Eugenio Sorrentino with his Banda Rossa, a band that had people talking about it in no time. But contracts in lire and living expenses in dollars made things difficult for the Italian bandsmen and a reorganization became necessary. Channing Ellery, now deceased, stepped to the fore, made a new organization, and brought a new director from Italy named Rivela, who, by the way, had been Gallo's childhood piano teacher. Ellery liked Gallo and made him Rivela's assistant.

Out of that band came Creatore, he of the long hair and eccentric conducting manners. Gallo started him out at the head of another band, managed both, and won himself a half interest in the Ellery band.

Somewhere about that time the Lombardi Grand Opera company had been touring South America. From there it voyaged to San Francisco, where it went on the rocks. Gallo stepped in, got an advance guarantee from a California park for an eight weeks' season, and evolved the Pacific Coast Metropolitan Opera company. He brought Ruggiero Leoncavallo, composer of "Pagliacci," from Italy as guest conductor and promptly lost $10,000.

Hawaii's Queen Came Out of Seclusion for Gallo.

But critics and patrons told Gallo that he was giving good opera, so he took a company to Hawaii, coaxed old Queen Liliuokalani out of her self-imposed seclusion of twenty-two years, was otherwise diplomatically and financially successful, cleared $25,000, paid his bills, went back to New York, and put another opera company on tour for thirty weeks.

In 1920 he took over Oscar Hammerstein's Manhattan Opera house in New York, engaged the Chicago Opera company for a season, put on his own San Carlo for another season, presented Pavlowa and her Ballet Russe, and toured them under his management. He made $200,000 and leased the Century theater.

His "Pagliacci" Only Full Length Sound Film of Opera.

He took a company to Cuba in 1923 with Lucrezia Bori, Manuel Salazar, Giovanni Martinelli, Tito Schipa, Titta Ruffo, and Richard Bonelli among the principals. Back in New York he built a theater, named it for himself, and opened it in 1927 with his own company. He sent out another company in English opera, presented the famous Italian actress, Eleanora Duse, and was decorated for the third time by the Italian government.

In 1930 he made a sound picture version of "Pagliacci," fulfilling a promise made to Leoncavallo nineteen years before. It is the only full length sound film production of a grand opera. He believes that such motion pictures have a future.

A few days ago he was talking to a friend in the Auditorium hotel at 1 o'clock in the morning, with a tenor still waiting to be interviewed. He was to fly to Toronto the next afternoon.

"I will see you at noon tomorrow," he said. "I will catch the 6 o'clock train to Milwaukee in the morning if there isn't a 5 o'clock train, and be back in plenty of time."

And he is still surprised and not quite able to understand when he telephones a business office at half-past 6 in the afternoon and cannot get an answer.

News of Interest to Lovers of Music.

Chicago's world famous Paulist choir opens its thirty-first season at St. Mary's church, Ninth street and Wabash avenue, today. The brilliant organization, which is composed of more than one hundred boys and men picked from every section of the city by its director, Father Eugene O'Malley, will be heard in the services at noon each Sunday of the fall and winter season.

Father O'Malley has been the director of the choir for many years. He has coached the singers for all of their concert work, which has included appearances in concert halls and on the stage and the series of radio programs given last winter exclusively over W-G-N, besides their singing at St. Mary's each Sunday.

Four Sundays, beginning Oct. 14, will be devoted to the festival musical services in celebration of the founding of St. James Episcopal church, of which Leo Sowerby is organist and choirmaster. Dr. Sowerby has written a new cantata, "Great Is the Lord," for the occasion, and four other works have been specially composed and dedicated to him. They are "Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis" by T. Tertius Noble of New York, "Benedictus Es Domine" by William Strickland of New York, "Jubilate" by David McK. Williams of New York, and "Behold, the Tabernacle of God" by Healey Willan of Toronto.

The evensong services will take special musical prominence. On the first the male choirs of St. Mark's, Evanston, the Church of the Redeemer, St. Bartholomew's, and Trinity will join in singing, and Dr. Clarence Dickinson, a former organist of St. James', will be guest organist and speaker. On the second there will be a joint service by the choirs of the Fourth Presbyterian and St. James', with Dr. Noble as guest organist and speaker.

The third will be devoted to the alumni of St. James' choir. Dudley Buck of Chicago, the son of another Dudley Buck who was organist of the church at the time of the fire in 1871, will speak. The fourth and last will be another combined service by the choirs of St. Luke's Pro-Cathedral, Evanston; Church of the Holy Spirit, Lake Forest; St. Chrysostom's, and St. James'. Dr. Williams will be the speaker.

French Revue in Seventeenth Week of Run

Helen Morgan Sings at Chez Paree; Club Seidel Offers a New Program.

THE "Folles Bergeres" revue begins the seventeenth week of its run at the French Casino, giving three different programs every night. The music of Drena's Apache band, in "bal musette" tempo, is a special feature that attracts the dancing public. This is a typically French specialty from the Latin quarter which supplements the dance music of Noble Sissle's and Carl Hoff's bands. The principals in the revue are Emile Boreo, comedian and master of ceremonies; Gloria Gilbert, ballerina; Harald and Lola, snake dancers; Desty, Delson, and Juan, adagio dancers, and a Russian ballet.

● Helen Morgan is the star of the current floor show at Chez Paree, with the Ritz Brothers as added feature. Other entertainers are Darlene Walders, a young acrobatic dancer, and Una Villon, a jazz dancer, said to be a protégée of Rudy Vallee.

● Henry Starr, an entertainer from Hollywood with an excellent baritone voice, is prominent in the current cabaret show at the College inn, over which Buddy Rogers presides. Peter and Paul, tap dancers, are another addition to the bill, which has the Mayfair Girls as ensemble dancers. Dolly Bell appears in acrobatic dancing numbers.

● Eddie South and his band have begun an engagement at the Club Seidel as the focus of a show that contains Muriel Love, singer; Madeline Thomas, Willie Shore, Claire Powell, and the Seidel sextet. Earl Hoffman's tango band plays for public dancing.

● The annual harvest home festival of the Edgewater Beach hotel will be held in the Marine dining room tonight. Savine's concert orchestra will play from 6 to 8 p. m. Herbie Kay's dance band will be in action throughout the rest of the evening.

● Carlos Molina's tango orchestra continues in the Boulevard room of the Stevens hotel, with Wesley Adams and Lisa as the featured ballroom dancers.

● Old Cathay, new Chinese restaurant on Chicago avenue at Michigan avenue, features rare oriental dishes as well as the American cuisine. It occupies two floors of a fine old building, and its quarters include an international room, a cocktail lounge, and an English room, the latter equipped like an exclusive London club. Prices are moderate; service continues until dawn; and Benjamin Joe, the Chinese proprietor, proclaims that Old Cathay is "an adventure in good taste."

In "America Sings"

LEE SIMS and Ilomay Bailey, radio and vaudeville personalities, have been engaged for "America Sings," a musical romance based on the life and melodies of Stephen Foster which the Messrs. Shubert will stage in Philadelphia Oct. 1. This team is added to a large cast which already includes Allan Jones, who will have the leading rôle of Stephen Foster, father of American folk song; Jules Bledsoe, in the rôle of "Old Black Joe"; McIntyre and Heath, the Hall Johnson singers, and Lynn Kendal, motion picture actresses.

Miss Bailey is a gifted soprano who has sung with the American Opera company and appeared with Paul Ash's band. Sims is her accompanist. Their "Piano Moods" is a popular radio number.

NOTES OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Another list of musical attractions has gathered since the first was printed a week ago. Among them are the concerts to be managed by Miss Bertha Ott. These will begin at the Studebaker with a piano recital by Anatol Rapoport, Chicagoan, and continue almost weekly thereafter. Most of the events will be at the Studebaker, but some will take place at Orchestra hall and Kimball hall.

Other pianists will be Sergei Rachmaninoff, Stell Andersen, Josef Hofmann, Viola Cole Audet, and Edward Collins, with two-piano recitals by Georgia Kober and Theodora Sturkow Ryder and Miss Andersen and Silvio Scionti. Fritz Kreisler will play the violin at Orchestra hall Nov. 25. There will be song recitals by Louis Wallner, Eleanor Steele, Hall Clovis, Estelle Berne, and Bernice Higgins, and dance programs by Ted Shawn and his male dancers and Jacques Cartier.

On Sunday, Oct. 21, the newly organized Polish-American Opera company of New York will present Moniuszko's "Halka" at the Civic Opera house. Maryla Karwowska, Janusz Poplawski, Michael Karlaaz, and Alexander Czerkaski will be in the cast of singers, and Jerzy Bojanowski, of late a Chicago resident, will conduct.

Harry Zelzer promises a series of six concerts at Orchestra hall, beginning with Albert Spalding Oct. 29, and continuing with Grete Stueckgold, Jascha Heifetz, Ossip Gabrilowitsch, Carola Goya, and Tito Schipa. And on Nov. 14 the Avukah organization will present the boy violinist, Grisha Goluboff, remembered for his phenomenal playing of the Jewish day celebration at Soldiers' field this summer and his first Chicago recital at Orchestra hall. Likewise, the Joseffer String quartet announces a series of six monthly chamber music recitals at the Cordon club beginning Sunday evening, Nov. 18.

A lecture recital on "La Traviata" will be given by Rutheda L. Pretzel at her home, 1035 Bluff road, Glencoe, tomorrow evening. Helen Hedges, soprano, and John Elliot, tenor, will be the assisting artists.

Herbert Gould, basso, formerly of Chicago and during recent years of New York, has been made dean of the college of fine arts at Drake university, Des Moines, Ia. He succeeds the late Holmes Cowper, who had held the post for twenty-five years.

VILLAIN OF SHOWBOAT DRAMAS

London Premiere

THE London production of "No More Ladies," the comedy current at the Harris theater, was made at Wyndham's theater, London, Sept. 18. A. E. Thomas, the author, has been in England for six weeks supervising the staging. The cast includes Ellis Jeffreys, Arthur Margetsen, Ann Todd, and Evelyn Roberts. The play is managed by Lee Ephrain, London impresario, and Milton Shubert, nephew of Lee and J. J. Shubert.

A Spin Into Venice's Old Suburbs Makes Traveler Sentimental

Francesca da Rimini, Byron, Dante, Theodoric Live Again in Streets and Castles of Ravenna, Rimini.

By COUSIN EVE.

RAVENNA, Italy.—[Special.]—One is sentimental in Venice. So it was Francesca da Rimini who lured me away from the dreamy Grand canal and the highly organized pleasures of the Lido.

Having the loose end of a week-end, there was Byron's adored Ravenna, and Rimini, and Mussolini's Riccione, down on the east coast and not so far. And all by its lonesome, San Marino, aloof mountain republic of twenty-four square miles. Funny place on top of the world, where they elect two governors in April and two in October. Gluttons for politics, what?

The way to Rimini is charming, all along the Adriatic. I counted twelve white, long horned oxen to every plow. Embowered villages, vines, peach trees. Rimini was a frontier fortress of Rome, in Umbria, once Gaul. A delicious forest of flat pines, a pineta on the sea near Ravenna was beloved of Dante, of Boccaccio, and of Byron, who all wrote odes and sonnets to it. Arrived at Rimini, avowedly a 12th century town, it was surprising to find ourselves in a gay seaside hotel, a Kursaal next door, a pier over the Adriatic with tea dancing, and white shining beach covered with red and green bathing cabinas.

Mussolini Rests in Riccione.

There was an international tennis match on, Austrians and French were swarming, and the air was full of "mais ouis" and "formidables!"

A beautiful, broad, electric lighted esplanade with palms and azaleas, by several hundred villas and small hotels, leads to Riccione four miles away.

This plage has tremendous vogue this year because Mussolini took a house and moved in early in the season.

Naturally, one went over. It is a simple resort

Bows Duly Made, Debs Trade Ballrooms for Classrooms

By JUDITH CASS.

MOST of the girls combining college and debutante activities this year have made their bows to society, have enjoyed a wild whirl of gayety, and now are gone to concentrate on Greek, "math," and similar subjects until their next vacation period. This isn't quite correct, however, for week-ends for girls who are students at eastern colleges are packed full of good times, especially during the football season, which starts soon and doesn't end until almost Thanksgiving.

Never before have there been so many debutantes who were college girls. Few of them this year are staying at home for the first half of the season, intending to resume their interrupted college careers after the first of the year. Mothers and fathers have discovered that four months of play are apt to make daughters lose interest in continuing their education, so in most cases this year parents have persuaded their buds to be satisfied with the gayety that can be theirs before college opens and during the Christmas vacation. Formerly a girl who was making a debut and also planning to be graduated from college would stay at home the year she came out so that she could "make" the Junior league, something that would have been impossible for any one who went away to college. But now that the league has changed its by-laws so that it does not take debutantes into membership a college deb hasn't that excuse for postponing her return to college.

The debs who are finished with their schooling and who are devoting the whole season to debutante "doings" have just started one of their major activities, rehersing for the annual Service club benefit. It is to be held this year on Saturday, Oct. 20, and it is to be more of a musical comedy than a revue. It is too soon to know yet which of the stay at home buds will have featured parts, but certainly the chorus couldn't help being a pulchritudinous one, for this year's debutantes are exceedingly pretty, as any one who has been attending the numerous autumn debuts could testify. The elegance and femininity of this year's fashions enhance the charm of a pretty girl, of course, but to our slightly jaded taste it seems as though the buds of this season were about the prettiest in many a year.

Traveler Waxes Sentimental in Italian Towns

Francesca da Rimini, Byron, Dante Live Again in San Marino, Ravenna, Rimini

of the third class, but with a lovely beach. So recent that it is found on few maps, yet it has street cars, trafic police, and a lively shopping street. Austrians flock here. Mme. Dollfuss was visiting the Mussolinis with her children, waiting for her husband, at the time of his murder in Vienna.

Beaches Turned Over to Children of Poor.

Nearly the entire shore from Rimini is given over to one of the greatest of Fascist movements, Le Colonie Marine, or marine colonies, for children of the poor. Here large, handsome, modernistic buildings, each with its own beach, have been built and maintained by cities like Milan, Bologna, Modena, Turin, and by private individuals: Princess Maria of Savoy, daughter of the king; Signor Mussolini, who has a veritable palace just opened in memory of his brother Arnaldo. And many others.

Some beaches are entirely dotted with tiny girls in pink frocks, white shoes, and bonnets. Others are flecked a vivid light blue with the uniforms of hundreds of boys. Nurses are kind, uniformed creatures who marshal their little flocks in double rows. The babes don't go in the sea but seem only to paddle in the wet sand. They have excellent food and always the afternoon siesta. They have wonderful medical attention. Children who need it are sent to equally well equipped colonies in the mountains.

All quite different from the goings on of the Malatesta family, into which Countess Francesca Polenta married, becoming Francesca da Rimini to be immortalized by Dante in his Inferno. For 300 years the Malatestas rode this country hard and human life was negligible.

One could scarcely wait to see Castello Malatesta, back in the ancient town, away from the giddy beach, and a thousand times more interesting.

One goes afoot in Rimini over small, neat cobbles. There are no sidewalks. Through the oblong, medieval yellow Piazza Julius Cæsar. Here against a historic tower, a fabulous green bronze figure of the great Cæsar, commemorating his crossing of the Rubicon, says the inscription. From the street a Roman arch, also a bridge over the river in memory of Augustus, who completed Via Flaminia and greatly embellished Rimini.

Castle of Malatestas Serves as Prison.

One could sit in a quaint coffee house among the cobbles and think about all this. But impatiently one pushes on through the oblong Cavour square, with its ancient yellow brick castellated municipio, its museum, each with crenellated chevaux de frise. By the opera house, where Gigli is about to give a concert, and a huge green bronze statue of Pope Paul V. with hand upraised in blessing. Onward over the stones. Finally spreads forth a vast triangular expanse of cobbles—Piazza Malatesta! On the left a neat row of two storied stone houses that have been there forever; all are occupied. Straight ahead a high castle, unchanged since the 13th century, the most sinister and forbidding imaginable. Of vast size and built entirely of brick, it is heavily buttressed from the ground. The roof is flat and the lighting all from courts within, small, high slits being the only outside windows. It is really a fortress. Over the door a legend that the great Sigismondo Malatesta lived here in 1466.

But the tragedy of the great house was in 1288 when Gianciotto Malatesta, husband of Francesca, in a fit of great rage and jealousy put her to death and killed his handsome younger brother, Paolo il Bello. Dante tells of this in the Inferno, 5th canto. Finally I decided to get into the castle. A pull on the immense bell brought the only drunken man I have ever seen in Italy. Uniformed, he seemed to be warden of a jail, for prisoners are kept in the terrifying place. The Fascist government will one day restore the castello and set it aside as a museum, I am told.

Dollar Sign Rampant in Ancient Cathedral.

To atone for their many robust crimes the Malatestas, or rather Sigismondo, took the old Gothic church of San Francesco and metamorphosed it into a Renaissance cathedral, after designs by Alberti the Great. Inside and out are elaborate carvings of chubby elephants and roses, the armorial bearings of Sigismondo and his wayward Isotta. Amusing to Americans is the often repeated motif among the carvings of the dollar sign, the I and S being interwoven initials of this spectacular pair. Décor of exterior crypts, a line of huge stone sarcophagi of poets, scholars, and musicians who figured at this court.

The sacristan told me that one frescoed wall was done by Perugino, but I don't believe him. Nevertheless it is a grand old church full of Gothic art.

Fat and resplendent in gold lace, the hotel concierge, after the manner of his kind, wished to send us upward to San Marino in a fine motor. But a crafty traveler had warned me that the electric train was better and far cheaper. It was a magnificent day and soon we were whirring along in a scene of ripe harvests, under a brilliant sky and blue distances, toward the smallest republic in the world, settled 350 B. C. Soon we crossed the frontier and left Italy behind for a few hours, circling always upward on Mount Titano. The country is highly cultivated and the villages looked quite prosperous and picturesque. The 15,000 inhabitants are well scattered into noblesse, farmers, and burghers. Far below every vista was the perspective of an old Italian primitive. Above, high and stark, towered a great rock. Upward shafts of poplars and cypresses were prayerfully cleaving the sky. The station was charming. A gay garden, a level road cut in the rock. A nearby statue of St. Francis of Assisi. The trek was ever upward in narrow streets, along shaded terraces, under ancient arches, by old, old churches.

Citizens Haughty Over Ancient Government.

The air had lightness, the quality of champagne. Climbing was no effort; life was simply glorious. Handsome citizens, with the haughty air of people having the oldest government in Europe. Ah! a postcard emporium. Its owner, the Harry Gordon Selfridge of San Marino, has the grand manner, suavity, address. I inquire about the climate. The bland Signor Selfridge says the climate of San Marino is something frightful. When it does not blow it snows. Sixty council members run the country and out of these, four governors a year are voted. They believe in rotation in San Marino. It all seems a bit opera comique, especially the mammoth statue of a high busted lady called Liberty out in the public square. For presenting this to the city Ottilia Wagener had received, in 1876, the title duchess of Aqua Viva. Way, way up was an enormous stone wall, heavily buttressed and with perfectly preserved and marvelous chevaux de frise. These ramparts, flung round the shoulder of the mountain like a great necklace, were divided by precious jewels, three highly quaint towers of the early middle ages.

The view from the top was sublime. There were battalions of little distant mountains and a broad beige sash that spreads out in the valley is a river. One lunches at the peak, it goes without saying. And then, fanned by a fresh breeze, under the shade of a fig tree, does one's favorite out of door exercise, being thankful for one's blessings. I owed all this glorious day to Francesca da Rimini and Dante and Byron, and incidentally to Theodoric. But so far Francesca had eluded me. However, there was still Ravenna, that "sweet dead city," some poetical person called it.

And here I had the surprise of a lifetime and caught up with her. A hundred years is as a day in Ravenna. Time eases along in periods of five hundred years. One looks knowingly at the beautiful, well preserved façade of Theodoric's palace—but what, after all, did I know of that far distant man?

Breathless, One Tries to Cover Centuries in Ravenna.

It is a crime against art and opportunity to miss anything in Ravenna. So, armed with dark glasses, one tears energetically from tower to basilica, to palace, to tomb, to monastery, to souvenirs of 2,500 years. First to the tiny jeweled chapel where, after centuries of oblivion, Dante's ashes now lie in superb state. They were accidentally found in 1866 in a monastery garden by monks digging for a well. An urn authentically inscribed held the precious relics. Some of Dante's most inspired writing was done in Ravenna. Here he died, excommunicated and in exile.

Lord Byron lived and wrote here for two years. I wondered about that. But the French have a saying, "Cherchez la femme." All traces of Byron are obliterated except the name of a square. The many and perfectly conserved mosaics of Ravenna are the most magnificent in existence. Emperor Justinian, who restored St. Sophia in Constantinople in 532, with its glorious golden mosaics, built a replica of that church here, San Vitale. Entirely of pale marbles and dark gleaming mosaic pictures, the cathedral contained a tall, stately portrait of Justinian with his followers, and one of Theodora, his wife, the former circus dancer. She it was who used to retire to the beauty giving baths at Yalova in Asia Minor, with 4,000 attendants. A tall, rather faded blonde is Theodora in mosaic. In the garden the mausoleum oratory of Empress Galla Placidia, with Honorius and Constantius, the only emperors as yet undisturbed in their last sleep by scientific curiosity. The dark blue mosaic here, of the early 5th century, with shepherd and white sheep, is wonderful.

But art is longer in Ravenna than elsewhere and time is shorter. On to romance! Arriving in town I selected from a row a little carrozza with a white sunshade and a black horse. The cocchiere was a round little rosy man with twinkling black eyes and big white mustachios like the great King Humbert.

With a great flourish we drove up to the Hotel Cappello, or Hotel Hat, the first in the list. It was a rather queer looking place. But it had an air, somehow. There were the ground floor and the second floor with high ceilings and that was all. Also a large vine shaded court. The stairs were stone. The floor of my room was of bricks a foot long with a soft finish. It was all exquisitely clean and comfortable. The whole house was floored with brick and the upper hall, sixty feet long and thirty wide, had three intriguing carved wooden doors on a side, six in all. A white marble balcony at the front. Kittens frolicked about—a diverting place.

The food was native and excellent. It was indeed the head waiter who spilled the crock of beans when he proudly said that "Hotel Hat" was a monumento nationale. "Why so?" said I. Said he: "You are living in the house of Francesca da Rimini. She was married from here and you have her room." The news almost overwhelmed me. But it seems that after 650 years there had been some changes. They had washed off the frescoes of my apartment and substituted red brocade.

Cup Races Cause a Round of Parties, Dinners at Newport

NEWPORT, R. I.—[Special.]—Social amenities in connection with the America's Cup races have kept Newport busy all week on both land and water. The harbor is still thronged with yachts, and many large parties have been given on board the noted craft. Luncheons at Bailey's Beach, at the Clambake, and dinners at various cottages have filled the schedule. Hardly a large house at the spa is not filled with guests.

Society's Young Bloods Invade All Professions

Rising Generation of Park Ave. Adds Journalistic Triumphs to Its List

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Society's younger members are letting no possible fields for activity get by them. The stage, the films, and even the journalistic battleground are considered proper mediums for expression. Perhaps I should put quotes around the word "expression," since the younger generation of Mayfairites thinks that the worst possible curse to befall any one is enforced idleness or being deprived of a chance to give forth to the world what lies within them.

June Blossom, Whitney Bourne, Hope Williams, John Cabot Lodge, and scads of others are acquiring Thespian laurels. It remains for a member, by marriage, of the up-and-doing Whitney clan to invade the newspaper field and find fun in publishing.

Young Barklie McKee Henry, who married Barbara Whitney, daughter of Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, has long had the publishing itch. But, unlike young Chrysler and several others, he has looked beyond the magazine field to the more virile daily print.

With Bronson W. Griscom, son of Col. Lloyd C. Griscom, former ambassador to Spain and husband of the one time Sophie Gay, daughter of the William Otis Gays of Southampton, Barklie Henry decided that good old Long Island was the place to break into the publishing game.

Henry and Griscom Edit Six Papers on Long Island.

Today Barklie and "Bronnie" own six papers in various towns along the island, and working with them—scribbling, canvassing, doing all sorts of things—is a select list of Long Island notables.

Mrs. James H. Van Alen, under her name of Eleanor Langley Van Alen, does the book reviews; "Jimmie" Cooley talks knowingly of polo, and among other contributors are Mrs. Alexander H. McLanahan, Mrs. Robert Reynolds Hitt, Bertha Benkhard Rose, sister of Mrs. John Mackay, and Pat Outerbridge, who talks of yachting.

Frazier Woolworth McCann, son of the Charles E. F. McCanns, was advertising manager until he got so serious about it all that he started a paper of his own. Now he fairly wallows in all the details of publishing a daily. The whole of the island is interested in the young men's chain of papers, and over their warm scotch and soda [English style] they insist that the famous chain owners had best watch out.

Moya Beresford Sails in—Still Single.

Pretty Moya Beresford is here again, and still single. The daughter of Lord Decies and the late Vivian Gould is as good looking a brunette as ever stepped ashore, though she may have a tendency to the Gould plumpness. Every one wonders why no one has corraled Moya, since she adores her mother's country and would be glad to stay here.

Her Irish daddy has been making the rounds at Newport, being, with Moya, a guest of the Manvilles on the Hi-Esmaro. The gossips insist that Decies is not done with Hymen, and that the lady who gets him will have a charming companion, indeed. But that won't happen until Moya is past the altar.

A considerable number of titled Britishers have been here for the races, Lord and Lady Doverdale among them. Lady Doverdale is the former Mrs. James B. Taller. After a look in at Newport they were the guests at Brookville, N. Y., of Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin. Also in the party was Maj. Sholto Douglas, who accompanied Leslie and Lord Doverdale to this side of the pond and is now embarked with them again for London.

Debutante Bows Still Confined to Westchester and Connecticut.

I suppose you are aware that the debutante season is coming on us more quickly than ever. At present the bows are still in the environs of town. Up in Westchester and Connecticut and out in New Jersey the swank country clubs are the scenes of nightly presentations. Here in New York, however, the debuts have not got past the stage of dates and orchestras.

A bow of importance will be that of Janet Olcott, daughter of Mrs. Chauncey Olcott. Rita's daughter will make her curtseys at the Ritz-Carlton on Thanksgiving evening.

Paris Wakes from Lethargy of Midsummer

With Fall, It Again Becomes Crossroads of Society on Its Travels.

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—The fashionable world of Paris, including its American contingent, has been profiting by prolonged summery weather to stay on at the beaches or the cure resorts, although the departing boats are taking a good many of our compatriots across the Atlantic. The center of the capital has taken on some animation with the arrival at the principal hotels of those who are trekking to or from the continent toward the end of what has been with the aid of Old Sol, a more prosperous season than Europe has known for quite a while.

Molyneux and other dressmakers have been agog with the presence of Princess Marina of Greece, daughter of Prince Nicholas and of the Grand Duchess Helen of Russia, following her engagement to Prince George of England. This personable and charming young woman has spent about half her life in Paris, where her mother has been active in several charities for Russian refugees, particularly the home for children at St. Germain-en-Laye.

Dawson Gives Reception for Friends of Lafayette.

Delegates from the American Friends of Lafayette, after doing all the things that might have been expected, and (some of them) receiving decorations from the French government, have been entertained at various receptions. One of the most interesting was given earlier in the week by Warrington Dawson, special attaché of the American embassy, at his home in Versailles. Although bedridden for years, Mr. Dawson is indefatigable in writing and entertaining, and now he gives once or twice a month, regular musical programs of high merit. He himself sings the leading tenor rôles of a number of well known operas, and Senhor Pedro de Freitas Branco, the eminent Portuguese conductor who often conducts the principal Paris orchestras, takes charge of the programs.

Mr. Dawson made extensive researches for Mr. Rockefeller to determine the identity of as many Frenchmen as possible who fell at Yorktown, and also for the reconstruction of Williamsburg. His friends number many of the descendants of Lafayette and Rochambeau, and they were invited to meet the American delegation, which was entertained also by Mr. and Mrs. J. Tarn McGrew at their home on the Quai de Béthune, in the historic Ile St. Louis quarter.

Mr. and Mrs. John S. Lithiby, who reside in the Rue Vaneau, in the Faubourg St. German, are spending the month at Le Touquet.

Toscanini to Conduct Straram Orchestra.

Musical and social circles here are much interested in the announcement that Arturo Toscanini will conduct the Straram orchestra in a series of concerts to be given this autumn in the principal cities of France. The late Walter Straram, during the few years preceding his death, made this orchestra one of the best in Europe, giving performances on dates that allowed him to draw players from several of the other leading orchestras of Paris, and welding them into a cohesive organization that elicited praise from Toscanini himself, who has led the Straram band on several occasions at the Théâtre des Champs-Elysées. Mme. Ganna Walska, who owns this theater, has done much, by her generosity, encouragement, and executive talents, to bring the Straram orchestra to its present perfection.

Group to Open Twenty-Fourth Year with Tea

Woman's City Club to Give Affair in Honor of Friends on the Press.

By Ruth De Young.

NEITHER RACE nor religion has a place in the day by day activity on the ninth floor of the old Montgomery Ward building at 6 North Michigan avenue. Women of wealth and recognized social position are working there, side by side, with those of less than moderate circumstances. There are Catholics and Protestants, Jews and gentiles, even those of the oriental races.

The point is that they are members of the Woman's City club, and they are united by the common cause of civic betterment. On the afternoon of Oct. 8 they are entering upon their twenty-fourth year with a tea that will be an appreciation to the women of the press who have long been their friends.

Club Has Identified Self with Many Worthy Causes.

Rounding out this first quarter of a century, the club may well congratulate itself upon its career of civic achievement for it has registered itself in many movements. Recently, for instance, in the consolidation of the city's park boards, the continuance of library service in the schools, and prevention of erection of a filtering plant on the lake front at 67th street. In each one of these projects the club's endorsement has carried definite weight.

Yet the members, with Mrs. Mark P. Mears as their president, are forward looking. They are thinking now about what they want to do during the next quarter of a century: a new state constitution, consolidation of local governments in Chicago with scientific budget control, an equitable system of taxation, the revision of election laws, an adequate program for child welfare, and housing that conforms to the American standard of living.

Organization Was Urged by Late Senator McCormick.

It was the late Senator Medill McCormick who inspired the organization of the club back in 1910. Talking to a group of members of the Chicago Woman's club, he pointed out that vice conditions in the city were especially bad, and that there was need for a woman's club interested exclusively in civic endeavor.

"The men have tried to clean up the city," he said, "and they can't. Why don't you women do something about it?"

Organization of the Woman's City club met Senator McCormick's challenge. Mrs. H. M. Wilmarth, one of the first members of the Chicago Woman's club, became the founder president. Her picture and those of the later presidents—Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, Miss Mary MacDowell, Miss Harriet Vittum, Mrs. Benjamin F. Langworthy, and Mrs. Murry Nelson among them—now line the walls of the club president's office, which is a cheerful room with an unsurpassed view of Chicago's lake front.

President Devotes Great Deal of Time to Office.

The days that Mrs. Mears, the present occupant of this office, puts in are typical of the way all of the club's presidents have worked. At least four days a week, when her hours are 9 to 5, she might be considered a business executive. Of definite benefit to her has been the experience she gained as president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers from 1922 to 1924. Mrs. Mears has a commendable orderliness of mind, a flair for public speaking, and a predilection for fresh flowers on her presidential desk.

This year she is especially interested in developing closer coöperation between her organization and the Men's City club, for the interests of both organizations are identical, she points out, and there is strength in union. A new interest for the 800 Woman's City club members this season will be a course in international relations.

Outsiders Are Permitted to Use the Lunch Room.

For the first time this fall outsiders are permitted to use the club's lunchroom, where there is self-service from 9 to 5. This is considered a special convenience by the members of the Women's International League of Peace and Freedom, and the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, for both organizations have offices within the club.

Mrs. Bowen is the club's honorary president. Mrs. George O. Fairweather, Mrs. Edward L. Murfey, Mrs. Paul Steinbrecher, Mrs. Samuel T. Lawton, and Mrs. H. S. Paine are the vice presidents; Mrs. George R. Dean, treasurer; Mrs. Wilbur E. Fribley, assistant treasurer; Mrs. A. W. Evans, recording secretary, and Mrs. Murry Nelson, corresponding secretary. The civic director is Mrs. Jean Cross Weis.

Three Departments Unite in One Colorful Program.

One of the most colorful events on the year's calendar of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs is to be held next Friday when the garden, conservation, and Indian welfare departments join in a fiesta at Justamere farm in the forest preserve at 147th street and Oak Park avenue. The day's program includes a basket lunch, reports by a half dozen state officers, and an Indian program replete with war whoops and peace pipe dances.

Mrs. Wallace Butler Combs, the state garden department chairman, will open the program by introducing Mrs. William Franklin Farrell, state federation president. Mrs. Farrell will be followed on the program by Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, general federation chairman of the American home department, and Mrs. Frank Staley, newly elected chairman of the state American home department.

Chairman Is to Speak on Art of Conservation.

Mrs. A. O. Larson of Shabbona, newly elected chairman of conservation, will then speak on "The New Day in Conservation." In an "Illinois beautiful" campaign Mrs. Larson is enlisting the support of clubwomen against unsightly outdoor advertising.

The Indian program, which will be especially interesting in the natural autumnal setting, will be announced by Mrs. Fred W. Waterman, recently elected state chairman of Indian welfare. Taking part will be Mrs. Daisy Maud Underwood, known as the Chickasaw Nightingale; Chief Whirling Thunder of the Winnebagos, and Chief Clearwater, an Ottawa Indian and a descendant of Chief Big Foot, one of the signers of the treaty deeding lands around Chicago to the white settlers. In conclusion, Mrs. Waterman will introduce Mrs. J. Marc Fowler, chairman of Indian welfare for the general federation.

Cook County Federation Enters Its 37th Year.

This week launches the thirty-seventh year of the Cook County Federation of Women's clubs, which has Mrs. Furnett D. Warner for its president. At 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning the members will meet at the Palmer house to hear addresses by Arnold R. Barr, former president of the City club, and Mrs. George A. MacCorkle, president of the School Children's Aid society.

After luncheon at 12:45, Mrs. John Van Wakeman, president of the day, will introduce William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools; Miss Irene Kawin, deputy chief probation officer of the Juvenile court of Cook county, and Miss Mary Herrick, vice chairman of the department of education of the Cook County federation.

Resort Season in New England Draws to Close

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Mack Entertained by Whitmans Before Return Home.

WHITE MOUNTAINS, N. H.—[Special.]—Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker of Chicago drove through the White mountains this week, calling upon friends in Bretton Woods, where they had luncheon.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin F. Mack were honor guests at a farewell dinner given recently by their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Whitman. Later the party attended the motion picture entertainment in the ballroom. Mr. and Mrs. Mack, who have spent the summer at Dixville Notch, were prominently identified with social affairs there. Mrs. Mack several times served as hostess at veranda teas and at bridge parties.

Dr. and Mrs. Hugh Warren of Chicago will remain until the end of the season at Bretton Woods, going from there to visit Mrs. Warren's mother, Mrs. John Crerar of Lake Shore drive, Chicago. The Warrens play golf daily together and lately have had great fun at keno in the ballroom, where large parties, seated at long tables, play this game of chance.

An Adventure

By Eleanor Jewett.

Brownie, our pony, has lost her shoe—
What on earth will our pony do?
There is no store for horses' shoes,
No sandals nor sneakers for them to choose!
Brownie is in a pretty sad way,
She stumbled without her shoe today.

Mother! Mother! Where shall we go
To buy pony shoes? None of us know.
Steel and iron and flames that are hot,
Nails and shears that a horseshoer's got,
Those we must have for a pony's shoe
And an apron of lether like horseshoer's do.

Children, wait! We'll drive Brownie there,
Drive her to town with the greatest of care.
Are pony and cart and harness neat?
We'll watch her be shod on all four feet.
Brownie is going to be proud today,
She'll have three shoes to throw away!

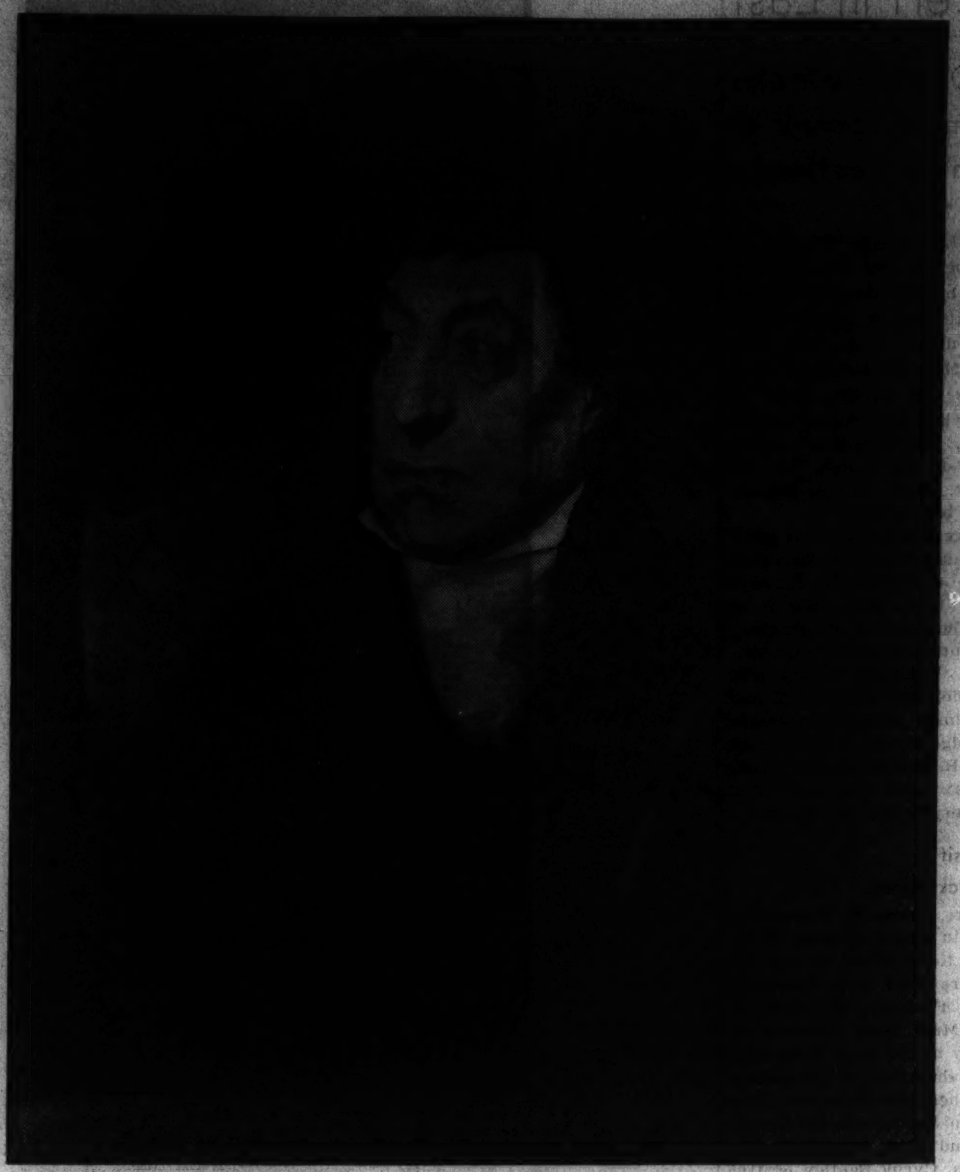
Art Institute Displays Silver Tea Service Won by Revolutionary Maiden in Wager with Lafayette

America's Victory Brought Triumph to Daughter of Navy's Commander.

By Eleanor Jewett.

SILVER means usually birthday or graduating or wedding presents. Rarely does it trace back to a bet. When it does, and the bet is remembered, one may take it for granted that the interested persons were of historical importance. We have seen silver given by Napoleon to Josephine, by the czar of Russia to the empress, and now we have the opportunity of seeing a silver tea service won by a pretty American girl from Gen. Lafayette on a wager based on the outcome of the American revolution. This is something new in silver.

Lafayette was 23 when he was introduced to society in the gay environs of Newport in July, 1780. Admiral Esek Hopkins was the first commander of the American navy and he had a daughter, Amey. She was the belle of Newport; so much time passed before the young and handsome Frenchman was introduced to her. They talked, they danced and, one thinks, in spite of Lafayette's young wife and two babies at home, they flirted. In a spirit of mischief Lafayette wagered a silver tea set against a hat that the British would win the war. In a flash Miss Hopkins took him up. The months went on. The war slowly developed into the defeat of the English and, even before the last guns sounded, the gallant French soldier conceded the victory to his partner in the bet. Miss Hopkins had married Gen. Dorrance, so the initials on the silver are A. D. —Amey Dorrance.



"Portrait of General Lafayette," by Samuel F. B. Morse, to be seen in the Century of Progress Fine Arts exhibit at the Art institute. The silver service is in Gunsaulus hall.

Favorite Necklace of China's Empress Dowager Exhibited.

The silver service now belongs to Mrs. Amey Clarke Thayer [the great-great-granddaughter of Amey Hopkins], who lives in La Grange. She has lent the tea set to the Art institute, where it may be seen in Gunsaulus hall. The portrait of Gen. Lafayette, painted by Samuel F. B. Morse, hangs in gallery 38.

Notes from the Century of Progress grounds tell us that the jade necklace which was the favorite adornment of the late Dowager empress of China has been placed on exhibition by Herbert J. Devine in connection with the Chinese Imperial Gold collection in the Hall of States. The necklace, which is valued at $55,000, is a short string of thirty perfectly matched jade beads suspended from a mesh chain of 22 carat gold. The beads are of liquid quality and sparkling brilliancy, making a really beautiful string.

Like the other articles in the famous Chinese Gold collection, the necklace was among the treasures which the dowager empress carried with her in the flight of the royal family into the interior at the time of the Boxer rebellion. The objects in the gold collection consist of eighteen articles designed for use on the imperial desk and presented in 1783 to the great Emperor Chien Lung by a Manchu official of high rank, named Pao Tai, imperial envoy to Tibet. The collection and the necklace, which was placed on view only last week, are well worth seeing.

The school of the Art institute announces the addition to its day school of a professional course in dress design and construction, under the direction of Miss Beryl Spinney. Miss Spinney's experience includes designing for many actresses in New York, Chicago, Kansas City, and Hollywood. The evening course in dress design will continue under Gilbert Banks.

News of Interest to Lovers of Art.

Carl Hallsthammar, famous for his superb wood carvings, is opening a school this year to teach wood sculpture. He calls his school, situated at 111 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, the Hallsthammar academy. There is a Saturday morning class for children in addition to the weekly series for adults. Mr. Hallsthammar is going to American history for many of the subjects which he will use in the training of his pupils.

Lane K. Newberry has exhibited his series of historic landscapes of Illinois in the Illinois Host house, Century of Progress grounds.

The American Academy of Art, 25 East Jackson boulevard, under the direction of Frank H. Young, has opened its fall session with the largest enrollment in its history. It was necessary for the academy to acquire additional space to take care of the students. All departments of the school, including the evening classes, show an increased enrollment. The school's advanced students in commercial art recently participated in an International Exhibition of Commercial Illustration in Tokio, Japan. The academy was the only American school represented, the other exhibits being the work of professional artists from various countries.

Berenice Newman, known for her beautiful still life compositions in which flowers play a conspicuous part, is showing four new canvases in the Marshall Field galleries. One, "Pent House Window," a charming arrangement of apple blossoms against a blue background, has been sold. Mrs. Newman is an active artist member of the All-Illinois Society of Fine Arts.

Special morning art classes for young people were enrolled yesterday in the Chicago Academy of Fine Arts, 18 South Michigan avenue.

Louis Kronberg, whose last formal show here was held two years or so ago at the Knoedler gallery, is returning to Chicago from Europe. He will be in town for the opening of his new exhibit Nov. 10, in the Carson, Pirie, Scott galleries.

Claude Buck is back after a summer painting trip in the Catskills around Woodstock and later at Niagara Falls. He painted a most interesting portrait this summer in Granville, O., of the mother of Mrs. Nanette H. Bartlett of Winnetka. Mr. Buck is conducting evening classes in painting and figure drawing at the Studio School of Art, 225 North Michigan avenue.

The annual exhibition of oil paintings will be held at the Phillips Mill, New Hope, Pa., from Oct. 6 to Nov. 4, under the auspices of the Phillips Mill Community association.

A reference book on the principal North American trees has just been published by the Field Museum of Natural History. The book contains data on 84 of our important trees. Prof. Samuel J. Record is the author. The book is illustrated fully with pictures furnished by the United States Forest service.

Charles Sneed Williams, American portrait painter, has recently returned from abroad, where he has been engaged upon several important commissions in Paris and London. His Paris show of last fall was one of the successful exhibits of the year. In all probability there will be an exhibition of Mr. Williams' portraits and landscapes in November in the Ackermann galleries, Fine Arts building.

WHEN CHICAGO WAS YOUNG

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend, Julia Boyd, of New York.

By Herma Clark

Chicago, Oct. 25, 1884.

DEAR JULIA: When I wrote you a short time ago about the decorative art which had been thrust on me by Martha's friend I didn't think I should have more to record. But this week has brought an avalanche. A young cousin of Will's living downstate has sent up some "drapes" for our pictures. These "drapes" are made of thin material . . . some of tulle, some of bolting silk, the latter hand painted. All are filled with the milkweed's product, you know, that fluffy, silky stuff in the pod. They aren't so bad, only so dreadfully numerous!

Will's cousin Amelia wrote she knew that we in the city didn't have a chance to pick milkweed pods for ourselves, so she sent us a good supply of it. I marched around the room and placed one on the "northwest corner" [Will's definition of the upper lefthand] of each of the paintings in our parlor. I couldn't bear to put one on Martha's portrait, and Will, coming in after dinner, said, in a shocked voice: "Don't you think that looks a little naked, so to speak, with all the rest of the frames in petticoats?" Dear me! I feel quite smothered with all this stuff about.

Another bit of art which has come to me this week is a hand painted lambrequin, Martha Jr.'s handiwork. She brought it over this afternoon, carefully done up in tissue paper and marked: "For dear mother's parlor mantel." It is of a lovely shade of green felt, decorated with a large spray of hand painted daisies and goldenrod in each lower corner.

It took her a long time to do it, I know, and I was touched by her gift, but I'm afraid I prefer my Carrara marble mantel without a covering. As I grow older I enjoy best plain things that can be washed.

Will couldn't resist the temptation to poke fun at it, and while I was upstairs dressing for dinner he busied himself making a placard which I found pinned to the lambrequin when I came down. In large letters, it announced:

HOME FOR AGED AND DISABLED MOTHS. COMFORTABLE LIVING QUARTERS FREE.

The waitress stood in the dining room door trying to suppress her giggles. My husband has an almost too appreciative audience in his own home. It spurs him on to fresh attempts at amusement. The maids abet him in every bit of nonsense, and I always have to laugh at what he does and says. I think if your husband's jokes amuse you, after a quarter century of married life, you may truly be said to be happily married. Don't you?

Mrs. William Blair told me she had received a gift that she hardly knew where to put . . . a hand painted winter scene done on a bit of the white fungus growth found at the base of old trees. It is, of course, embellished with that glittering substance which sparkles like real snow.

I was just thinking how our ideas in art for the home change with the years. Martha is ashamed of the cardboard mottoes we used to have in the dining room: "God Bless Our Home," and "What Is Home Without a Mother?" These have been banished to the attic along with the "air castle" made of cardboard. Do you remember the "air castle"? Ours was, as I said, made of cardboard, but other materials were used for them, too. I know my Aunt Adelaide in Philadelphia had one made of straw in four inch lengths, strung together with twine, and having at the intersections a square of red flannel. It was quite a sight, with squares, diamonds, and cubes in it, the whole structure resembling a bird cage hanging in the center of the room, where the flies roosted, thus saving the walls and ceiling. Screens for the windows have rendered these air castles unnecessary.

I saw a variation of the painted butter bowl today which was unusually terrible. The artist had done it in relief, hills, valleys, and rocks being distributed in profusion before the whole thing was painted. This was to be used in summer to adorn the empty fireplace.

Aren't you disgusted with the mudslinging campaign of this year? Will is indignant at the aspersions cast on Blaine's character. But I tell him the Republicans have been just as active. Grover Cleveland's wild oats have been discussed in the papers in a manner to make him wince. And Henry Ward Beecher's support of Cleveland has been of doubtful benefit because of the way in which that old scandal about him has been rehashed. I don't believe women would do and say such puerile things if they were running an election. Much love,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Comments on the decorative art of yesterday continue to come in. E. R., in sending some amusing items, says: "I am wondering how long it will be before those long legged dolls will cease to give a French air to our better beds, and just what is beautiful or artistic about dressing up the poor telephone until it looks like one's maiden aunt." So the present day art has its critics, too.

Weather Proverbs: Many readers have sent variations of: "Evening red and morning gray, sets the traveler on his way." Another favorite is: "Rainbow at night, sailor's delight." Have you any less well known proverbs?

British Cruiser Causes a Stir in Montecito

Society Gives Many Gay Parties for Sir Reginald Plunkett and His Staf.

By Mrs. Joseph Coleman.

SANTA BARBARA, Cal. — [Special.]—Montecito society has used the visit to Santa Barbara of the British cruiser H. M. S. Norfolk as an excuse for many gay parties. Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor was appointed chairman of the entertainment committee, so you may know the affairs were well executed. On Monday afternoon Mrs. E. Palmer Gavit gave a garden party in honor of Vice Admiral the Honorable Sir Reginald Plunkett-Ernle-Erle-Drax, K. C. B., D. S. O., his staf, the captain, and the officers. Mrs. Gavit was a charming hostess and her garden beautiful and perfectly adapted to entertaining of this kind.

I was fortunate enough recently to attend another meeting of the Garden club of Santa Barbara and Montecito at the home of Mrs. Craig Heberton in Montecito. Her beautiful Spanish garden covers only about an acre, so they tell me, yet it gives one an extraordinary feeling of space. It is one of the loveliest small gardens here. This meeting was held in the patio, at the far end of which was a choice exhibition of about seven hundred varieties of dahlias from one of the nearby gardens. Lockwood de Forest was the guest speaker of the afternoon. He has just returned from an extended garden tour in England and Scandinavia and illustrated his talk with many specimens of cultivated plants which grow wild in England.

Mrs. Heberton will be remembered by the older Chicago families as the daughter of Dr. Nicholas Francis Cooke, who was a well known physician there in the early days.

Many Chicagoans Leaving for Home.

More summer visitors departing. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ryerson left yesterday for Chicago. Many parties were given in their honor, among them a dinner by Mr. and Mrs. James Ward Thorne, and another by Dr. and Mrs. Nathaniel Brush.

The Valley club has been the scene of much of the farewell entertaining. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Shaw gave a large luncheon there. Later there was still another lunch, followed by bridge, a third took place last Saturday. Mr. Shaw left for Chicago some time ago, and Mrs. Shaw, her son, Thomas Tyler, and Mrs. Charles G. King followed him shortly. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Strobel left on Tuesday.

Elite Favor Sandyland for Their "Beach Houses."

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Chatfield-Taylor gave a luncheon at their home, Far-Afield, for Mr. and Mrs. William R. Odell.

All roads do not lead away from Montecito, however, for Mr. and Mrs. Howard Elting are returning here to spend the winter and have taken a house on San Leandro lane.

I have wanted all summer to tell you something about Sandyland and I mustn't go away without doing so. It is one of the most amusing beach colonies here. It is only a few miles from Montecito. Started twenty-five years ago as a picnic place, its popularity grew and there was a demand for sites for beach houses. George Owen Knapp and C. K. G. Billings were among the first to build. Among other people you will know who now have houses there are the William Dickinsons, H. K. Elstons, William North Duanes, Mrs. Agnes P. Wilder, Miss Katherine Harvey, the Alfred Dieterichs, George Whitelaws, Malcolm Douglases, Girard Van B. Hales, W. Pierson Hamiltons, Harold Chases, Mrs. Mary Russell Perkins, and the Ralph Ishams. The Isham house is a Moorish palace built by the late young Albert Isham. These people refer to their places as "beach houses," but in reality they are lovely homes with every convenience and comfort. Below Sandyland proper is Sandyland Dunes, which is thickly settled with young marrieds.

INITIAL all Expense of the NEW GRACE Liner "Santa Lucia"

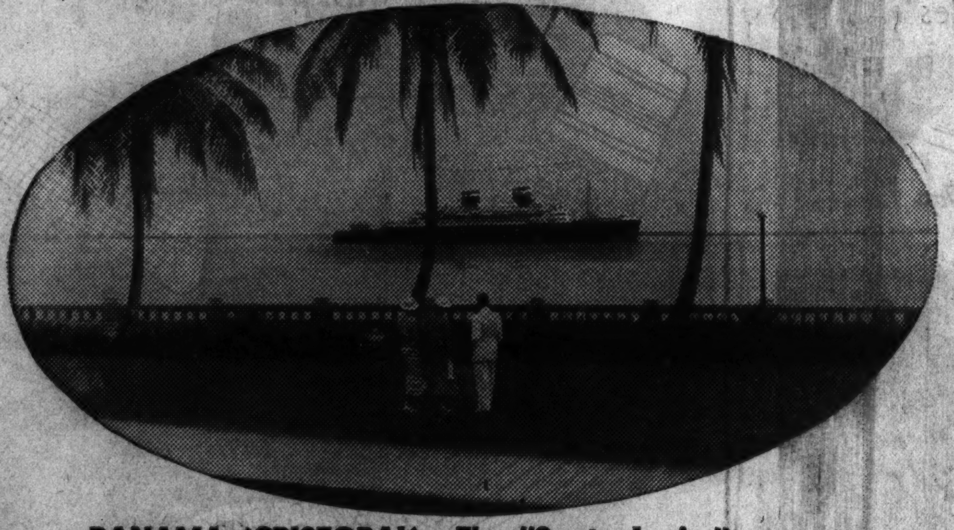
JAMAICA—Sugar Cane Plantation



PANAMA (CRISTOBAL)—The "Santa Lucia," as seen from the U. S. Government owned Hotel Washington

LIMA—capital of Peru, nestles at the foot of the three mile high Andes Mountains

THIS IS WHERE YOU GO!

The luxurious new GRACE "Santa Lucia" sails from New York October 27th, 1934, at noon on the first of several unusual thirty-nine day, ALL-EXPENSE Cruises to the Caribbean and the West Coast of South America. Lovely Kingston, Jamaica, is the first port of call. Here autos await to take you on a beautiful drive thru the city and into the mountains, stopping en route at the famed Myrtle Bank Hotel.

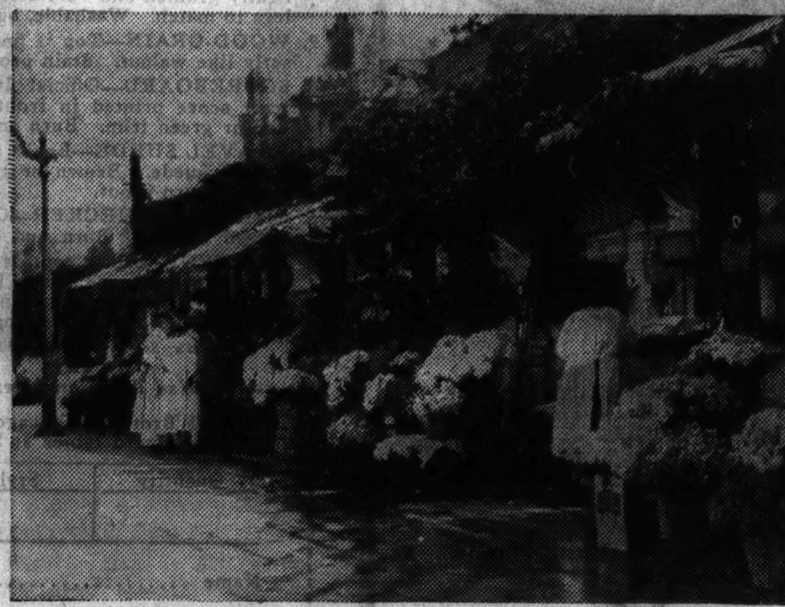
From Kingston the ship proceeds to Cristobal, Atlantic entrance to the Panama Canal. Included in the all-expense itinerary is an auto trip to Old Cristobal, Battery Beach, U. S. Army Flying Field, Gatun Locks and Colon, famous for its cafes, cabarets and shops. Next day you make the passage of the Panama Canal, arriving at Balboa in time to stroll round Panama City or patronize a night cafe. Next morning an interesting drive takes you to Old Panama, razed by the pirate Morgan in 1671, with its ancient ruins still standing; the Bull Ring; the Juan Franco Race Track; Miramar Club; the Cathedral; the President' Palace; the colorful waterfront; and to Duque Heights where you will have a magnificent panoramic view of the Isthmus.

Then southward thru the Pacific to Buenaventura where the thatched huts of the Colombian natives nestle near the bay—Ecuador and up the jungle-bordered Guayas River to Guayaquil, equally famed for its Panama hats and alligator hunts, where a shore trip is provided so that you may see the city and surrounding suburbs. Sailing from Guayaquil past the first rocky promontories of Peru you make a brief stop at Talara, port for the International Petroleum Company in Peru. The next day you reach Salaverry. Here a special trip is arranged to Trujillo and that strange dead pre-Inca city of Chan Chan, once the center of the Chimu Empire, with its crumbling ruins of magnificent temples and palaces.

The next stop is Callao, the port for Lima, capital of proud Peru, which is reached after a short drive over a beautiful highway. Lying at the foot of mountains three miles high, Lima was named "City of the Kings" because of its wealth and magnificence. During the day you visit the old churches and palaces that reflect the almost Oriental splendor of Lima's early history, its markets and narrow streets, the massive twin towered Cathedral where the mummy of Pizarro is on view in a glass casket and many other intriguing spots in and about this city. After the tour you return to the "Santa Lucia." The next day is at your disposal for shopping, sightseeing or other entertainment.

From Lima a magnificent Pan American-GRACE airplane trip may be arranged for those passengers who are air-minded. Instead of returning to the ship after the tour of the city, you spend the night at Lima, leaving the next morning on a five hour flight over some of the world's most gorgeous scenery, traveling along the coast and over the Andes to Arequipa, Peru. This delightful city of perpetual sunshine and flowers, rests in the shadow of nearby "El Misti," snow-capped magic mountain of South America. From Arequipa you cross the colorful desert of Islay to Mollendo (4 hours by rail), where you rejoin the "Santa Lucia" and continue South on the scheduled itinerary. An extra charge of fifty dollars is made for this special trip.

From Mollendo your luxurious liner continues still further south to Valparaiso, Chile, "the Vale of Paradise." "Valpo," as it is affectionately termed, is the greatest port on the West Coast as well as one of the most beautiful. Fashionable Vina del Mar, which is nearby, with its famous race track and beach is called the "Lido of South America." You are ashore two days which afford ample time to explore the city and its beautiful surroundings and to visit the capital of Chile, Santiago, where you spend the night (hotel room with bath, all meals and sight-seeing included in the all-expense itinerary). In every way it is one of the world's most charming capitals, placed like a jewel against the magnificent setting of the snow-capped Andes. The northward trip, from Valparaiso, is varied every day or two by fascinating visits ashore to many intriguing ports and places on the West Coast of South America.



SANTIAGO (CHILE)—1700 feet above the sea, is a city of perfect climate—one of the most charming capitals in the world

Santa Fe Holds Foreign Charm for Travelers

Old World Atmosphere and Tranquility Fill Spot in Our Own New Mexico.

By Virgina Huss.

TO the prospective vacationist with a longing for foreign scenes but a strictly domestic-minded budget, picturesque Santa Fé, famed in the early annals of the southwest, is an ideal goal. The tranquility of the centuries envelops this "ancient city of the holy faith." Something of the old world implanted here by the first Spanish explorers, nearly four hundred years ago, pervades the town's daily life. Indeed, so completely has Santa Fé stood outside the path of the new world influence that it is a distinct jolt to the departing visitor to find he is still in twentieth century United States.

Although Santa Fé is the capital of New Mexico, no railroad enters there. A citizenry in love with its quiet city has consistently refused to permit the railroads to build through Santa Fé. It is largely because of this that the charm of the ancient town has been preserved. Yet Santa Fé is not inaccessible to the visitor. Broad, paved highways that are constantly being improved and extended lead the traveler to Santa Fé through the country of the magnificent Sangre de Cristo [Blood of Christ] mountains. Motor coaches make convenient connections with the nearest rail stations in Albuquerque and Lamy, but the snort of the "iron horse" never disturbs the calm of the old town.

Padres Remind One of Rural Old Spain.

The sight of a venerable padre, in full skirts, flowing cloak, and broad brimmed hat, silhouetted against a high patio wall as he hurries down a narrow lane, helps to convince one that here is not America but rural Spain. The illusion is heightened by the sound of Spanish, which is spoken quite generally. The padre addresses his parishioners in Spanish more often than in English. Many of the "natives," swarthy descendants of the early Spanish settlers, speak nothing else, while all but the youngest of the Indians know no other white man's language.

The double towers of old St. Francis cathedral dominate the village scene. Each dawn the tolling of the cathedral bell breaks the morning stillness, waking the town to another day and bringing old women in black with shawls drawn tightly around seamed and lethery tan faces, and dark skinned men in sombreros, hurrying to early mass. Shortly there is the call of the wood vendor as he plies his slow way about the turning village streets, leading his tiny, gentle burro with a saddle of firewood gathered in the foothills. And always in the clear air is the delightfully pungent tang of wood fires.

Adobe Houses Are Harmonious in Surroundings.

One has the feeling that the flat roofed adobe houses grew from the soil rather than under man's hand, so completely are they in harmony with their environment. Everywhere one sees blue window frames, blue for happiness, the blue of the eyes of the Virgin Mary, so goes the old tradition. Occasionally, too, there is a bright blue door, a relic from the days when a blue door proclaimed the presence of a marriageable daughter in the house. And every house has its strings of bright red chili peppers drying in the sun, and its patio, large or small, always a cool retreat behind high adobe walls, overrun with exotically colored flowers for all but a few months of the year.

Santa Fé is rich in historical interest. Here is old San Miguel church, said to be the oldest church in the United States. It was built by the Spaniards in 1541, nearly eighty years before the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth Rock. Beautifully hand carved beams, brought from Spain, support the roof, and in the entry hall stands the old San José bell, too heavy now for the age weakened church tower. Cast in Spain in 1356 and brought to Santa Fé in 1712, this massive bell has a mellow, haunting old world tone. Beneath the ancient church floor lie the bones of more than three hundred Spanish adventurers, many of them famous fighters in early New Mexican history.

Palace of Governors Figures in History.

Flanking the town plaza is the Palace of Governors, ruled through the years of New Mexico's turbulent history by Spaniards, Indians, Mexicans, and finally by the United States. In the deep seclusion of these adobe walls, in some places reaching a thickness of four and five feet, Gov. Lew Wallace wrote the final chapters of "Ben Hur." The building has been converted now into a state museum, where the records of New Mexico's colorful history are carefully preserved.

Older than Santa Fé, older indeed than the memory of man, are the Indian pueblos scattered throughout the canyons and valleys of the Rio Grande within convenient driving distance of Santa Fé. Here the "Oldest Americans" live as they have lived for thousands of years, a peace loving, agricultural people, raising their grain and grazing their animals on the rocky hillsides. These Indians are singularly purely bred. Although they have suffered the rule of the white man, the Pueblos have maintained their ancient ways of life. Here the blanket is still significant. The Pueblos may buy blankets of the white man's making, often in incongruous colors and designs, but they are rarely seen without them.

Indians Worship as White Men Taught Them.

Above ground each of the pueblo communities has its mission church, where the Indian worships as the white man taught him, although not without an admixture of his own paganism. But below ground are the ancient "kivas," where the men of the tribe practice rites that have come to them from their forefathers, ceremonies that were old, no doubt, before Christ was born. From these sacred kiva ceremonials the Indian has consistently excluded his white conquerors.

Mounties Told to Go Out and Get 'Serpent'

Extoled for their ability "to get their man," the Mounties have been assigned the task of catching an ogopogo—a sea serpent.

Since nobody since the day of ancient mariners has succeeded in hog-tying an ogopogo, it appears the Mounties are in for a lot of work, if their reputation is to remain unblemished.

Described as "about the diameter of a stovepipe, 25 to 30 feet long, gray in color, with a slimy tapered head," the monster has been seen at points eight miles apart at four different times by four different witnesses, all reputable folk.

The witnesses, three coal mine operators and a farmer, say the monster swims at a speed of about 15 miles an hour, lashing the water into foam as it moves.

The ogopogo was reported to Royal Canadian Mounted police and crowds of more than 100 have gathered from time to time on the river bank in hope of catching the ogopogo.

William Shurrett, farmer, apparently had the best view of the critter. He said, "I was crossing a bridge and I saw waves like those made by a steam launch approaching.

"Then I saw a sea serpent coming through the shallow water. There was no mistake about it. It had an ugly head with a tapering neck and was about 30 feet long. There was a bulge in its middle, as if it had just eaten a big meal."

Loss of Arctic Ship Was Not in Vain, Says This Explorer

MOSCOW.—[U. P.]—Despite the sinking of the soviet steamer Cheliuskin in the Arctic ocean, its journey was not in vain, in the opinion of N. V. Pinyegin, arctic explorer.

Valuable data on the course of Arctic streams, on temperatures, and on the location and types of sea fauna were gathered by Professor Otto Schmidt and his hardy band according to Pinyegin.

Also some changes in the Arctic map may be made as a result of the Cheliuskin's voyage, he added. For instance, Schmidt found that some of the Arctic islands had been placed erroneously on the map. One, Solitude Island, was found 30 miles from its supposed location.

Pinyegin further reasoned that the experience of the Cheliuskin, which lacked only a few miles of completing its journey through to Behring Strait, would teach masters of other vessels the best route through the Polar seas in the future.

After the Cheliuskin sunk last February, Schmidt and his crew established a camp on an icefloe from which they eventually were rescued by airplanes.

Live Locusts for Sale in Argentina

BUENOS AIRES.—(AP)—Live locusts are quoted at 3½ cents per 66 pound sack in Buenos Aires.

The price was fixed by the government department of agricultural defense, which buys the insects, kills them and sells them for poultry feed or exports them to Europe—particularly to Germany—for fertilizer.

They are bought "on the hoof" because when bought killed they sometimes are not suitable for marketing.

FAST SHIP ADDED TO SERVICE TO SOUTH AMERICA

WITH the purpose of assisting back to normal volume the trade and travel between the United States and the west coast of South America, the Grace line has placed the S. S. Santa Lucia, one of its four new de luxe liners, in regular service between New York, the Panama canal, Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, and Chile.

The Santa Lucia will be the fastest passenger vessel ever engaged in regular service to the southern continent. With the Santa Clara and Santa Barbara it will provide fortnightly express service, while the Santa Maria, Santa Rita, Santa Elisa, and Santa Inez will sail in the alternate weeks on a slightly slower schedule, calling at additional ports. The result is a sailing from New York every Saturday. This provides opportunities for stopovers wherever desired.

Few markets were harder hit by the depression than those of the west coast of South America, but in the last six months there has been a large increase in commercial activity in Colombia, Ecuador, Peru, and Chile, and even in Bolivia, despite the war in which that country is engaged. The Grace line has maintained its service throughout the depression.

The travel business down there, particularly in Chile and Peru, is feeling the attraction of the favorable rate of exchange. While the franc and the pound have risen in terms of the American dollar, the reverse has been true in Latin America, where the dollar now goes further than ever before.

The Santa Lucia, along with the Santa Clara and Santa Barbara, comparatively new vessels of the Grace fleet, will be operated on a fast schedule from New York to Valparaiso, calling at Canal Zone; Buenaventura, Colombia; Guayaquil, Ecuador; Talara, Salaverry, Callao, and Mollendo, Peru; Arica, Antofagasta, and Valparaiso, Chile. It will call both south and north bound at Kingston, Jamaica, permitting passengers on board to visit briefly that British colony.

Jim Jeffries and Party to Hunt in Wyoming Wilds

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Sept. 22.—In quest of elk, moose, and possibly mountain sheep, Jim Jeffries, former heavyweight champion of the world, is planning an extended hunting trip into the wilds of Wyoming this fall, heading a party of 20 Californians.

Gus Fleischli, president of the Cheyenne Sportsman's club, has been asked by Ed Wright of Burbank, Cal., to make arrangements for the party. The visitors will come in a chartered bus and expect to arrive late in the season when, according to Wright, they believe their chances of bagging big game will be better.

George Earnshaw of the Chicago White Sox has obtained a license to hunt elk, moose, and mountain sheep in the Cody country east of Yellowstone park.

The elk season in Wyoming opens Oct. 15. In some counties it will last only 15 days, but in others hunting will be permitted until Nov. 30. Among the counties with the longer season are Teton, Sublette, Park, Lincoln, and Fremont. The moose population of the Wyoming game areas is approximately 3,000, of which 150 bull moose may be killed this year.

Ancient Camps Form Study.

LENINGRAD.—(AP)—The Academy of History of the U. S. S. R. is planning thorough exploration of ancient hunting camps at the village of Milta, near Irkutsk. The camps apparently were of hunters of the mammoth and the great northern reindeer of 25,000 years ago.

Please tell me if this would be a good time to visit Yosemite National park.—K. G. L.

Persons living in the Yosemite valley the year around are almost unanimous in declaring that the autumn months have the most appeal there. The weather is uniformly good, there's a real tang in the air, and the woods turn to the reds, yellows, and oranges of Indian summer.

I have been told that one of the round the world cruises this winter will take in a place where crocodile skins may be had for the asking. Can you give me details?—V. M.

The Franconia, making the trip via the southern hemisphere, will stop at a new port, Majunga, on the island of Madagascar. There will be plenty of time to visit a river called "Tsiribihina," so blocked with crocodiles that there is no way of crossing it. These may be shot with ease, and the natives will do the rest, even to wrapping the skin in a preservative.

Is there a deposit required on portable boats and canoes taken into Canada?—F. J.

A deposit was required until this year, but under new regulations it has been done away with.

What and where is the Castle of Adana?—A. R.

The castle, to the northeast of Tarsus, in southern Turkey, dates back to the year 782. It was built by Haroun-al-Raschid of "Arabian Nights" fame, fame.

Animals in Park Move Down for Winter Season

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Wyo., Sept. 22.—The big game animals of Yellowstone are banding together into large groups and moving down from their high summer range to the lower grassy slopes and meadows in the park.

With the summer range rapidly drying, herds of elk are descending from the hills and can be seen grazing only short distances from the main park highways. Visitors choose the early morning or twilight hours for their game stalking expeditions, and each day brings reports of increasing numbers of the big game animals being seen in the open country.

Elk are already beginning to send their bugling calls through the valleys of the park. Both moose and elk are rapidly shedding the velvet from their antlers, and their sleek hides glisten in the early morning or late evening sun.

This Vagabond Travels in Style in the Skyways

By Eugene Ressencourt.

I GUESS I have traveled the better part of 100,000 miles in the last four years, using all manner of transportation, from the most primitive to the most modern, from first class de luxe to coolie class. Sometimes I stowed away on ocean liners, sometimes I worked as a sailor; once I journeyed on a sailing junk with opium smugglers; vivid in my memory is my horseback ride to Tibet with three Mohammedans, and my thrilling ride down the Yellow river on a raft of inflated goatskins. I was a penniless traveler; my transport was bought mainly with nerve and hardship.

Three years ago I found myself without a penny in southern California, with a hike through the forty-eight United States behind me—and before me a trip around the world, to be worked out at the mercy of chance. I tried for months to ship out as a seaman, and tried in vain. I would do almost anything to get started. As a last resort I risked my life in many attempts at stowing away—and was on my way! I was going to return some day to California from the other direction. . . .

When I reached New York, as a stowaway from France, I received a couple of hundred dollars for some writings—and I completed my trip in style.

That Lifting Sensation.

Chicago, Noon, Aug. 26, 1934.—Feeling meek and a little afraid of the winged monster before me, I board a great orange and blue air liner and seat myself, along with others, in a cushioned leather armchair and strap myself down. The propellers are turned over.

The plane trembles a bit. The motors roar—like huge dynamos, drowning all other sounds. We roll over the ground with a peculiar bouncing sensation. We hesitate a moment, then push forward, turn left, and speed over the field. We bounce—we roll on—we're in the air.

I feel a peculiar lifting sensation. The wind sings by. We float on a great cushion of space. It seems that we are hardly moving. The houses and objects below turn into miniature. The thin white auto roads cut the green flat fields, like long bamboo slits laid crosswise and dividing the ground into squares, rectangles, and triangles—with a ribbon of water or a pool here and there, and a few bulbous clumps which have the appearance of cauliflour, but are really trees.

I'm not exactly afraid—but when I look down I opine that there would be quite a long distance to fall, though I am consoled that if the plane drops down it won't leave me up here. We're about 3,800 feet high now, and the terrain, stretching way off into the distance, is somewhat plaided and seems not unlike a great square of gingham.

Conversation Under Difficulties.

There are twelve passengers on this ship, besides three blue-uniformed pilots, one of whom is taking the place of a stewardess. He is passing chewing gum and cotton wadding around to the passengers. I direct my voice to him, but he does not hear, for the motors buzz like a thousand sawmills.

"What is the gum for?" I shout. And he answers, "How did you know I had a gun? I have it because we're carrying mail."

"I said gum," I yell. "O, that," he hollers, "is for chewing, to help drown out the noise—or something, and the cotton's to plug up your ears with."

The plane is snug and comfortable, well heated. The cushioned seats—a row of doubles and one of singles—are arranged on either side of a narrow aile. On each side of the passenger compartment is a row of small rectangular windows, giving one an ample view of the surrounding country. There are ash trays, ventilators, and push buttons, with a rack overhead, on either side, for hand luggage. (All I carry with me is a little knapsack, a brief case, and a new walking stick.) At the rear of the compartment is a small vestibule with a lavatory. Further in the rear is a small pantry in which refreshments are kept. Everything is well provided: drinking water and cups, soap and towels, first aid kit. The whole is orderly and systematically arranged. It looks as though air travel can be done quite luxuriously.

When the Wind Grows Playful.

We are sailing over southern Illinois and have just passed Bloomington. Looking down and backward I observe that the flat countryside—studded here and there with clumps of trees—is like a great wooden board, green, but splotched with squares of drab paint—brown, tan, purple.

Against the light blue sky, ethereal, fleecy white clouds surround us. The horizon is shrouded in a foggy haze. Sometimes a gust of wind seizes our plane and lifts and bounces it and flips it gently about in a seemingly playful manner; this creates the sensation that one experiences in a quick drop of an elevator.

My ears are choked up from the altitude; I try to sing and cannot register a sound without shouting. Ah! Now I can sing to my heart's content without other people hearing it and threatening to choke me.

The passengers seem to be enveloped in their own thoughts, as am I. What a wonderful improvement this is on riding a stubborn mule in the interior of China!

The air screams in the ventilators like the singing of myriads of mosquitoes. This is all rather pleasant and puts one in a sleepy mood. As I begin to doze off, I notice, through the corner of the window, the bright orange of the wing and the bright blue of the body—and these colors bring my thoughts back to the University of Illinois. . . .

Toy Roofs and Chimneys.

We are passing over Springfield. What a funny looking affair, that microscopic city down there! It gives one a rather pleasant feeling to look down on the little toy roofs and chimneys; the crawling automobiles, like small black bugs; the few hair lines made by the railroad tracks, with the caterpillarlike trains and the peanut shell-like gondolas. We come to the little airport at the edge of town, begin to descend, and circle about; we gradually float to earth—a very soothing sensation—and make what I imagine is a perfect landing.

We're up again, with a nice take-off and a short ride, and then down again at St. Louis, which I haven't seen since I was nine months old.

Transferring from our Curtis biplane to a Ford tri-motored monoplane, we are up once more and passing over Missouri, which appears quite as flat as Illinois, but heavily laden with small green forests which, from up here, look like clumps of moss growing on the vari-colored game board that is the earth. This Ford glides along in a wonderfully smooth fashion; I am able to write as though we were not moving at all.

6:05 p. m. Near the Missouri-Oklahoma border we pass over some heavy green forests scattered among flat fields. And now Oklahoma. It seems sparsely settled as to cities and towns; here and there is a farm house—here and there a lone haystack—irrigation—forests—numerous little dried up streams—here and there a pond of water and some winding rivers. Sunset: orange-pink fluffy clouds, intermingled with purple ones, in eastern sky; in western sky a rose, purple, and yellow mother-of-pearl effect.

A Haze of Dark Splotches.

At about 6:40 we stop at the Tulsa airport. The other passengers have a light supper in the passenger lunchroom of the port, while I eat some lunch I have brought with me. At about 7 we rise into the sky and circle to the west.

Now it is almost dark; down below the electrically lighted spires of stray oil wells. The earth has become a haze of dark splotches.

7:45. The lights of a large city are below us: two long boulevards, streaming with automobiles and lined with red Neon signs; the lighted spires of a nearby oil field; twinkling street lights and others scattered over the whole inky background. Oklahoma City. We head toward the ground and swing about in a sweeping arc to the rectangular air field, whose borders are well defined by lamps.

8:20. Many lights, here and there, pierce the inky blackness below. And a great yellow moon—almost full—is in the eastern sky, seemingly on the same level as we are. An occasional red light indicates an oil well. Dallas. Then Fort Worth.

10:55. We transfer to a large Condor sleeper-plane. It is carrying a full load of twelve passengers. The passenger compartment is divided into six apartments—three on each side of the aile—of two individual seats each, soft cushioned and lether fitted. When one desires to sleep he rings for the stewardess, who comes and converts the two seats into an upper and a lower berth.

The airship is luxuriously fitted with woodwork and upholstery. The walls are about half a foot thick, insulated, to a great extent, against the roar of the motors.

The other passengers take to their berths. I go to sleep as I am.

A Dark and Angry Sea.

5:52 a. m. Arizona. About two hours ago, just at dawn, I was awakened by the stewardess, as per my instructions. But I missed the sunrise, for the sun seemed to slip up between the mountains somewhere. The scenery, as I write this, has an exquisite charm. We pass over a great desert country—irrigated sandy basins between rugged and jagged groups of small sandstone mountains; they are not connected in a continuous range, but lie in singular groups between the great flat stretches of sand. The slight morning haze over the desert causes the little mountains to seem pantasmagorical rather than real. We stop at Phoenix for a few minutes and then continue.

As I look to the rear the terrain appears as a mighty sea of dark and angry waters, the mountain groups gigantic waves bounding hither and thither. The sky is blue above and of a peculiar blue-gray haze at the western horizon. To the eastward are thin clouds.

We pass over the muddy ribbon that is the Colorado river and into California, where almost immediately the mountain bits begin to lose their jagged appearance and become the more rolling, partly brush covered hills that are common to southern California.

At the End of the Trail.

On the left we have a glimpse of the great Salton sea, 127 feet below sea level. From here it is a sapphire blue. We are nearing the San Bernardino mountains. They are rugged and appear as heaps of rocks draped over with brown velvet on which the dust of years has been allowed to collect. We pass over San Gorgonio pass with San Jacinto peak on our left.

We are beyond the San Bernardino range, and, losing track of the mountains, we float over a green, fertile land full of orange groves and vineyards.

We see the city of Pomona down there, a pattern of white stucco houses. And now as we sail over Altadena a white blanket of murky clouds covers the earth on one side; it is a peculiar effect and looks something like a broad frothing sea. On a distant peak two white specks mark Mount Wilson observatory. Finally Pasadena and Glendale. We begin to descend upon the latter—and now we are gliding to a landing at the Union air terminal at 6 a. m. . . .

I am hiking with brisk step along the broad white highway that leads to Los Angeles. My wealth amounts to 8 cents. My journey around the world is ended.

Glory of Great Gaming Resort Fades in China

Roulette, Opium Monopolies of Macao Go Begging; Chinese Blamed.

By John Powell.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI.—The glory of Macao, once the premier gambling resort on the coast of Asia, is fading rapidly because of Chinese competition.

For many years the night boats out of the British colony of Hongkong and also out of the nearby Chinese metropolis of Canton were filled with seekers of fortune and excitement in the gambling resorts of Macao. While the majority of the passengers were Chinese, foreigners also, particularly tourists, helped to swell the shipping lists of the nightly "gambling" boats bound Macaoward. For the Chinese the little Portuguese city had a further seductive charm, for in addition to the gambling places, consisting of fan-tan, roulette, and dog racing, there were innumerable places where opium could be smoked without the hazard of police interference.

A Rival on the Mainland.

But a thick and gloomy depression has settled down on Macao, and the gambling and opium monopolies, which are auctioned annually to the highest bidders by the Portuguese authorities, are going begging. The reason is not due to the world economic collapse or a moral wave on the part of the Portuguese controlers of the port. It is due entirely to the fact that the Chinese have established a rival gambling resort on the mainland, which is more accessible to the Chinese multitudes from Hongkong and Canton who previously contributed their fortunes, large and small, to the Portuguese resorts.

The new Chinese owned and operated gambling resort, started about a year ago, is situated in the little rural village of Shumchun, on the Canton-Kowloon railway, which connects Canton and Hongkong. Shumchun is on the mainland, just over the edge of what is known as the British "new territory," and since the resorts are on Chinese territory, the British colonial authorities at Hongkong cannot interfere—despite the fact that the Shumchun resorts are rapidly drawing much of the surplus cash out of the British colony.

A Forest of Shacks and Sheds.

Since it is possible for residents of Hongkong to reach Shumchun by rail in forty minutes, whereas it required several hours to travel by boat to Macao, the new Chinese resort has a big advantage over the Portuguese gambling places. Also, the same traveling advantage exists for residents of Canton. Hence Shumchun has grown like the proverbial mushroom. In fact, the influx of concessionaires has been so rapid that they have not waited for the construction of permanent buildings, but have constructed a veritable forest of shacks, sheds, and temporary structures, made from bamboo and mats. While the external appearance is not attractive, the interiors are palatial with their silk drapings and gold and silver ornamentation.

But woe to the amateur or professional photographer who would attempt to make a picture of the interior. A TRIBUNE photographer had to watch his step, for the place is closely guarded by soldiers, who wear the same uniforms as those attached to the Canton garrison of Gen. Chen Chi-tang, head of the South China government.

$3,000,000 Loan Is Whispered.

No statistics are available as to the income of the new Shumchun resorts, but some idea of the extent is gained from the fact that one of the resorts which operates fan-tan and roulette claims to have a daily expense account of about $3,000 in United States currency. A better idea, however, of the prosperity of the place may be gained from the fact that the Chinese company which controls all the concessions, including the new hotels and cabaret dancing places, allegedly advanced a recent loan of $3,000,000 to the Canton government. The entire Shumchun enterprise is Chinese [Cantonese] owned, and while the actual names of the proprietors are unknown, gossip connects them rather closely with the act[illegible] government at Canton. Gossip also says that a considerable portion of the revenues goes to the Canton war chest which [illegible] used for financing Canton's growing air fleet, an obvious offset to the Nanking air fleet, which is being financed from an official lottery.

The most striking phase of the Shumchun resorts, apparent to the visitor immediately upon entrance to the "big tent," is that most of the gamblers are women. Like all resorts, it is so arranged as to appeal to all kinds of pocketbooks, fat ones and lean ones. The plainly clothed peasant or servant woman can venture [illegible] 20 cent piece, equivalent to a nickel in American money, while the richly gowned wife or concubine of some [illegible]h official or mer[illegible]nt may play for stakes as high as she likes at the [illegible]ette tables.

DETOURS

By Frederic Babcock.

THEY'RE making it pretty tough for most of the college students nowadays. While hundreds of thousands of them are returning to their campuses, there to indulge in the annual tussle with calculus and torts and football, a few hundred others are getting set for a course of study that will take them around the world.

When the S. S. Volendam sets sail from New York on Thursday of next week it will become a floating university, with regular professors, pupils, broad decks for a campus, and everything except a million dollar stadium. Included in the curriculum will be 225 days at sea and visits to 60 ports in 34 foreign countries.

And will the stay-at-homes be jealous?

● Thanksgiving day will be spent, not in dying for dear old Rutgers on the field of football battle, but in viewing the wonders of Japan.

The Christmas holidays at Saigon will offer two adventures: to the uncovered city of Angkor, which flourished 2,000 years before Christ, and to the rice fields of Indo-China, where the French thrive thousands of miles from France.

After Bangkok, the Malay states, Borneo, and Bali, there will be an eight-day trip to Agra and the capital of British India.

Then the Near East, the Mediterranean, France, and Spain, and, just to find out what the students of other lands are doing, visits to Eton and Oxford.

● Perhaps the collegians will get some new ideas when they view the Taj Mahal and learn of the great love story immortalized in marble there. They should profit from scenes where once flamed the wiles of Cleopatra and where, still earlier, there were framed laws that still call for the obedience of mankind. What they'll get out of the land of Don Quixote and his windmills is problematical, but the lesson is there if they want it.

Throughout the cruise there will be scenes vivifying history and science and literature. The sources of civilization and of life itself will pass before the eyes and minds of those who can see and comprehend.

● Their education completed, the collegians can return to the homeland—and try to get a job on the strength of what they've learned.

Recipe makes 8 individual cakes.

8 maraschino cherries	3/4 cup sugar
1/4 cup pecan nutmeats	1 egg, unbeaten

Cream shortening; add sugar; beat well. 6. Add egg; beat vigorously. 7. Add sifted dry ingredients alternately with milk and flavoring; mix well. 8. Pour batter over prepared fruit in individual pans. Bake in moderate oven. 9. After baking, allow to stand about five minutes before inverting on serving plate. 10. (ABOVE) It's practically no work to keep your floors bright this way. First, pour a little Glo-Coat right on the floor. An ounce or two at a time is best. (AT LEFT) Then spread Glo-Coat lightly over floor with a cloth, or the long-handled Glo-Coat Applier. That's all you do! Glo-Coat dries to shining brightness in 20 minutes without any rubbing or polishing. Leaves floors easier to care for. Try it. • I was going to buy an Oriental Rug and then I saw the new GULISTAN •

What a find!

A rug made in this country that has the look of a fine Royal Kashan from Persia—and at such a saving!

Experts are amazed at the similarity!

There is the same sleek, smooth, jeweled expanse of color! Luxury so lustrous and beautiful that it makes over any room!

How is this result achieved? By a fabric containing 1,382,400 individual tufts!

The wools are imported from the Orient, the finest dyes are used and each Gulistan is finished with the same silky sheen as the costliest Persian rugs.

This achievement by the leading makers of Oriental rugs has caused a revolution in values. It is due to a vital change in the Jacquard Loom, exclusive to Karagheusian. (Patents pending.)

Today no other rug is woven like Gulistan! Only Gulistan has the Triple Lock Grip which makes the tufts practically immovable, even under the hardest wear!

The patterns reproduce the very choicest of Persia's great rugs, Kashans, Kirmans, Sarouks, many of them museum masterpieces. You can obtain them in 23 sizes, from scatter rugs (18 x 34 inches: $6.50) to extra large sizes (11 ft. 3 in. by 21 ft.: $347.) All sizes run full!

Easy payments at most stores.

A Champion Fisherman Catches a Record-Breaking Fish

By John A. Menaugh

IF ANYONE seeking the utmost in thrills would try to manage a wild bull on the end of a slender fish line from the rear seat of a flivver, with the prairie beneath him bouncing him up and down in twelve foot bounces and someone heaving buckets of cold water into his face, he might be undergoing an experience not dissimilar to that of Thomas M. Howell when he caught a 956-pound tuna. Howell is a Chicago business man, sportsman, and champion fisherman. The 956-pound tuna, which he captured off Liverpool, Nova Scotia, on Aug. 17 last, in an exciting battle lasting 1 hour and 48 minutes, was the largest fish of that species ever taken with rod and reel.

Howell's tussle with the record-breaking fish, though violent while it lasted, was almost as nothing in the way of an endurance contest compared with his fight with a similar fish a few days earlier. At 11 o'clock on the morning of Monday, Aug. 6, he hooked a tuna that was not brought to gaff until 1 o'clock on the morning of Thursday, Aug. 9. For 62 hours he and a guest and his fishing captain and a launchman fought it out with that long-winded tuna, through storm and fog, through day and night, and through waves that more than once threatened to swamp their 22-foot fishing launch. And the fish they caught then weighed 792 pounds — 164 pounds less than the record-breaker.

Adventures such as these are big moments even in the life of a champion fisherman who has taken a 405-pound broadbill swordfish off Montauk, Long Island; a 140-pound sailfish and a 650-pound black marlin swordfish from the waters around the Galapagos Islands in the Pacific, scores of giant tarpon off the Florida keys, and hundreds of other fish of various species up and down the Atlantic coast. Howell, well qualified to take the role of an expert in matters pertaining to big-game fishing, believes the tuna is not quite as able a scrapper as the marlin swordfish, pound for pound, and that the gamest fish of all that swim the seas is the dolphin.

Five giant fish, including the record-breaking specimen, the 792-pounder, and a third weighing 780 pounds, were caught by Howell off Liverpool this summer. The big fish follow schools of herring into Liverpool bay, forage about the nets of the commercial fishermen placed along the shores of the bay, and feast upon dead herring cast out of the nets by the fishermen. No place else in the world are larger tuna found. The big fellows belong to a species, Thunnus thynnus, of the mackerel family. They are, in fact, the biggest of the mackerel, and sometimes are called horse mackerel, a name surely applicable to a fish that literally weighs as much as a horse.

For many years the fish of this species have gone under the name of tunny, especially in Atlantic waters. In the Pacific, and specifically about Santa Catalina Island, where they are taken for sport, of more recent date they have been given the name tuna (pronounced too-na). The layman is most apt to think of fish meat in cans when he hears the term tunny, and most apt to think of fishing with rod and reel when he hears the term tuna. In other words, tuna is the stylish name for tunny. In all sorts of fishing the public from time to time

How Science Vies with the Silkworm's Art

By C. Robert Moulton

THERE is the best proverbial authority for the statement that one cannot make a silken purse from a sow's ear. With this literal statement everyone used to be in agreement until a chemist by the name of Arthur D. Little decided to try to do this very thing.

Dr. Little knew that silk, which comes from the cocoons made by silkworms, was made of protein secreted by the worms in the form of a moist thread which, when spun into shape and dried by the air, became a cocoon. He also knew that a sow's ear had a lot of protein in the skin and cartilage of which it was made. Furthermore, he knew that skin and cartilage could be made to yield a soluble protein called gelatin when boiled with water.

So he proceeded to make the gelatin solution, which was forced out through a die in the form of a thread and made to harden by suitable means. The resulting artificial silk was woven into a fabric and then used to fashion a woman's white purse.

About ten years ago Dr. Little showed this purse for the first time to a group of chemists gathered in convention in an eastern city. Thus does the research chemist challenge nature.

Artificial silk is in reality much older than this silk purse made from the sow's ear. About fifty years ago Comte Hilaire de Chardonnet took out a patent for collodion, or Chardonnet silk, which had nitrocellulose in place of gelatin as its base. This French count had been working with the famous chemist and bacteriologist Pasteur while the latter was engaged in working to conquer the disease that had been destroying the natural silk industry of France. So he knew much about how the silkworm made its silk.

In place of using a protein as his starting point, however, De Chardonnet used cellulose in the form of cotton fibers. These he dissolved and changed to a nitrate of cellulose by means of nitric and sulphuric acids. The resulting nitrocellulose was largely used as collodion, as the alcohol-ether solution of the nitrocellulose is called.

About the same time J. W. Swan made the first textile material which was called artificial silk. A commercial application of the product other than as collodion was in the preparation of carbon filaments for electric light bulbs. For this purpose cotton wool was dissolved in strong solutions of zinc chloride or in Schweizer's reagent.

Other attempts at making artificial silk were based on the use of casein, gelatin, egg albumin, agar agar, carrageen, and glass. None of these products gives a silk which can compete with the natural product. Cellulose, on the other hand, does yield a good silk, and it is the basis of modern artificial silk and lacquers. The commercial development along this line dates from 1892, when Cross and Bevan of England discovered that a viscous product called viscose could be made from cotton linters or high grade sulphite wood pulp, both sources of cellulose, using sodium hydroxide solutions and carbon bisulphide to swell the dried mercerized cellulose.

Another thing that was required before the artificial production of silk could be a success was a spinning box for the new material, which C. F. Topham invented in 1900. But the World war gave the final impetus to this industry. In 1927 235 million pounds of viscose silk was manufactured.

The nitrocellulose of Chardonnet was inflammable and explosive. Another name for it is guncotton. Celluloid is a compressed, solid solution of nitrated cellulose in camphor or a camphor substitute. It would not do for one's silk dress to explode or catch fire, as celluloid does. So the modern process removes the nitrate. Not much silk is made by this process.

Still another type of silk is the acetate silk, the process for which was patented in 1895 by Cross and Bevan. By their process cotton linters are converted into an acetate of cellulose, which is dissolved in acetone and spun. The spun thread is allowed to dry in the air—the so-called "dry" process.

Solutions of cellulose acetate found extensive use during the World war as "dope" for aircraft, due to its low inflammability and its shrunk-finish effect on airplane wing fabric. Cellulose acetate, dissolved in a suitable solvent and mixed with pigments, is the basis of lacquers. About 29 million pounds of acetate silk cloth was made in 1927.

The ideal cross section for silk fiber is a circle with a close, minutely serrated edge much like a diminutive circular saw with extremely fine teeth. This form is most favorable for light reflection and thus for an even color effect after dyeing. In the case of the viscose silk the method of setting the spun fiber, which is done in solution by the "wet" process, affects the cross section. Artificial silk has been successfully dyed since 1920, but it is not so elastic as natural silk. Also, natural silk varies in cross section in a peculiar way which the synthetic product so far canunot imitate.

Sound Film Plays This Organ

THE home-made organ in the right-hand picture reproduces music from a sound track film, such as the strip shown at the left, by means of beams of light and a photo-electric cell. James Nuttal and Frederick Sammis of Los Angeles constructed the instrument, which operates on the principle of moving picture sound reproducing equipment. The organ reproduces fine tonal qualities remarkably well, according to Joseph Wayne, musician, shown in the foreground, who played the instrument.

THE cameraman who took this picture was searching in the woods for an unusual nature study. His patience was rewarded when he found these two exquisite specimens of the butterfly family resting on a woodland stump. The butterfly at the right is a monarch; the other is a silver spot. They represent two of the most beautifully colored insects of the butterfly species.

Film Charm in Frailty and High Cheekbones

By Rosalind Shaffer

Hollywood, Cal.

STYLES in hats, styles in music, styles in automobiles! Why not styles in beauty? Hollywood, the world's market for pulchritude, where a pretty face can net a third of a million dollars a year without ever mussing the water wave, has a current style of beauty. It is the girl with the high cheek bones and sunken cheeks. That certain blase, exotic effect so sought after by the admirers of Dietrich and Garbo is a thing traceable to various causes, differing somewhat in the case of each girl, but in the main ascribable to dieting and physical frailty. Some authorities would scream at the thought of a modern screen star lacking in healthy ruggedness, claiming that such a charge would be unfair and tend to rob her of the glamor she possesses.

This would not be the first time in the history of style or of beauty that some bodily peculiarity or misfortune had influence a style trend. What French king was it who, because he was so short, introduced high heels to general favor to lend him dignity? Legend has it that it was a lisping king of Spain who made popular the present Castilian accent, now so hotly disputed by South Americans, who claim it is a wrong to foist such a standard of Spanish pronunciation on a more virile populace.

Motion picture always have had a type of beauty slightly different from the stage variety, because of the fact that things look a little different when seen through the eye of a camera, which has a tendency to enlarge a figure in apparent height and weight ten to twenty per cent.

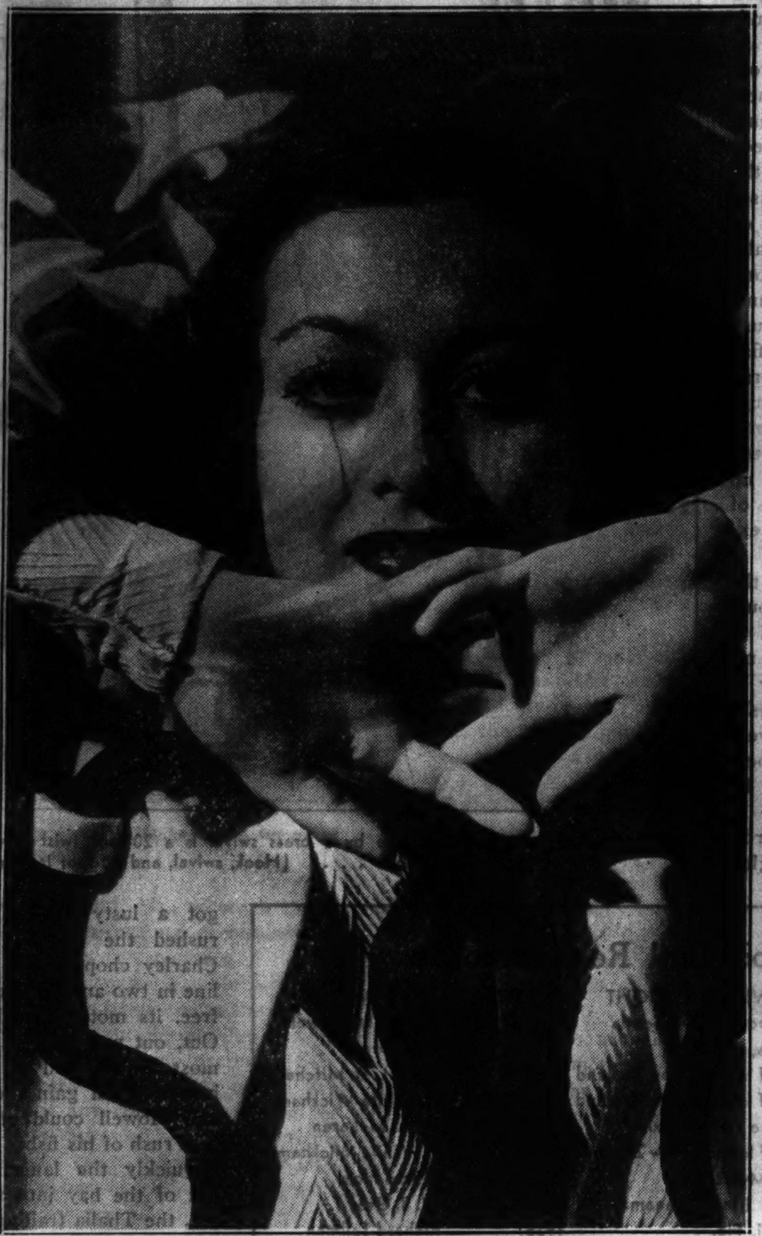
Stars of Old Statuesque

The early belles of the screen, who slew 'em in their seats, had very feminine figures. Theda Bara, a great box office personality, was of statuesquely rounded build, as were Kathlyn Williams, Betty Blythe, Ethel Clayton, Barbara La Marr, Clara Kimball Young, Valeska Surratt, and others of their time. Perhaps because of the vogue of sirenic melodramas in that era, the film favorites tended to be brunette and to show their femininity plainly. A blonde in that era always played a sympathetic role. A brunette might or might not, but a blonde? Always!

The vogue for the smaller girls grew apace. The sleek-haired, plump brunette became passe, except for lady villains. There was a practical reason for that, too. Many of the men who were playing leading roles in those days, who had made names for themselves with the public, were, like Richard Barthelmess, Douglas Fairbanks, Harold Lloyd, and Charles Chaplin, short men. A leading lady simply had to be small, or she could only play with a limited number of male luminaries, like William S. Hart, Wallace Reid, and others, whose six feet and over made it safe for a leading lady to be full sized.

"Katharine Hepburn has experienced a lack of physical robustness which has accentuated the natural tendency of her face to be of the prevailing type." (Sunken cheeks here made more pronounced by peculiar lighting effect employed in the photography.)

"Claudette Colbert, endowed with high cheek bones, has obtained that shadowy cheeked effect through lapsing from the pink of condition a number of times during the last year."



"Joan Crawford's story is practically the same." (That foreign look largely due to high cheek bones and drawn-in cheeks.)

"Marlene Dietrich . . . reduced her German rotundity to the American standards . . ."

"Dolores Del Rio . . . extreme slenderness and the attendant sunken cheeks."

"Adrienne Ames . . . retains her extreme slenderness . . . by diet."

"Lupe Velez . . . physical frailty has accentuated the feature . . ."

New Type Emerges

Nearly all of the Sennett beauties in those years were small—Mabel Normand and Gloria Swanson being outstanding examples. The dramatic leading ladies were best represented by Shirley Mason, five feet; her sister, Viola Dana, four feet ten; Mary Pickford, five feet; Bebe Daniels, the same; Betty Compson, five feet two; Bessie Love, five feet; Mary Miles Minter, five feet two; Blanche Sweet, five feet. This was the "ideal height." After the war the vogue for flat-chested boyish figures found tall and short girls vying with each other in diets to reduce to the desired standard. Something had happened to the world; a new type of woman was emerging, and she quickly found her counterpart on the screen. This strange type of beauty has hung on in various forms until the present outcropping of sunken-cheeked, high cheek boned beauties.

With the increasing sophistication of the American public, it became obvious that the short screen star was not the ideal clothes horse. Folks demanded smart drawing room dramas with the advent of talkies. Taller women became the vogue. With the coming of the long skirt, and the elaborations that have been popular in women's clothes since the passing of the knee-length chemise type of gown, a taller type became much in demand at the casting offices. For the last six years casting directors have been demanding taller leading men, which made it possible for the taller type of girl to come into her own. Carole Lombard, Adrienne Ames, and Kay Francis represented the show girl type that wore clothes well and was tall enough to make an effect in them. A girl five feet six or even more became the ideal, contrasting with the five-foot and five-foot-two damsel of pre-talkie days.

Of course there always are smaller girls and taller girls than the prevalent type. Girls who, through sheer acting ability and beauty, claim attention, always can overcome the tendency to be too tall or too short. Garbo represents the extreme height; Claudette Colbert is on the other extreme.

There is a strong trend in Hollywood today toward the girl with the high cheek bones and slightly sunken cheeks. Artistically there is a reason for the popularity of this type. Cameramen claim that beauty in the films is most easily obtained with a face that has strong contrasts of light and shadow, which this type of face supplies more completely than any other. A certain elusive, glamorous, wistful quality is its charm. Psychologically, can it be said that the American public through the depression has been mentally "conditioned" to see beauty in sunken cheeks? Perhaps. These high cheek bones and shadowy cheeks are the result of heredity plus environment. Environment refers to diet or a disregard of the rules of health.

"Carole Lombard . . . drastic reduction at the start of her career as a dramatic actress . . . produced the exotic lines you see today."

"Alice White comes by the high cheek bones naturally but diet produced the shadowed cheeks."

Glamor in Frailty

Dolores Del Rio and Lupe Velez, like all good Mexicans, boast of their Indian blood. This supplies both of them with the high cheek bones; in both cases physical frailty has accentuated the feature by coupling with it extreme slenderness and the attendant sunken cheeks.

Greta Garbo has high cheek bones and slightly indented cheeks, aided and abetted by dimples and dieting.

Marlene Dietrich always showed this feature in her appearance, but it became accented when she came to Hollywood and reduced her German rotundity to the American standards of 20 per cent under medical weight.

Carole Lombard showed herself as a plump-cheeked miss when with Mack Sennett years ago, but her drastic reduction at the start of her career as a dramatic actress at Paramount produced the exotic lines you see today. Joan Crawford's story is the same.

Adrienne Ames retains her extreme slenderness to the point of mania by diet. Alice White comes by the high cheek bones naturally, but diet produced the shadowed cheeks.

Claudette Colbert, endowed with high cheek bones, has obtained that shadowy cheeked effect through lapsing from the pink of condition a number of times during the last year.

Katharine Hepburn has experienced a lack of physical robustness which has accentuated the natural tendency of her face to be of the prevailing type. Constance Bennett, too, can blame or thank fragility for her exotic face.

How Chicago Angler Conquered Giant Tuna

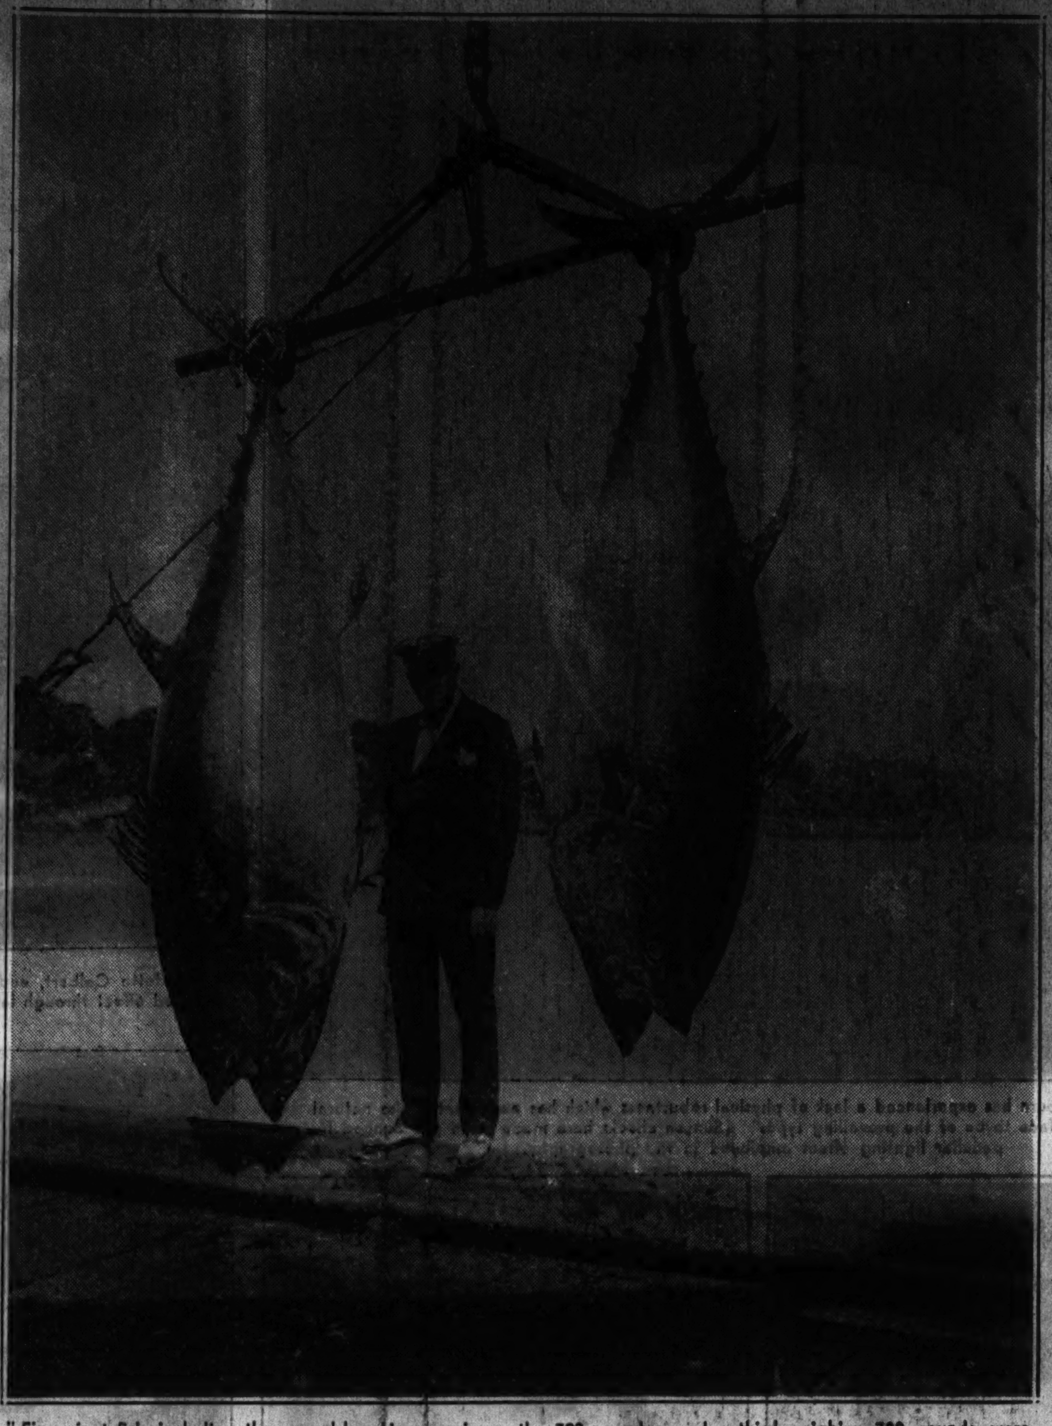
encounters style and swank in fishing terms. In northern Wisconsin and northern Minnesota, for instance, the gullible vacationist is told that he has caught a great northern pike (with accent on great and northern), whereas he has caught only the old familiar friend of his boyhood, the pickerel (Esox lucius), which is no more northern than it is central, and which is found in virtually every type of fresh water in the whole central and eastern section of the country and in waters at a considerable distance to the south.

But, tuna or tunny, the great silvery-sided monsters that lured Howell and his party to Nova Scotian waters this summer are major league fish. Anyone who has caught one will vouch for that.

Howell, who owns and operates a 160-foot twin Diesel engined yacht — the Thalia — and gives employment to a crew of twenty principally so that he can pursue his favorite sport of fishing, cruised to Liverpool in the summer of 1933 to investigate at first hand the reports of giant tuna in those waters. In his party then was his fishing captain, Charley Thompson, who, Howell says, knows more about deep-sea fishing than any other salt-water roamer alive today, and who, according to popular belief in fishing circles, actually can smell out tuna, tarpon, swordfish, and the like, just as a bird dog locates a bevy of quail.

The 1933 Howell expedition to the waters around Liverpool was far from being highly successful. The fishermen of the party captured a few tuna, 320 pounds and under, but the big ones all got away, because of the fact that the reels employed were equipped with lether brakes, and such great force was used by the fishermen in applying those brakes to check the rushes of the fish that line after line was broken. Tactics employed on 140-pound sailfish just wouldn't work on 800-pound and 900-pound tuna.



"Five giant fish, including the record-breaking specimen, the 792-pounder, and a third weighing 780 pounds, were caught . . ." (Thomas M. Howell with the second and third largest of the five tuna.)

No More Breaking of Lines

This year it was different. Howell and Captain Charley knew exactly the nature of their quarry. When word reached them that the giant tuna were inshore they pointed the nose of the Thalia for Liverpool and took along reels no longer equipped with lether brakes.

"We'll fight these fish to the finish, if it takes a week to each one," said Captain Charley; "but we won't break any more lines."

The reels in question are huge affairs, about the size of a boy's toy drum. Each is equipped with a tension screw by which any amount of drag, up to a certain limit, can be applied to the spool of the reel. In fighting the giant tuna of Liverpool, Howell and his fishing captain decided to use a drag of 40 pounds, just sufficient to let the fish know they were not free and intended in the end to wear down the rushes of the monsters.

"The big fish . . . forage about the nets of the commercial fishermen placed along the shores of the bay . . ." (The best tuna fishing grounds as viewed from the deck of Howell's yacht.)

". . . Liverpool, located in the narrowest reach of Liverpool bay and at the mouth of the Mersey river . . ." (Cross indicates tuna fishing grounds.)

The big tuna reel carries 600 yards of 36-thread linen line, which has a dry test of 72 pounds on a dead weight and which when wet will resist without breaking about 30 per cent in excess of the 72 pounds. Attached to the end of the line by a brass swivel is a 20-foot twisted wire leader, or trace, which in turn is attached to a tempered steel hook that is about four inches long and more than two and a half inches wide at the widest part of the curve.

The rod used with this equipment is a straight, stiff affair of seasoned hickory weighing 26 ounces. It has a single grip, and the reel seat is located below the grip. The guides of the rod, through which the line plays, are made of special hardened metal which will not roughen and therefore will not fray the line. Howell found that agate guides were not exactly suitable for his type of deep-sea fishing, because they had a tendency to wear away his lines too quickly.

A Solo Sport

Fishing for the big tuna of Nova Scotia as it is done by Howell is a solo performance. That is, only one fisherman at a time must have his line in the water. The fishing boat is a gasoline launch, 22 feet in length and with a beam of 7 feet. In its rear cockpit is located a swivel chair upon which the hero of the day sits with his rod in hand. The butt of the rod fits into a socket in the seat of the chair. From the shoulders of the fisherman harness extends to the reel. Several rods and reels, of course, are taken along in the boat, and in addition a gaff, plenty of rope, and plenty of food supplies and motor fuel. The fishermen never know how long they will be at sea when they set out to catch a giant tuna. The 62-hour stretch with the 792-pounder might have extended to twice that length of time, or more.

When the Thalia this summer reached Liverpool, located in the narrowest reach of Liverpool bay and at the mouth of the Mersey river, Captain Charley organized his affairs at once to foil the big fish that foiled him the year before. He was informed that the tuna, as was their habit the previous year, were frequenting the inshore waters near the mouth of the harbor, in which the herring fishermen were setting their nets. The commercial fishermen, being of a deeply religious turn, refrained from hauling their nets on Sundays. As a result, on Mondays the nets contained a larger proportion of dead herring than on any other day of the week. Since the dead herring were thrown into the sea, and since the big tuna devoured the dead herring by the bushel, Mondays naturally were poor fishing days. The bellies of the big fish were so full of dead herring that the bait of the fisherman, even though it were a herring, attracted little interest among the heavyweight gluttons prowling about the fishermen's nets. All other days of the week were equally good for fishing, allowing, however, for wind and weather and the run of herring.

Up to a certain point the procedure of Howell and his fishing captain in going after a big tuna was not greatly unlike that employed by a humble lake fisherman in setting out to catch for himself a mess of bluegills or wall-eyed pike. Fishing for the big tuna of Liverpool bay was simply still-fishing up to that point at which the tuna took the bait in his mouth. From that point on it was decidedly lively fishing. About the bait itself. Howell, his fishing captain, a launchman, and sometimes a guest, would depart from the Thalia, moored close in to the town of Liverpool, at daybreak. They would put in at some point where commercial fishermen were hauling their herring nets, procure a couple of bushels of live herring, and tie their launch to a buoy of a net. These herring, unimposing and unromantic little fellows of about three-quarters of a pound each, could serve no nobler purpose in the world than as bait for the mighty tuna. Tossed into the water about the launch, they attracted the tuna waiting around the nets. Then one of the herring would be selected for the hook and impaled upon its point. Howell prefers to hook his bait through the head, with the point of the hook coming out through the belly. Other fishermen use that method or hook the bait either simply through the head or through the back.

With the baited hook in the water, the fisherman would have nothing much of interest to occupy his time until that crucial moment when some great prowling tuna would seize the herring. Then action! Action! The fishing captain would loose the mooring and cast off from the buoy. The launchman would start the launch's engine. Someone would sound the signal horn on the craft. The yacht, lying in the harbor off the town and all prepared for the warning signal from the launch, would have its propeller throbbing by the time the anchor was weighed. It would slip silently away from the town to follow the launch, for no one would know just how far to sea the battle with the tuna would take the little fishing boat.

Fight to Finish

The tuna, which had taken the bait in about eight fathoms of water, in nearly every case would go for the open sea, most likely sounding for deep water as it rushed away from the launch. The launch, with its engine running, would attempt to keep up with the rush of the fish, but in most cases for the first fifteen or thirty minutes actually would be dragged along by the frantic tuna. Usually the first rush of the hooked fish would be the worst. But always, always tugging on the line until the end, the creature would never give up until the last ounce of its strength was exhausted.

Man against fish, the fisherman simply would hang on to his rod at first. As the tuna would grow weaker in its struggles, the fisherman would retrieve a bit of line when possible, not merely by reeling in the line in the manner of an ordinary inland lake angler, but by pumping the rod upward and backward and gaining a few feet of line through the use of the reel crank when lowering the rod after an upward movement. On and on, through long minutes that might stretch into lengthy hours, this struggle would continue. Finally the fish would reach its limit of fight. Slowly it would be worked toward the launch, its movements growing feebler with each succeeding moment. In the end the tuna would be dead, or nearly dead. As it would float helplessly beside the launch, the fishing captain would gaff it to hold it securely until a rope could be fastened around its tail. Then the elated fishermen would start for the yacht with their trophy in tow.

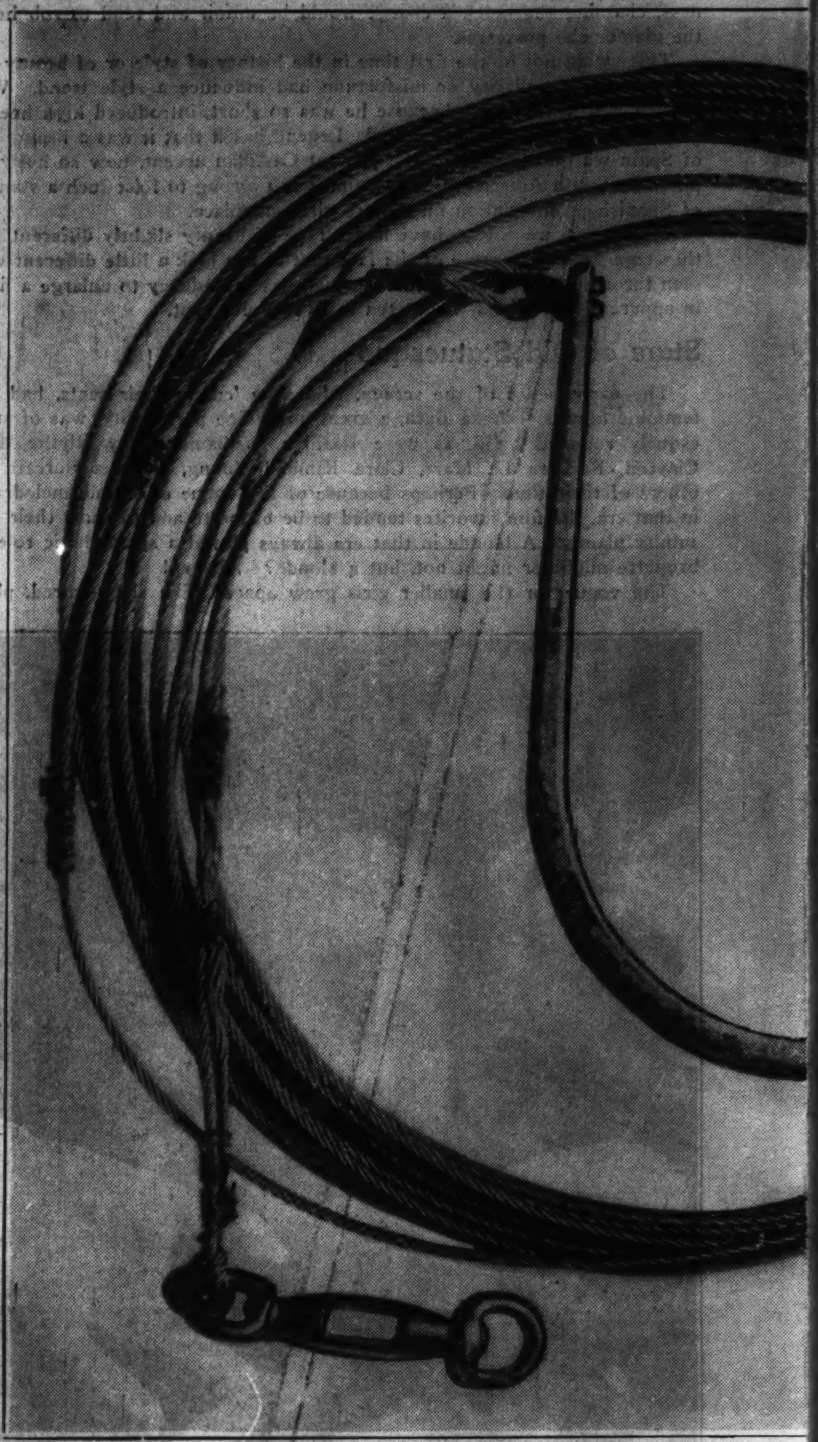
(With the exception of that relative to Mr. Howell's tuna, all of the records above were supplied by Field & Stream.)

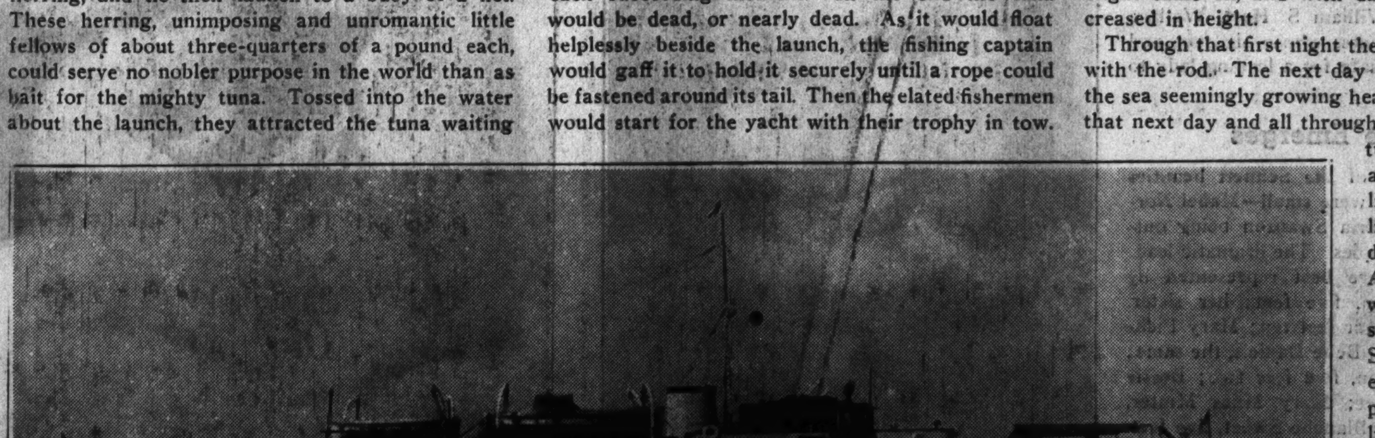
All this and more were what made the thrills for Howell in the catching of the five giant tuna off Nova Scotia this summer. On the morning of Aug. 6, just as the sun was climbing over the rim of the Atlantic away out at sea, Howell; a guest, Arthur De Cordova of New York; Capt. Charley Thompson, and a launchman left the yacht in their tiny fishing boat. Picking up their two bushels of herring for bait, they tied up their launch to a net buoy about two miles east of the anchored yacht and close to the southern shore of the bay. It isn't recorded that they had any premonition of what was in store. They simply fished, with Howell manipulating the rod. At 11 o'clock the fisherman got a lusty strike. Away rushed the tuna. Captain Charley chopped the mooring line in two and the launch was free, its motor already firing. Out, out ran the fish line, almost to its end before the launch could gain momentum and Howell could check the first rush of his fish.



"Attached to the end of the line by a brass swivel is a 20-foot twisted wire leader, hook . . ." (Hook, swivel, and 20-foot leader [coiled] ar

Quickly the launch passed out of the bay into the open sea, the Thalia trailing behind, with those on board viewing the spectacle through glasses. The big fish sounded. More than once it threatened to take all of the 600 yards of taut linen line right off the spool of the reel. The tuna rushed to the surface for one mighty splash after another; then down, down it went to the deep. Out in the open ocean the water was considerably rougher than in the bay. Hour followed hour without any signs of the fish weakening. Howell turned the rod over to his guest. More hours followed. Captain Charley took the rod. Night came on, and with darkness the waves increased in height.

Through that first night the fishermen took turns with the rod. The next day it was the same, with the sea seemingly growing heavier all the time. All that next day and all through the second night the tuna rushed and fought against the hook and line. At times the little party of four was drenched with spray. At other times the waves threatened to swamp the launch. Several times the fishermen were at the point of cutting the line in order to escape into the bay to get away from the perils of the sea. But they hung on through the third day and through most of the third night until 1 o'clock on the morning of Aug. 9, when the huge fish with the fighting heart was brought to gaff. In all that time Captain Charley had only three hours' sleep.



"Howell . . . owns and operates a 160-foot twin Diesel engined yacht—the Thalia—and gives employment to a crew of twenty principally so that he can pursue his favorite sport of fishing . . ." (The Thalia at anchor in a calm sea.)

The fish weighed, as related before, 792 pounds, and was thought at first to be a world's record-breaker, though later it was discovered that a greater tuna had been caught previously by a sporting Britisher. The tuna was 9 feet 7 inches long and its girth measurement was 6 feet 7 inches.

Howell figured that he could land a bigger tuna. He did. On the morning of Aug. 17 he hooked and landed the record fish in 1 hour and 48 minutes. There was nothing wrong with that fish, either. It just did not fight as long as the 792-pounder, though it was hooked in the mouth in a similar fashion. Howell knew that he had his quarry well in hand after the first thirty minutes and cautiously played the big fellow to the end. It was towed to the wharf of a fish shipping house and weighed by tested scales—956 pounds of tuna. It was 10 feet 3 inches long and 7 feet 4 inches around at its heaviest point. The meat of the big tuna was given to the townspeople; its skin was packed in a barrel and shipped to Miami, Fla., where a taxidermist, supplied with a complete set of measurements of the fish, is mounting the specimen.

When the taxidermy assignment is finished the mounted tuna will be presented to the town of Liverpool, whose inhabitants have a lot of civic pride in their giant tuna, but who prefer to fish for a living for the little herring that swarm about its shores. Little if any commercial fishing for tuna is done on those shores of Nova Scotia, though out along the Pacific coast the tuna is an important figure in the commercial fishing industry as well as being a game fish to the Catalina Island sportsmen. Commercial fishing for the tuna, however, is a far different undertaking than the fishing that is done by Howell and others on the Nova Scotian coast.

Fish in Teams

The Pacific commercial fishermen go after tuna with stout, heavy rods and heavy lines. They fish from the decks of steamers or other sizable craft that are powered. The fishermen angle in teams of three for the fish that finally end up in little cans. Though each of the three of a fishing team has a rod and each has a line, there is only one hook to a team, all three of the lines being attached to that single hook. When a team gets a tuna on its hook it simply—all three men acting together—derricks the fish in. No sport about it at all; simply hard work. Heaving in fish all day long that weigh around a hundred pounds each is no light task even for the husky fishermen who earn their bread from the sea.

By direction of Howell, his yacht cruises up and down the Atlantic coast throughout the fishing seasons as they come in the calendar—in the north in the summer, in the south in the winter. The yacht stops here and there where this or that kind of fish is striking. The 22-foot launch is carried on the deck of the yacht. The captain of the yacht is boss of the launch only when that last named craft is on the deck of the yacht, but he is not captain of the launch when it is afloat on the important business of fishing. Capt. Charley Thompson is commander and navigator of the little fishing boat at all times when it is at sea.

Howell attends to his business in Chicago a great part of his time. When he figures that he can spend a few days or a few weeks on his yacht, he catches a train and goes east to whatever port the yacht at the time may be. His fishing captain keeps him informed as to how the fish are biting. If it is off Long Island that the Thalia is anchored there is always the splendid chance of getting another big broadbill swordfish, like the 405-pounder. If it is off Florida, there is always the thrill of capturing the hard-fighting tarpon. But though Nova Scotia, Long Island, and Florida all are dear to the fisherman's heart of Thomas M. Howell, it was in the waters around those far-away Pacific islands, the Galapagos, that he had his most fun.

Studies Wild Life

On those islands, twelve large ones and several hundred small ones, lying 500 miles west of Ecuador, Howell became deeply interested in the subject of ornithology and took countless photographs of many varieties of the 85 different kinds of birds abounding there. The magnificent albatross, bird of ill fortune of "The Ancient Mariner"; the delicate-hued flamingo, the rare flightless cormorants—all these and many others were recorded on his camera's films. He studied the giant land tortoises, and members of his crew captured the equally big sea turtles that lay their eggs in the sun-scorched sand of the Galapagos beaches.

In the waters around some of the more remote islands he fished for sailfish, and caught one only forty pounds lighter than the world's record-breaker. In the same waters he took on his line the 650-pound black marlin swordfish, the terrifying head of which projects over his desk in his private office in Chicago. He took thousands of feet of movies of his battles with these monsters of the tropical seas, the quick eye of the camera catching clearly the leaps of the sailfish as it broke water time after time.

Among Sharks

It was in the Galapagos seas, teeming with an astounding variety of marine life, that Howell encountered the shark as a game fish. Big, wicked devils, they trailed his tiny fishing launch, their dorsal fins protruding above the surface of the water and their wide, ugly jaws, filled with chisellike teeth, snapping under his very nose. Sometimes he baited a hook for these monsters. At other times his fishing captain tossed a harpoon into the back of one or another that approached the launch too closely. Whether hooked or harpooned, the shark always put up a desperate fight

It was generally believed that a shark, no matter how big it was, would not attack a swordfish. The idea was that the shark was afraid of the swordfish's sword. Howell, however, witnessed a tragedy of the shark-infested seas that disproved the long-accepted theory that sharks always steer clear of swordfish.

Nature Myth Exploded

It was when he and his party were finishing up a day's fishing that they saw a swordfish floundering helplessly on the surface of the sea. They could not fathom the mystery at first, because they believed there was no creature in those waters, except possibly another swordfish, that would attack a swordfish. On running their launch closer to the scene they discovered that the floundering swordfish was being torn to pieces by a giant shark. Howell was eager to bait a hook and have it out with the shark, but as night was coming on, with the prospect of a long battle through the darkness with the monster—a prospect not relished by Howell because of the fact that he had his young son in the launch with him—he relinquished the job to his fishing captain.

A harpoon was rigged up and socked into the shark's insides. That took a lot of fight out of the creature immediately. The fishermen were not backward about putting plenty of pull on the harpoon rope. The shark was dragged, slashing its tail all the way, to the yacht, where its life was finished off. The swordfish also was towed to the yacht and hoisted by the side of its assassin, whose teeth had torn away great masses of flesh from its sides and tail. Another nature-faking myth exploded by the sight of those two giant carcasses swinging above the calm sea in the light of a dying tropic sun.

A fisherman who pursues his favorite sport systematically, as does Howell, learns a great deal about nature. Whether it is the man with the private yacht, who captures the gamey tuna and the fiercely fighting marlin, or the ordinary angler with the twenty-five-cent cane pole, who is content to yank goggle eyes (rock bass) out of the weed beds of some backwoods lake or stream, the final results are relatively the same. The fisherman gets his sport through a wealth of relaxation, punctuated at intervals by good, clean excitement. His health is benefited immensely. And his knowledge of wild life of water, earth, and air is extended in all dimensions through the manifestations of nature that he constantly observes.

Born to Sport

Some men are born fishermen and others take up angling late in life. Among the first-named group, of course, is Howell, who cannot remember back to the time when he was not interested in fishing. Another of the group is Zane Grey, the novelist, who is known as the world's premier fisherman from the fact that he has traveled to almost every well known and many an obscure distant fishing ground in seeking variety in the sport. Grey has fished the eastern and the western coasts, Florida and the Hawaiian waters, and has cast his line more than once in the clear waters of far-off South Sea islands. He has owned and operated several private yachts and has invested thousands of dollars in fishing equipment. Not long ago he set out with seven or eight companions on a $500,000 tour around the world—mainly to catch fish.

". . . in the waters around those far-away Pacific islands, the Galapagos . . . he had his most fun." (Howell with 140-pound sailfish.)

Of the group of men who take up fishing late in life, the late Calvin Coolidge, former President of the United States, was an outstanding example. It is said of Coolidge that when he was a boy in Vermont, and within easy distance of streams inhabited by those beautiful and gamey little fish, the brook trout, he showed little if any interest in fishing. It was only after he became President, and it was impressed upon him that he should take up some sport to popularize him with the people, that he chose to fish. Let it be recorded here, however, that, though Coolidge remained to the end basically a worm fisherman and he never learned the finer points of the sport, he was not a sham fisherman. He actually learned to like it. In his neat business suit and his white collar, and under the shade of a cowboy hat wished onto him by well-meaning friends, he would sit for hour after hour—waiting for a fish to bite.

President, millionaire, common man—it is fishing that puts them on the same level and gives them the same common interest. It is in that sport that men of all walks in life can meet on the equal plane of brotherhood.

An Iguana Visits the U. S.

Permanent Beauty Patches

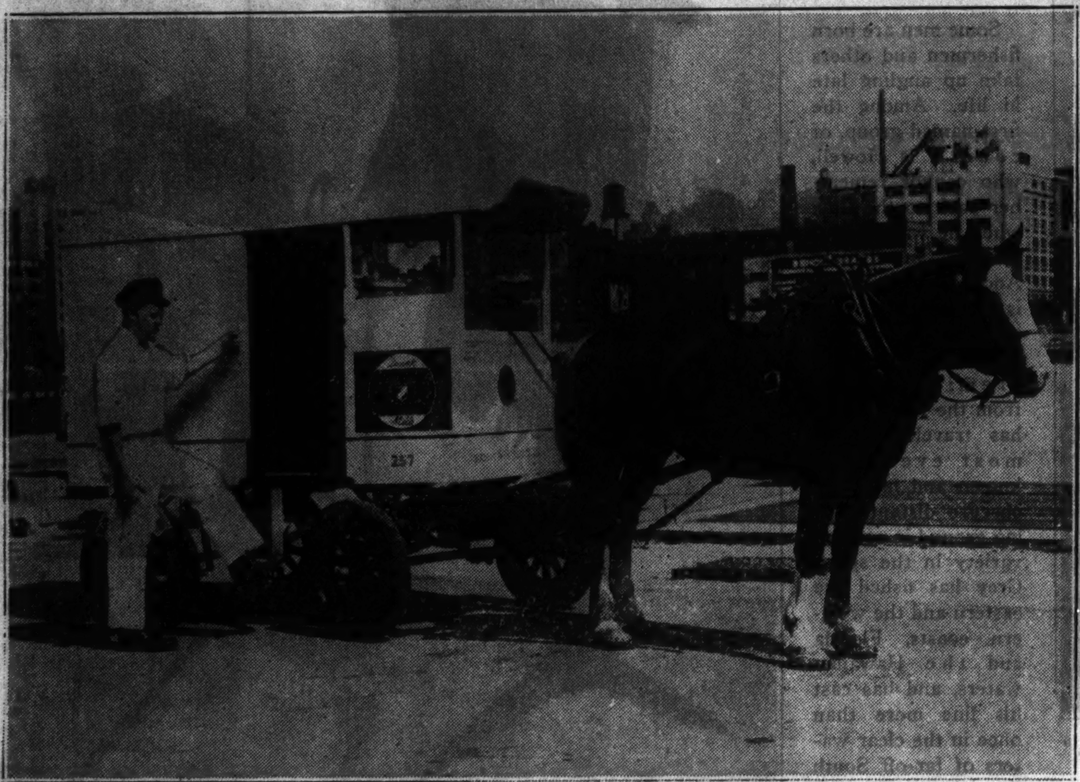
IF SHE ever decides she no longer cares for the decorations on her back, this Parisienne will be extremely sorry. Tattoo marks are easily applied with a needle, but the removal of them is painful and never very successful. According to the original caption for this picture, which came from Paris, the young woman is a devotee of a new fad—tattooed backs for beach parading decoration. Generally throughout the world, however, tattooing has come to be regarded as a barbaric practice. Skilful tattooing, as it is practiced today, originally was developed by the Chinese.

'Moo'—Here Comes the Milk Wagon



NEW YORKERS returning to their homes in the small hours of the morning soon may be startled by hearing a soft "moo" and imagine that a cow is loose in the neighborhood. In reality the noise will be the warning horn of an approaching "noiseless" milk wagon. A Gotham dairy is planning to equip all of its delivery wagons soon with pneumatic rubber tires, and the hoofs of the horses with rubber shoes to eliminate the early morning clatter of milk wagons, against which many sufferers from insomnia have complained for years. The wagons will have warning horns with the sound of a cow's "moo."

A SHORT STORY IN COLOR PICTURES
DIAMONDS AS USUAL

GALE DERWENT
CYNTHIA ELSTREE
BENITO SACCO
ISRAEL BENSONI
SYNTHETIC DIAMONDS? I CAN'T BELIEVE IT.
A PERFECT STONE, GALE. WE'RE DOOMED UNLESS
Bensoni held up the stone for Gale Derwent's examination. "It's synthetic, Gale, but it's perfect. If the secret process for making them isn't suppressed our business is ruined." Gale, who had been thinking with annoyance of his mother's effort to marry him off to Cynthia Elstree, perked his ears, sensing excitement.
SO THE INVENTOR DIED SUDDENLY, EH?
WE'VE GOT TO FIND HIS DAUGHTER. SHE KNOWS THE SECRET.
"Mimms was the inventor's name," Bensoni went on; "he's dead. He left the secret with his only daughter. We've got to persuade her to see this our way. Now I propose that you . . ."
IN MIMMS' LABORATORY
YOU'LL FIND IT HEALTHIER TO PLAY WITH US.
I WON'T BE BULLIED, SACCO.
AM I INTRUDING?
Gale heard the loud, strident voice of a man, speaking in threatening tones. Without knocking he walked through the old country house and into the room where Jonquil Mimms stood facing Benito Sacco, a sinister looking man. The girl's eyes flashed defiance. "I won't be bullied," she said. Sacco turned and left the room. It was fitted up as a laboratory
WHY CAN'T PEOPLE LEAVE ME ALONE?
BECAUSE YOUR SECRET WILL SMASH BUSINESS.
"I suppose you're here for the same reason," said Jonquil, as she turned to face Gale. In his most soothing manner Gale tried to reason with the girl. He knew, intuitively, that heroic measures would be needed to win her over.
SACCO OFFERED A MILLION. WHAT'S YOUR OFFER?
NOTHING, EXCEPT SAFETY.
"Sacco offered me a million. What's your offer?" said Jonquil, suddenly. It was the opening Gale wanted. He lost no time in playing his ace card. "Nothing but safety," he said. "My mother and I are taking a world cruise. Why not join us?"
A PLOT IS HATCHED
YOU MUST GET THE SECRET, GALE, EVEN IF YOU HAVE TO MARRY HER.
I'M SICK OF THE WHOLE BUSINESS.
Bensoni was delighted, of course, at Gale's news. "But we haven't won the battle yet, Gale," he cautioned. "You've got to learn that girl's secret, even if you have to marry her." At this Gale stiffened. "This idea of hooking me into matrimony is getting a bit thick," he said.
Labor Board Moves to Avert Textile Strike by Peace Plan
Lady Dorothea Derwent, with her son, Gale Derwent, Miss Cynthia Elstree, and party left today for an extended cruise aboard the Derwent yacht, North Star. The cruise itinerary was not announced, but inasmuch as the Derwent town house has been closed it is believed that the party will be gone for several months.
TOWNLEY S ON THE CRUISE
WHAT DO YOU SEE IN HER, GALE?
I CAN'T TELL YOU. I'M A PUBLIC BENEFACTOR.
It was the first minute Cynthia had managed to be with Gale alone since their departure. "What do you see in that little Mimms girl, Gale? And why is she along anyway?" Gale smiled. "I can't tell you, Cynthia. I'm a public benefactor; at least I hope that's as far as I'll have to go to accomplish my purpose. "That," replied Cynthia, "is quite enough."
MYSTERY BELOW DECKS
GET YOUR GUNS READY.
Benito Sacco addressed the rough looking group in sailors' uniforms. "We fooled the captain, and that silly young Derwent hasn't seen me," he said. "Be sure your pistols are loaded and be ready to seize the ship when I give the word."
ROUGH WEATHER AHEAD
NOT EVEN OF YOUR FRIEND, SACCO.
AREN'T YOU EVER FRIGHTENED?
Gale realized, for the first time, that his interest in Jonquil was getting to be more that just business. He found himself seeking her company oftener and enjoying talking to her more every day. "You're a wonder, Jon. Aren't you frightened at anything?"
PUT 'EM UP, FOLKS. WE'RE IN CHARGE NOW.
SACCO! WHERE DID YOU COME FROM?
Suddenly Sacco stepped forward, his men close behind him. As they surrounded Gale and Jonquil, Sacco held out an ugly looking automatic. "Hands up, folks, we're in charge now. We've put the captain in irons, the women folks are locked up and now we'll take care of you, Derwent."
SHE'S GOING WITH US. MIMMS AND ME ARE GOING INTO PARTNERSHIP.
YOU BEAST!
Sacco pulled Jonquil roughly toward him. "Miss Mimms is going with us, Derwent. She and I are going into partnership, see?" Jonquil pulled away, her face crimson and her eyes flashing hatred.
LET'S TOSS HIM TO THE SHARKS.
LEAVE HIM ALONE. HE DOESN'T KNOW. EVEN I DON'T!
NORTH
Gale stiffened his muscles for a desperate chance. As he lashed out with his fist at Sacco's chin Jonquil jumped between them. "Stop," she cried, "this is all useless. You want my secret diamond process, but there isn't any. I haven't any secret, no one has . . ."
YOU SEE, THOSE DIAMONDS WERE MY MOTHER'S. FATHER LIED ABOUT MAKING THEM.
SO DIAMONDS ARE AS USUAL, EH?
Amazement spread over the faces of her listeners. "Father had tried for years and failed," she said, "I think it turned his mind. The diamonds you believed synthetic were real. They belonged to mother. He confessed to me before he died . . ."
AND I'M TAKING JON, FOREVER
I'M GOING TO TAKE THE YACHT, DERWENT. I'LL PUT YOUR CROWD ASHORE.
A widening grin creased Gale's face as she finished her unexpected story. Sacco, it was apparent, accepted it for a simple statement of truth. Dejectedly he turned away. "I'm going to take the yacht, Derwent," he said, "I'll put your folks ashore." Gale pulled Jonquil into his strong arms. "And I'm taking Jon forever," he said, gleefully.

Wild Pastures ~ by REX BEACH

In a Thrilling Serial of the Lawless Florida Cattle Country of the 90's a Master Novelist Writes Stirringly of Feuds . . . Fighting . . . Romance

INSTALMENT I.

THE Summerlin house had been built to withstand hurricanes. It was framed of heavy timbers. It stood upon tall, thick posts, hand-hewn out of heart pine. These foundation posts were stoutly braced and cunningly mortised and tenoned into massive sills at top and bottom; they were held together with wooden pins, for not a nail had been used in the big bound skeleton of the structure.

Waves blown from the harbor had washed under it waist deep at times. It had rocked and groaned under the onslaught of those boisterous September gales which come shouting out of the Caribbean, but it had never moved.

It was two stories high; it was square. An elevated "gallery" ran around its front and its two sides and connected with another smaller structure, the office, so called, where details of cattle shipments, clearances, and the like were attended to.

The entire space under the house was open to the gulf breeze. It was the gathering spot for guests, it was the cowboys' lounge, the lobby of the Summerlin house. It was carpeted with white beach sand and finely broken particles of shell; the massive sills provided seats at least as soft as saddle lether, and the square posts made back rests comfortable to aching shoulders.

It was always shady under the house and agreeably cool. The place was free from gnats and mosquitoes, too, for a breath from the harbor was constantly stirring. Here sun-browned riders from the Missimmee marshes and the ranges north of the Caloosahatchie renewed their friendships and their enmities with fellows from the Okeechobee prairies, the Big Cypress and the "Glades country."

Of friendships there were many; of feuds there were few, for the Florida cattle barons were men of good character in the main and their employes were well behaved.

These latter carried revolvers and dirks, most of them rode with a rifle or a shotgun on their saddles, and, furthermore, here at Punta Rassa rum was cheap—five gallons for a dollar, demijohn included. Nevertheless, breaches of the peace were by no means epidemic. Men who have slept alone under the stars for weeks and months welcome civilization; they roll its sweetness on their tongues; they enjoy its grateful flavor, and for a while at least they walk warily and keep a bright eye peeled for "the law."

PUNTA RASSA was the principal shipping point for south Florida stock. Annually some twenty thousand head were loaded there for Cuba, the steers and the "she stuff" for beef, the bulls for the bull ring; and cowboys from the piney woods and the cabbage hummocs looked forward eagerly to the occasional drives thither, knowing that they would find friends and strangers and sights to see. There were ships. There was the salty gulf to swim in. Sharks in the harbor. Dice and cards and aguardiente. And Fort Myers only twenty miles away, with its lights, its stores, its pretty houses, and—its women.

After the cattle were loaded some of them stayed a few days to play poker in the old commissary, with its cheesecloth partitions and its leaky roof. There were always holes in the commissary roof, for good hands were celebrated by pistol shots. Occasionally there were gunplays of more sinister portent—and why not, with a five-gallon demijohn of rum and piles of Spanish gold on the table? The little Schultz girl always hovered around the players to pick up what money fell to the floor. It was the house percentage. O, yes! There was something doing at Punta Rassa. And then on the way home, Fort Myers! Apples! Canned goods! Music! Women! A corner of cowboy heaven. After that the wilderness once more; the creak of lether, the lowing of cattle, the hoot of owls, the sigh of the wind in lonely pine tops.

"Hey, fellows! Here comes the Lily Snow!"

Immediately there was a scramble; the cowboys streamed out into the sunshine and thence to the dock, where a Cuban four-master was moored.

The arrival of the Tampa steamer was an event for these horsemen; a certain excitement invariably accompanied it. Eagerly now they stared at a rusty side-wheel craft which had rounded Sanibel point and was plowing up the bay. A plume of black pitch pine smoke rose from its funnel, its walking beam lifted and fell, its prow clove the placid waters, turning graceful furrows of foam. To the observers the Lily Snow was a thing of beauty.

The schooner at the dock was loading cattle from a chute; its deck carried stalls into which the lean, long-horned animals were driven one by one. They were wild and unruly, they were frightened, too; from the pen whence they issued came a great bawling and bellowing.

This particular shipment was being handled on a cash basis and the simplicity of the transaction was characteristic of the Florida cattle business. There was no bookkeeping involved. Alongside the narrow chute stood the two principals in the deal, and each carried a lether bag. As an animal crowded past, the buyer handed to the seller a Spanish doubloon.

FROM the cabin deck of the incoming steamer Tom Kennedy looked down at the scene on the dock and thrilled at the sight of it. With interest he studied the men, the shore, the houses. Punta Rassa at last! A mighty small place to have its name printed so big on the map; he had expected to see quite a city. All the same it was pretty. It reminded him of pictures he had seen of the West Indies. Those leaning trees with the funny clusters of fruit were coconut palms. And those queer bushes standing high up on spraddling, crooked legs were mangroves. He wondered how a mangrove ever got its start in life. Ordinary trees spring from roots, but evidently these sprouted in midair and dropped roots down into the mud. Silly idea! He was tempted to comment on its absurdity to the girl standing near by, and he glanced at her. He had tried more than once to meet her eyes, but always unsuccessfully; what was more, she seemed to feel his gaze and turned away. Now, with her attention fixed upon the shore, he was free at least to stare at her as intently as he desired.

She was lovely. Tom felt a stirring, breathless excitement racing through his veins. She was slim, dark, olive skinned. Her eyes were black and lustrous, and they had thrown him into a panic the moment they rested on him. That was when she came aboard at Tampa with her elderly woman companion. He had been in a daze ever since.

A dozen times on the trip down he had prayed for tempest or shipwreck, or for the Lily Snow to burst her boiler, so that he could save this girl's life. Instead the weather had remained balmy, the boiler had held together.

He guessed she'd be mighty surprised if he stepped up to her just as the ship was sinking, took off his hat, and said politely:

"Don't be in the least alarmed, Miss Mendez. I'll save you."

He'd have to say it in Spanish, of course.

That would make her open her big black pansy eyes, all right. After they were safely ashore on some uninhabited island he'd explain his knowledge of her language by telling her he was from the Rio Grande country.

Her name was Rita Mendez. Her father was a rich Cuban. She was going to Fort Myers to visit relatives. The woman she was traveling with was not her mother, but a maid, a companion. All this Tom had learned from the purser.

Well, that meant he would be able to meet her. If necessary he'd get a guitar and "play bear" under her window.

The steamer had docked. Valise in hand, Tom lingered until he could follow Miss Mendez and her duenna ashore. He wondered how any girl could walk on such high heels—but she managed it. Why, her feet weren't as big as mice. He could span her waist with his fingers, nevertheless her hips and her bust were rounded and she was alive with health and vitality.

Tom heard somebody direct the women to the Schultz hotel, a place which he inferred was too rich for his blood, so regretfully he walked across to the Summerlin house and asked how he could get to Fort Myers.

There was no stage line, he was told. Neither was there any regular boat service. He would have to beg a ride from some returning cattle outfit or hire a craft of some sort to set him up the river.

Mr. Kennedy did not choose to charter any boat for the very good reason that he had been traveling for three weeks solid—quick time from west Texas to south Florida—and he had so calculated his expenditures en route as to have his trip and his money peter out at the same time. Aside from a few silver coins he was broke.

He was not greatly concerned thereat, however, for this was journey's end.

He was free to stare at her as intently as he desired.

The two men Tom had seen at the cattle chute as he came ashore entered the office at his left and for a while they talked. When the Cuban left, Tom entered and inquired of the other:

"Are you the boss of this cattle outfit?"

The man turned with a frown, and Kennedy saw that he had been drinking, for his face was flushed and a demijohn on the table was far from full.

"Yes, I'm the boss. And I have all the hands I need."

THE speaker was a lithe, sandy-haired fellow several years older than Tom. His features were clean cut and prominent, his eyes were bold, and there was an insolent curl to his lips. He was handsome and he carried an air of consequence.

"I'm not looking for a job, mister. I thought you might have a chuck wagon going to Fort Myers, or maybe an extra horse——"

Carelessly the man shook his head. Deliberately he turned his back.

Kennedy felt himself color at the fellow's callous indifference. In order to say something he explained: "I'm all the way from Texas, and these are the first Florida cow brutes I ever saw. Kind of poor compared with our cattle. I guess your range isn't as good as ours."

"And you're the first Texas cow hand I ever saw." The man turned and stared over his shoulder. He ran his eyes over Tom from head to foot. "I'll bet you're a top hand and know all about cattle."

"I can tell a bull from a hefer," the newcomer admitted.

"Well, Florida pickings are poor. You won't fatten up much, either."

"I'll manage to winter it out." Kennedy wondered if all cattlemen in this country carried their liquor as badly as this one, or if Florida rum had lightning in it. "I'd certainly like to get to Fort Myers."

"Did you ever think about walking?"

When Tom answered his voice had softened, but not his expression. "Why, no!" he said in a silky tone. "That thought never occurred to me. Out my way it's an unfamiliar form of exercise for cow men. Farmers and sheepherders make it a practice, but we never took up the practice. For one thing, we aren't shod for walking." Tom looked down at his tight, high-heeled calfskin boots, the tops of which he wore concealed beneath his pants legs. They were expensive boots, and, like all cowboys, he was proud of his feet. "No, sir, that never occurred to me. I can ride in these boots and fight in them; they'll do to kick a man in the belly with or stomp on his face if he gets impudent; but they're no good for walking. . . . My name is Kennedy. It's easy remembered. I'll be shipping cattle over this dock some day, and if ever you want the loan of a pony don't fail to ask me."

He stood for a moment in silent expectancy; then he sauntered out upon the gallery. Inwardly he was boiling; he was still seething when the dinner bell rang and he joined the resulting stampede.

The dining room of the Summerlin house was furnished with a long, bare table and two benches. The fare today was the same as always—fried ham, grits, and gravy. Kennedy ate in silence for a while, then he spoke to the man on his right:

"What's the name of the fellow who's shipping that stock?"

"Tall, sandy-haired man? . . . That's Tad Dolman."

"You one of his hands?"

"Who? Me?" The cowboy shook his head. "What's the matter?"

"This Florida liquor must be about four-thirds panther sweat."

"It ain't Florida liquor, it's Cuban rum; 'augerdent,' they call it. Did he treat you rough? . . . Him an' Sonny have been right peevish for a couple of days. Sonny is mean. He's Tad's kid brother." The speaker speared a second piece of ham. "Fightin' is in a man's blood, not in his liquor, as I see it. Now, with me augerdent brings out all the sweetness an' beauty of my nature. I ain't at my best till my legs get limber; then children foller me an' women melt at my smile."

"What riled up this Dolman?"

"Us boys have been checkin' up on his steers, an' we found some of our brands."

"So? That goes on down here, eh?"

"I reckon it goes on everywhere. Stock drifts. When a cow is penned up a Triangle H sometimes looks so much like a Crescent S, or mebbe a swallow fork in each ear resembles a double crop so close that a shipper can't tell 'em apart." This mild sarcasm brought a smile to the listener's lips. "I'm with the Sprague outfit, Crescent S; earmark, crop split on the right, lower square on the left. I found ten head in the Dolman pen. Of course Tad would of settled, but—it didn't hurt for me to be here. . . . My name is Bide Willing."

"Tom Kennedy is mine."

"Proud to meet you."

"I'm going to work for Mr. Noble. You know him?"

"Everybody knows Cap'n Ben."

"He's my uncle."

Willing's expression altered. Thereafter he treated Tom with a respect which made it evident that Capt. Ben Noble was a man of standing in the community. As to Tom's predicament, the regular boat for Fort Myers was out of commission, but there would likely be another leaving during the afternoon, he declared, and if not, somebody would surely be driving up. When the meal was finished Bide introduced Tom to some of the other cowboys, and all repaired to the shady retreat under the house.

There was the customary banter, the usual cattle talk, all familiar to the visitor, but tinged now with a new color and pointed by an idiom which he found a little strange. Soon somebody spread a saddle blanket and began throwing dice. The stakes were moderate, and Kennedy edged into the circle. He won and lost for a while, then his luck changed for the better. The coins in front of him grew. He was on his knees warming the dice with his breath and earnestly imploring them to come six when the game was unceremoniously interrupted.

Rapid hoof beats sounded upon the shell road, there was a yell, a rider approached at a gallop. As he came abreast of the Summerlin house he turned his horse sharply and rode under it, straight at the squatting group. The men scattered like a covey of quail, but a couple of them were bowled over as the rider set his horse down in their very midst.

"Hey, Sonny! You aimin' to kill somebody?" protested one fellow who had escaped a flying hoof by inches.

"Get that horse off our money," another cried.

To a chorus of this sort Tom Kennedy picked himself up, brushed off his clothes—he was wearing his best suit—and spat sand from his lips. His pile of quarters had been flung broadcast, and he retrieved them one by one. He had seen a woolly Texas roundup hand scatter a crowd at a campfire in this very manner, but on that occasion the cook had promptly put a dent in his skull with a skillet. Tom awaited some similar move from his companions. Evidently customs differed, however, for none came. From the resentful, hangdog demeanor of these cowboys he assumed this horseman was something of a bully.

THE confusion he had created appeared to amuse the latter. He sat his quivering pony and grinned down at the group.

"Don't mind me," he said. "It's just one of my capers." Tom reached for a coin, whereupon the rider spurred his horse. It all but trod on Tom's hand. When he made another move the maneuver was repeated.

The Texan straightened himself; he spoke to the bystanders. "These dice are mine, and I had that six as good as made. Now, mister," he lifted his eyes to the figure above him, "here's a caper to put with yours."

With these words he seized Sonny by the belt and simultaneously prodded his horse in that sensitive portion of its anatomy just back of its ribs. The animal leaped forward, its master was snatched out of the saddle and came sprawling to the ground. There was a startled clamor, but Tom did not hear it, for his temper, never very trustworthy, was completely out of control and he felt a swiftly mounting rage.

Sonny rose to his knees snarling. He reached for his revolver, and the bystanders broke ground, but as the weapon came from its holster Kennedy neatly kicked it out of his hand, sent it flying. The owner uttered a cry of pain and surprise which ended in a choking gasp as he felt himself dragged to his feet and an open palm smote his cheek with blinding force.

His limber lack of balance indicated that he was drunker than he had appeared on horseback, so Tom held him up, shook him like a wet shirt, slapped him again and again. He had about finished when he heard a cry of warning, then felt something hard and blunt driven forcibly into his ribs. A harsh voice back of him shouted:

"Drop that kid!"

Kennedy stiffened. He released his victim, he elevated his hands until they were at the level of his ears. He heard somebody exclaim affrightedly:

"Hey, Tad! Don't shoot!"

Over his shoulder he glimpsed the face of the man he had seen earlier in the office. It was distorted now with fury; the fellow was spilling curses.

"For God's sake, Tad, you can't do that!" It was the voice of Bide Willing. "Sonny rode his horse right over us——"

Sonny himself broke in with hoarse passion: "Kill 'im, Tad! You kill 'im or I will." He fumbled for the knife at his belt, but hands pinioned him and removed the weapon. He struggled to throw them off.

The tableau lasted only a second or two, but it was indelibly fixed upon the memory of those present. Some of them doubtless were impelled to intervene forcibly, but they were frozen in a paralysis of dread, fearing to move lest they provoke the insane elder brother to act.

Again Bide Willing lifted his voice in earnest entreaty. "This man's a stranger here. He don't know y'all, Tad. He wouldn't of done a thing if——"

"Nobody's going to beat up my kid brother."

KENNEDY had said nothing, he had made no move. Apparently the pressure of that gun barrel had frozen him; then suddenly his right arm dropped and he whirled in his tracks. It was a maneuver familiar enough in the west, where quick draws and pistol tricks of all sorts were practiced by nine cowboys out of ten, but it was wholly unexpected here. Furthermore, it was executed in a flash. Although apparently at a hopeless disadvantage, he was anything but that, for his right elbow had less than a foot to travel before it collided with Dolman's wrist and knocked the revolver aside. As a part of the same movement he turned and seized it.

In those days, when gun fighting had developed a technique of its own, no experienced law officer ever came closer than arm's length to the man he held covered, for more than one had been shot with his own weapon; some had even been forced to pull the trigger that fired it.

This could have happened to Tad Dolman now, for not only did Kennedy strike his pistol aside, but also with a continuation of the same lightninglike movement he flung his arm over Tad's in such a way as to lock it in an unbreakable hold. Dolman found himself unable either to point the weapon or fire it, for his assailant's right hand covered his and exerted a pressure which his closed fingers could not resist.

As the men struggled the muzzle of the weapon described an erratic pattern, and the cowboys retreated until Tom forced it lower, then squeezed Tad's fingers and fired it into the ground once, twice. He was master of the situation. He compelled the owner to burn his last cartridge.

Then with a sudden wrench he ripped the gun out of Dolman's hand and thrust him back.

"I could have made you gunshoot yourself," he cried harshly. "Next time I will."

Dolman said something in a strangled voice, then cringed as Tom menacingly raised the heavy weapon. Instead of striking with it the Texan waved him to be gone.

"Shove off," he cried savagely. "Quick! Before I bend this on you. Kennedy is the name. It's easy remembered."

The brothers were sobered. Together they lurched out into the glare of the white shell road.

Tom watched them go, then he picked up the dice and rolled them between his palms.

"Now let's get some action on that six," he said, and spilled them out upon the blanket.

The cowboys stared at him, but interest in the game languished.

What a rotten introduction to Florida, Tom reflected as he mounted the steps to the hotel a few minutes later. He couldn't have made a worse beginning, and all on account of his temper. Idiot! It wouldn't have hurt him to swallow Sonny's affront. Evidently these Dolmans were people of consequence. Presumably they were friends of his uncle, or possibly even business associates. Wasn't that his luck? Tom knew comparatively little about his uncle except that he was a sober, God-fearing man who stood well in the community. Hm-m! The sooner he got to Fort Myers and laid his side of the affair before Capt. Ben Noble the better.

He noticed that a trim little sailboat had been moored to the dock within the last half hour, and he assumed it must have come from Fort Myers, so he went in search of its owner. The skipper turned out to be a Cuban boy of about fourteen. His name was Miguel Rubio, and he was talkative.

Here was some good luck at last. Eagerly Tom tried to arrange passage with Skipper Miguel, but the boy shook his head. He was willing to oblige, but his sister, Luisa, would never consent. Nor would the other two women. Ofelia, the cousin's duenna, was an old crosspatch. She'd be scandalized. Her principal business in life was to prevent precisely such things as this. Spanish conventions were rigid, and Rita was not Americanized like Miguel and his sister.

Tom did not press the point. He engaged the boy in conversation of a general nature, he discussed the cattle business, he spoke of Texas and the Rio Grande, of the western ranges and the western herds.

MIGUEL was interested. His father owned several cattle ships like the one which was loading here. He, Miguel, intended to become a vaquero. Tom wondered if he had ever seen any real Mexican roping. It would be an accomplishment for Miguel to master it. How? That was simple. Tom would teach him.

When Senorita Rubio, her cousin, and the latter's companion came down to the dock Miguel shocked them into a stupefied silence by announcing that the sloop had another passenger. With a flourish he introduced his friend.

"I'm afraid that is—impossible," Miss Rubio said. "I mean—you see——" She avoided Tom's eyes. She was considerably embarrassed.

"O, you make me sick!" her brother broke in. "Mr. Kennedy is the nephew of Captain Noble."

"You are? Is that true?" the girl inquired eagerly.

"Yes'm."

"Why, then——" Again she hesitated and cast a troubled glance toward her two companions, whereupon the elder woman asked in Spanish:

"What are you talking about? Who is this man?" Briefly the facts were put before her, but she frowned, she shook her head until her long earrings danced.

But now Miss Mendez asserted herself for the first time. She silenced Ofelia, and she assured Luisa that she could do no less than assist the young gentleman to his destination. The young gentleman himself she quite ignored, but he thanked her silently, then lent Miguel a hand in stowing away the luggage and in raising the sail. Soon the sloop was under way.
